PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 111th CONGRESS, FIRST SESSION

SENATE—Wednesday, March 11, 2009

The Senate met at 11 a.m. and was called to order by the Honorable MICHAEL F. BENNET, a Senator from the State of Colorado.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Barry C. Black, offered the following prayer:

Let us pray.

O Lord, our Saviour, Your Word reminds us that to whom much is given, much will be required. Look with favor upon our lawmakers today. May they endeavor this and every day to be what You command. Give them ears to hear the inner voice of Your Holy Spirit, who searches the depths of their hearts, in order to lead them to Your truth. Imbue them with wisdom to face every challenge with grateful dependence upon You. Lord, let Your creative power touch them so that they will find solutions to the problems that beset our land. Free them from anxiety and fear, as they discover the independence which comes from trusting Your sovereignty.

We pray in the Redeemer's Name. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Honorable MICHAEL F. BENNET led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

APPOINTMENT OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please read a communication to the Senate from the President pro tempore (Mr. BYRD).

U.S. SENATE,
PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE,
Washington, DC, March 11, 2009.

To the Senate:

Under the provisions of rule I, paragraph 3, of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby appoint the Honorable MICHAEL F. BENNET, a Senator from the State of Colorado, to perform the duties of the Chair.

ROBERT C. BYRD,
President pro tempore.

Mr. BENNET thereupon assumed the chair as Acting President pro tempore.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. REID. Mr. President, following leader remarks, the Senate will proceed to a period of morning business until 11:30 a.m., with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each. The Republicans will control all the morning business time; that is, until 11:30. Following morning business, the Senate will proceed to executive session to consider the nomination of David Ogden, to be Deputy Attorney General. The time until 4:30 p.m. will be equally divided and controlled between the two leaders or their designees. Under an agreement reached last night, the vote on the confirmation of the Ogden nomination will occur at a time to be agreed upon tomorrow.

We are also working on a number of other nominations. We are going to spend this week on nominations—at least the next day or so. We are working on Thomas Perrelli to be Associate Attorney General and a number of others. We hope the Republicans will work with us on getting some of these nominations cleared. We are glad we got a couple of the Council of Economic Advisers done last night. I appreciate that good work. We will see what happens as the day proceeds.

This is a day with no votes. Certainly, I think we deserve that, based on what we have been through in the last several weeks. We are going to have our annual meeting with the Supreme Court Justices tonight. I remind all Senators of that. It is one of the rare times when the two branches of Government meet in a social setting where we will have the Supreme Court Justices and the Senators there in the Supreme Court. It has been very helpful in years past, and I am confident it will be a very nice event tonight.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

MORNING BUSINESS

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, there will now be a period of morning business until 11:30 a.m., with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each, with the time controlled by the Republicans.

The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak for 15 minutes.

PRESIDENT'S BUDGET

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I wish to address, again, the issue of the budget as proposed by the President of the United States, which is about to be taken up by the Budget Committees of the Senate and the House, and its implications for us as a nation because the implications of it are rather dramatic.

Now, I understand—and all of us on our side of the aisle understand—the last election was won by the President and his party, that the Democratic Party now controls both the House and the Senate and the administration and, therefore, they have absolute responsibility and the right to send us a budget which reflects their priorities. But I think we ought to have openness as to what the implications of that budget are relative to the future of our Nation, and they are dramatic.

As you look at the budget that has been proposed by this administration, it represents the largest expansion of Government in our history. It is a proposal which is essentially moving the Government into arenas with an aggressiveness that has never been seen before. It has in it the largest tax increase in history, as well as the fastest increase in the debt of our Nation in history.

The taxes go up by $1.4 trillion under this budget. Discretionary spending, which is spending that is not entitlement spending, goes up by $725 billion. Entitlement spending—which are things such as health care—goes up by $1.2 trillion. Yet there is no effort to save money in this budget to reduce the cost of spending and the cost of the Government. Instead, there is an expansion of the Government in this rather aggressive way.

The practical effect of this is that within 5 years the debt of the United States held by the public will double. That means in the first 5 years of this administration—presuming it is re-elected—they will have increased the debt more than the debt was increased since the founding of the Republic all the way through the Presidency of George W. Bush; they will have doubled the debt of the country.

In 10 years, because of this massive expansion in the size of the Government, they will triple the debt of the country.

What does “debt” mean? What does tripling the debt from $5.8 trillion to $15 trillion in 10 years mean? Well, basically, it means Americans coming into the workforce, Americans of the next generation, and the generation that follows that generation, will bear a burden from our generation—that the costs of today are being offloaded onto our children. The result of that is very simple. Our children and our grandchildren will have a country which will not give them as much opportunity as our country has given us because the burden from our generation will be weighing them down. The costs we have run up as a generation and passed on to them will set them behind the starting line. They will end up having less opportunity to buy a house, send their kids to college, live a quality of life we have lived because they will start out with a debt and a burden of a government which exceeds, in many instances, their ability to pay.

We are, under this proposal, heading the Nation into an untenable situation. In the area of deficits, which translates into debt—a deficit is what happens at the end of the year when your bills come in. If you have more bills than you have income, you end up with a deficit. That, then, becomes debt.

In the area of deficits, this budget takes us up dramatically in the next 2 years to an all-time high—a number that is hardly even contemplatable—a $1.7 trillion deficit this coming year. That is 28 percent of gross national product being spent by the Federal Government.

Now, I am willing to accept this number and not debate it because we are in a recession. It is necessary for the Government to step in and be aggressive, and the Government is the last source of liquidity. So one can argue that this number, although horribly large, is something we will simply have to live with. What one can't accept is what happens in the outyears—rather than bringing this deficit down to a reasonable number, a number which would be sustainable for our children to bear—because the President is proposing to expand the Government dramatically, its size and its cost. He is proposing deficits as far as the eye can see of 3 to 4 percent of gross domestic product.

What does that mean, 3 to 4 percent of gross domestic product? Well, historically, the deficit of the United States over the last 20 years has been 1.9 percent of gross domestic product. It means every year we are adding so much more debt than we can afford to our Nation that our children, again, will have less opportunity to succeed.

To put it in numbers terms, historically, the debt of the Federal Government has been about 40 percent of gross domestic product. In these outyears—ignoring this situation which is driven by the very severe recession—in these outyears, the public debt compared to the gross domestic product will stay at about 67 percent of gross domestic product, not 40 percent, which is sustainable but 67 percent. Those are numbers which, if we were in another part of the world, would be described as a Banana Republic because they are not sustainable and they drive us up to a cost which is not affordable. Those are the numbers which are driving the tripling of the national debt in 10 years.

One may say, well, where does that all come from, all this expansion of debt that is going to be put on our children's backs? It comes, quite simply, from spending. This administration has proposed the largest increase in the size of the Federal Government in our history, a massive shift to the left of the Government.

This is a chart which shows the historical spending of the Federal Government as a percent of GDP. Historically, this line right here reflects the mean, which has been somewhere around 20 percent of gross national product. That is a big chunk of the gross national product to be spending on the Federal Government, but that is what we have been doing. With the recession, obviously, it spikes up to 28 percent, but the point is that this administration doesn't plan to bring it down to historical levels; rather, they intend to keep spending at around 22 to 23 percent of gross national product. That is not affordable. It is not sustainable.

Why is it not sustainable? Because they don't increase taxes to that level. If they did, they would basically be creating a confiscatory situation for young people who are going into the workforce; rather, they simply run up debt to try to cover that difference at a catastrophically fast rate. We have to bring this spending line down if we are going to have a responsible budget.

Now, why does this go up so much? Why does this spending level go up so much? Well, it goes up so much because essentially they are planning to nationalize large segments of the economy; to have the Government take over the responsibility for large segments of the economy. The most specific area they do this in is in educational loans, where today we have what is known as the public-private balance, where some people get their loans directly from the Federal Government and some people get their loans from the private sector. They are going to end that policy, and they are going to have the Federal Government take over all lending. That is the most specific. However, if you look at their health care policy, they are moving in that direction there too. They have suggested in this budget that we should increase health care spending as a downpayment for $634 billion. That is a downpayment. The actual number of the increase is closer to $1.2 trillion in new health care spending.

What does that really mean? Well, essentially we as a government and we as a nation spend 17 percent of our gross national product on health care. That is much more than any other industrialized nation in the world spends. The next closest nation spends about 12 or 11 percent. So it isn't that we are not spending enough on health care in this country; it is that we don't use it very well—the money. We don't allocate it very well, and we don't use it efficiently.

What the administration suggests is that we should expand that spending in the area of health care by another $1.2 trillion, as they move the Federal Government into the role of basically deciding how health care should be managed in this country, in a much more direct way. That is one of the reasons this spending line stays up so high.

At the same time, they are suggesting massive new tax increases—massive new tax increases—the largest tax increases in history. Now, this has been covered with the argument that, oh, this is just going to tax the wealthy; the rich among us are going to be the ones who pay these taxes. Well, that is a canard. That is a straw dog. When you start increasing taxes at the rate they are proposed to be increased in this budget—$1.4 trillion of new taxes—you are going to hit everybody. You are going to hit everybody pretty hard.

There is in this budget proposal something that is euphemistically called a carbon tax. That is a term of art to cover up what it really is. It is a national sales tax on your electrical bill. It is estimated by MIT, a fairly objective institution, that this national sales tax on your electrical bill will raise around $300 billion a year. That is $300 billion a year that will be added to your electrical bill. The administration says it is $64 billion, but the same program they are talking about when looked at by an objective group at MIT, they concluded the real cost would be $300 billion. Whether it is $64 billion or $300 billion, it is a huge tax that is going to affect every American when they get their electrical bill.

In addition, they have this tax which they call the wealthy tax. People making over $250,000, they are essentially going to nationalize their income and say: If you make more than $250,000 we are going to raise your tax rate up to an effective rate of 42 percent. Well, I guess if you don't make that type of money, it probably doesn't bother you, but think about the people who are making $250,000. For the most part, they are small business people. They run a restaurant. They run a small software company. They run a small manufacturing firm. They are the people who create jobs in this country. Most small businesses are sole proprietorships or subchapter S corporations. The money they make is taxed to the individual who runs the small company. Whether it is a restaurant or a software company or a small manufacturer, it is taxed to them personally.

What do they do with that money? They take it and they invest it in their small business. Where are jobs created in this Nation? They are created by small business. This is a tax on small business. Then, of course, they raise the capital gains rates. They raise the dividend rates. Aren't we in a recession? Why would you raise taxes on the productive side of the economy when you are in a recession? Is that constructive to getting out of the recession? No. In fact, the stock markets are saying exactly that. They are looking at this budget and saying: Wow, this is the largest increase in the Government ever proposed, and it is going to be borne by the people who are the entrepreneurs and the small business people.

So do we really want to invest in America? Do we really want to put our money into the effort to try to make this country grow? Second thoughts. That is what is happening in the stock market. It is not constructive to economic growth.

Tax policy has to be constructed in a way that creates an incentive for people to go out and take risks. It creates an incentive for people to be willing to take their money and invest in something that is going to create jobs. When it is said to someone we are going to take 40 cents of the next dollar they make and throw State and local taxes on top of that—for example, in New York, it would amount to almost 60 percent of the next dollar they make—people start to think: Well, why should I invest in something that is a taxable event? Let me invest in something that is not a taxable event.

So instead of getting an efficient use of capital, people are running around investing their money to try to avoid taxes. As a result, we don't create more jobs; we just create more tax attorneys. Well, maybe that is jobs. I used to be a tax attorney, so I shouldn't pick on tax attorneys, but as a practical matter, it is not an efficient way to use capital.

We saw over the last 7 years prior to this recession—and granted, this recession has created an aberration for everything that is economic—we had a tax policy which saw the largest increase in revenues for 4 straight years that this country has ever experienced. We saw a tax policy which basically stood on its head the idea that if we maintain a low tax burden in capital gains, we would collect less taxes. In fact, it did just the opposite. We collected much more taxes from capital gains. In fact, over the last 7 years, because of the tax policy that was in place, the Tax Code became more progressive. The top 20 percent of income producers in this country ended up paying 85.7 percent of the income taxes in the country. That was compared with the Clinton years when the top 20 percent of income producers in this country paid 82 percent of the taxes.

At the same time, the bottom 40 percent of people receiving income in this country ended up getting twice as much back because they don't pay income taxes and they get a rebate in many instances through the EITC. They ended up getting twice as much back than during the Clinton years. So you actually had in the last 7 years a tax policy that encouraged growth, encouraged entrepreneurship, encouraged job creation, which was generating more revenues to the Federal Treasury, and yet being more progressive than during the period of the Clinton years.

What the administration has suggested is, we should not only go back to the Clinton years, we should do even more by taking an effective rate that will even go above the rate of the Clinton years to 42 percent, 41 percent. It makes no sense, especially in a time of recession, to basically have that sort of attack on small business and job producers in our Nation.

So this budget is a statement of policy which is pretty definitive, and I don't believe it is very constructive. It is a statement of policy which says we are going to radically expand the spending in this country. We are going to radically expand the size of Government in this country. We are going to end up after 5 years with Government we can't afford, that is spending more than at any time in our history, and that is running up deficits which are going to compound the problems for our children. It is not constructive, in my opinion. I think we can do a lot better, and we can do it this year rather than wait.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

THE ECONOMY

Mr. ISAKSON. Mr. President, first of all, I wish to commend the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire. As a Member of the Senate, there are many people I look to for wisdom and knowledge, and JUDD GREGG is one of them. In my hometown of Atlanta, GA, there is another person I look to for wisdom and knowledge, and that is my barber, Tommy.

I got a haircut, as you can probably tell, on Saturday. I was at Tommy's Barbershop on West Paces Ferry Road and Northside Drive in Atlanta. While in that barbershop, I talked to a real estate broker, a stock broker, a pension fund manager, and a good old, average, everyday American retiree trying to figure out how he is going to make it on what the markets have done to him in the last year or so.

It is ironic—and I had no plan to make this speech behind JUDD GREGG—but they talked to me about only two things. The first one was debt because last Saturday was just a week after the announcement of a $3.6 trillion budget, a 20-percent increase; an increase in taxes and concern because at a time of economic peril America is bearing more and more and more.

The other thing is what I rise to talk about today. We have looked into the mirror to look for the enemy, but we have avoided looking at ourselves. For a second I wish to talk through regulatory policy. I am talking about both administrations: the end of the Bush administration and the beginning of the Obama administration. I think we have been missing the mark. I wish to share some real-life stories about real-life Georgians that indicate where mark-to-market accounting is going in the United States of America, the businesses of the United States of America, and the people of the United States of America.

Some of my colleagues have watched television and watched the AFLAC duck commercials. I think they are the best commercials on television. I also think AFLAC is one of the finest companies in the United States of America. When we consider AFLAC and Dan Amos, the CEO of AFLAC, he put in stockholder consent and stockholder advice on his compensation and repealed his own golden parachute. All of those things we all complain about CEOs doing, he did it right. But stock has plummeted in AFLAC. Do you know why? Because of the FASB rules on mark to market, his core asset base, which is long-term assets, held to maturity, to protect against insurance commitments AFLAC has made, are now being marked to market, meaning assets worth something are being marked worth nothing.

So the stock has gone down because the evaluators say the footings on the asset side of the ledger sheet aren't looking as good because of the mark to market. Let me explain the best I can what that really means.

Mortgage-backed securities are one investment a lot of life companies and other industries bought to put on their asset sheet to offset obligations they have off into the future because those securities have maturities corresponding with the maturities of the loans embedded within them of anywhere from 7 to 30 years. When the subprime market started failing last year, Merrill Lynch, in a crisis mode last July, sold its subprime securities to get rid of them; it financed the sale and sold them for 22 cents on the dollar. Under the FASB rules, assets worth 70 or 80 or 90 percent were marked down to 22 percent. That lowered the asset side of the ledger and made the stability of the company look—and I underline that word “look”—worse, when, in fact, those assets, held to maturity, would not be anywhere near the value.

Here is a good example of that: Let's just say I bought a mortgage-backed security, a subprime mortgage-backed security, backed 100 percent by 30-year mortgage loans made in the State of Nevada—every one a subprime loan. Nevada has the highest foreclosure rate of any State on subprime paper. Seventy percent of those loans in Nevada today are paying right on time; 30 percent are in default. Yet, because of mark to market, that security is not marked at 70 percent, which it is performing at, but at zero because at a given point in time today you can't sell it. It is being held by the institution as an offsetting asset to a liability over a term of maturity.

At Tommy's Barber Shop, I ran into a pension fund man and an insurance guy, and they said: Why in the world don't we look for accounting on mark to market like we looked at the pension crisis in 2004?

We have short memories in the Senate. In 2004, because of the declining stock market in 2001 and 2002, there were a number of defined benefit plans in America that underfunded. Because of the accounting rules that were being enforced at the time, those institutions were asked to write checks to fully fund the pension funds when, in fact, not everybody is going to retire the same day but over a number of years.

What did we do in the Congress? With Senators KENNEDY, ENZI, myself, and others, we passed the Pension Protection and Reform Act. We said: If your pension fund's corpus becomes underfunded, if you cannot meet your obligation, we will let you smooth that investment, or amortize it, over 4 to 6 years. In the case of Delta, which was in trouble at the time, they had a $900 million shortfall in their pension fund. But because of smoothing, instead of having to put $900 million in in 1 year, they did $150 million over 6 years. Delta is the most profitable airline in the United States today. They would not exist today had it not been for the smoothing.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The time for morning business has expired.

Mr. ISAKSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for another minute.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ISAKSON. Mr. President, in conclusion, I hope everyone will visit their “Tommy's Barber Shop” and look at what we are doing that may have the unintended consequences of exacerbating the economic problem for the average American today and for Tommy the barber.

I yield the floor.

RECOGNITION OF THE MINORITY LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Republican leader is recognized.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I am going to proceed on my leader time.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Republican leader is recognized.

THE BUDGET

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, we have seen the numbers. Unemployment is at a 25-year high. Millions are worried about holding on to their jobs and their homes. With every passing day, Americans are waiting for the administration to offer its plan to fix the banking crisis that continues to paralyze our economy. Every day, it seems, the administration officials are unveiling one new plan after another on everything from education to health care. Meanwhile, the details of a banking plan to address our main problem have yet to emerge.

We need reforms in health care and education and in many other areas. But Americans want the administration to fix the economy first. Unfortunately, the budget avoids the issue entirely. It simply assumes this enormously complex problem will be fixed, and then it proposes massive taxes, spending, and borrowing to finance a massive expansion of Government. It assumes the best of times, and, as millions of Americans will attest, these are not the best of times.

Over the next few weeks, the Senate will debate the details of this budget. One thing is already certain: It spends too much, it taxes too much, and it borrows too much. This budget would be a stretch in boom times. In a time of hardship and uncertainty, it is exactly the wrong approach. The budget's $3.6 trillion price tag comes on top of a housing plan that went into effect last week that could cost a quarter of a trillion dollars, a financial bailout that could cost another $1 trillion to $2 trillion, and a stimulus bill that will cost, with interest, more than a trillion dollars. Some are now talking about yet another stimulus. The national debt is more than $10 trillion, and yesterday we passed a $410 billion Government spending bill that represented an increase in Government spending over last year of twice the rate of inflation. In just 50 days, Congress has voted to spend about $1.2 trillion between the stimulus and the omnibus. To put that into perspective, that is about $24 billion a day or about $1 billion an hour—most of it, of course, borrowed. There is simply no question that Government spending has spun out of control.

Given all this spending and debt, the cost of the budget might not seem like much to some people. But this is precisely the problem. To most people, it seems that lawmakers in Washington have lost the perspective of the taxpayer. It is long past time we started to think about the long-term sustainability of our economy, about creating jobs and opportunity for future generations. That will require hard choices. The omnibus bill avoided every one, and, unfortunately, so does the budget.

Stuart Taylor of the National Journal recently praised the President in two consecutive columns. Yet he was shocked by the President's budget. Here is what Taylor said about the budget:

“... Not to deny that the liberal wish list in Obama's staggering $3.6 trillion budget would be wonderful if we had limitless resources,” Mr. Taylor wrote. “But in the real world, it could put vast areas of the economy under permanent government mismanagement, kill millions of jobs, drive investors and employers overseas, and bankrupt the nation.”

There is no question, in the midst of an economic crisis, this budget simply spends far too much. In order to pay for all this spending, the budget anticipates a number of rosy scenarios. It doesn't explain how the economic recovery will come about, it simply assumes that it will. It projects sustained growth beginning this year and continuing to grow 3.2 percent in 2010.

Let me say that again. It projects sustained growth beginning this year and continuing to grow 3.2 percent in 2010, 4 percent in 2011, and 4.6 percent in 2012. While we all hope to soon return to this growth, we cannot promise the growth we hope to have, especially when this growth is far from likely, particularly given a host of new policy proposals in the budget itself that are certain to tamp down growth even more. There is simply no question that this budget spends too much.

But even if this growth does occur, it would not be enough to support the spending proposals. That is why the budget calls for a massive tax hike. In fact, this budget calls for the largest tax increase in history, including a new energy tax that will be charged to every single American who turns on a light switch, drives a car, or buys groceries. Unless you are living in a cave, this new energy tax will hit you like a hammer.

During the campaign, the President said his plan for an energy tax will "cause utility rates to skyrocket." He was right. The new energy tax will cost every American household. I can't imagine how increasing the average American's annual tax bill will lift us out of the worst recession in decades.

There is more. A new tax related to charitable giving would punish the very organizations Americans depend on more and more during times of distress. One study suggests that the President's new tax on charitable giving could cost U.S. charities and educational institutions up to $9 billion a year—money that will presumably be redirected to the 250,000 new Government workers the budget is expected to create. There is no question that this budget taxes too much.

Remarkably, the largest tax increase in history and a new energy tax still aren't enough to pay for all the programs this budget creates. To pay for everything else, we will have to borrow—borrow a lot. This budget calls for the highest level of borrowing ever.

Now, if there is one thing Americans have learned the hard way over the past several months, it is that spending more than you can afford has serious, sometimes tragic, consequences. Yet Government doesn't seem ready to face that reality—not when it is spending other people's money and not when it is borrowing from others to fund its policy dreams.

It is not fair to load future generations with trillions and trillions of dollars in debt at a moment when the economy is contracting, millions are losing jobs, and millions more are worried about losing homes. It is time the Government realized that it is a steward of the people's money, not the other way around, and that it has a responsibility not only to use tax dollars wisely but to make sure the institutions of Government are sustainable for generations to come.

I don't know anybody who would borrow money from people thousands of miles away for things they don't even need. Yet this is precisely what our Government is doing every single day by asking countries such as Saudi Arabia, Japan, and China to finance a colossal budget in the midst of an economic crisis.

The administration has said it intends to be bold, and I have no doubt this budget reflects their honest attempt to implement what they believe to be the best prescription for success. We appreciate that effort. We simply see it differently. A $3.6 trillion budget that spends too much, taxes too much, and borrows too much in a time of economic hardship may be bold, but the question is, Is it wise? Most of the people who have taken the time to study this budget have concluded it is not wise. Republicans will spend the next few weeks explaining why to the American people.

Americans want serious reforms. But in the midst of a deepening recession, they are looking at all this spending, taxing, and borrowing, and they are wondering whether, for the first time in our Nation's history, we are actually giving up on the notion that if we work hard, our children will live better lives and have greater opportunities than ourselves.

Americans are looking at this spending, taxing, and borrowing, and they are wondering whether we are reversing the order—whether we are beginning to say with our actions that we want everything now—and putting off the hard choices, once again, for future generations to make. That would be a most important question in this upcoming budget debate.

It is important, once again, to sum up the core problem with the budget we will be voting on in a few weeks: It spends too much, taxes too much, and it borrows too much.

POLITICAL EXPRESSION WITHOUT FEAR

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I wish to address the so-called card check legislation which was introduced in both the House and Senate yesterday.

As Americans, we expect to be able to vote on everything from high school class president to President of the United States in private. Workers expect the same right in union elections. This legislation goes against that fundamental right of political expression without fear of coercion.

We have had the secret ballot in this country for 100 years—130 years, at least—and it was common even before then. We have said to other countries around the world: If you want to have a democracy, you have to have a secret ballot. And yet this measure, to put it simply, would be better called the "Employee No Choice Act." It is totally undemocratic. To approve it would be to subvert the right to bargain freely over working terms and conditions. It would strip members of a newly organized union of their right to accept or reject a contract.

In addition, this bill ushers in a new scheme of penalties which are antiworker and which apply only to employers and not to unions. Even though Americans have regarded secret ballot elections as a fundamental right—as I indicated earlier, for more than a century—some Democrats seem determined to strip that right away from American workers.

If this were not bad enough, a study released last week by economist Dr. Anne Layne-Farrar showed that if enacted, card check legislation could cost 600,000 American jobs—600,000 American jobs potentially lost. At a time when all of us are looking to stimulate the economy and put Americans back to work, we are threatening to undermine those efforts with this job-killing bill.

Republicans will oppose any legislation which attempts to undermine job creation, and we will oppose the effort to take away a worker's right to a secret ballot.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

NOMINATION OF DAVID W. OGDEN TO BE DEPUTY ATTORNEY GENERAL

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CASEY). Under the previous order, the Senate will proceed to executive session to consider the following nomination, which the clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read the nomination of David W. Ogden, of Virginia, to be Deputy Attorney General.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the time until 4:30 p.m. will be equally divided and controlled between the leaders or their designees.

The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I am opening this debate in my capacity not only as a Senator from Vermont but as chairman of the Judiciary Committee.

We are here today to consider President Obama's nomination of David Ogden to be Deputy Attorney General, the number two position at the Department of Justice. This is a picture, incidentally, of David Ogden. I had hoped we could vote on this nomination soon—although apparently, because of objections on the other side, we will not be able to vote until tomorrow. This is unfortunate. Every day we delay the appointment of the Deputy Attorney General is a day we are not enhancing the security of the United States.

In this case, we have a nominee who I had hoped to have confirmed weeks ago. Mr. Ogden is a highly qualified nominee who has chosen to leave a very successful career in private practice—one I might say parenthetically pays considerably more than the Department of Justice does—to return to the Department, where he served with great distinction. His path in many ways reflects that of the Attorney General, Eric Holder, who, of course, also was a highly successful and respected partner in one of the major law firms in Washington. And he left to become Attorney General of the United States at the request of President Obama to serve his Nation. Mr. Ogden is doing the same thing.

Interestingly enough, once Mr. Ogden's nomination was announced, the letters of support started to come in from leading law enforcement organizations across the country. Let me put a few of these up on this chart. As you can see, Mr. Ogden's nomination received support from leading law enforcement organizations; children's advocates; civil rights organizations; and former Government officials from both Republican and Democratic administrations.

Indeed, Larry Thompson, the former Deputy Attorney General under President George W. Bush, a highly respected former public official, has endorsed David Ogden to be Deputy Attorney General.

The Boys and Girls Clubs of America, an organization I have spent a lot of time with and one I highly respect. This organization provides alternative programs and a great mentoring system for children in many cities to keep them out of trouble. And this fine organization has endorsed David Ogden.

A dozen retired military officers who serve as Judge Advocates General have endorsed Mr. Ogden's nomination.

The Fraternal Order of Police and the Federal Law Enforcement Officers Association, two major law enforcement organizations, have endorsed him.

The Major Cities Chiefs Association have endorsed him.

The National Center for Missing and Exploited Children, another organization I have worked a great deal with, and one that has done such wonderful things to help in the case of missing and exploited children, has also endorsed him.

The National Association of Police Organizations has endorsed David Ogden.

The National District Attorneys Association has endorsed him, which I was particularly pleased to see. I once served as vice president of the National District Attorneys Association. As an aside, I should note that I gave up the honor and glory of becoming president of the National District Attorneys Association for the anonymity of the Senate.

The National Narcotics Officers' Associations' Coalition has endorsed David Ogden.

The National Sheriffs' Association has endorsed David Ogden.

The Police Executive Research Forum has endorsed David Ogden.

The National Center for Victims of Crime has endorsed David Ogden.

Why have they endorsed him? Because he is an immensely qualified nominee, and he has the obvious priorities that we want in a Deputy Attorney General. His priorities will be the safety and security of the American people and to reinvigorate the traditional work of the Justice Department in protecting the rights of all Americans. That is why he will be a critical asset to the Attorney General. He will help us remember it is the Deputy Attorney General of the United States, and it is the Department of Justice for all Americans.

With all of these endorsements, including all of the major law enforcement groups endorsing him, and all the endorsements from both Republicans and Democrats, what is astonishing for all these law enforcement organizations wanting him there is that Republicans threatened to filibuster this nomination. They refused to agree to this debate and a vote on the nomination, and they required the majority leader to file a cloture motion, which he did on Monday. For more than a week we were told that Republicans would not agree to a debate and vote and would insist on filibustering this nomination.

It is amazing. I don't know if Republicans are aware of what is going on in this country—the rising crime rates which began rising in the last year or so and the critical nature working families are facing. And yet they want to filibuster a nominee, one of the best I have seen for this position in my 35 years in the Senate.

I noted that development and the threat of a filibuster at a Judiciary Committee business meeting last Thursday, after a week of fruitless efforts to try to move this nomination forward by agreement and obviate the need for a filibuster. I noted my disappointment that, despite the bipartisan majority vote in favor of the nomination by Republicans and Democrats on the committee, despite the support from law enforcement groups, despite the support from children's advocates, and despite the support from former Government officials for Republican and Democratic administrations, we have been stalled in our ability to move forward to consider this nomination. And, of course, the Justice Department, which is there to represent all Americans—Republicans and Democrats, Independents, and everybody—is left without a deputy for another week.

Quite frankly, I found the news of an imminent Republican filibuster incomprehensible. I could not think of any precedent for this during my 35 years in the Senate. A bipartisan majority—

14 to 5—voted to report this nomination from the Judiciary Committee to the Senate. The ranking Republican member of the committee, Senator SPECTER, voted to support this nomination. The assistant Senate Republican leader, Senator KYL, and the senior Senator from South Carolina, Mr. GRAHAM, voted in favor of Mr. Ogden. And yet, in spite of this bipartisan support, someone or a group of Senators on the Republican side of the aisle were intent on filibustering this nominee to stop us from having a Deputy Attorney General who might actually be there to help fight crime in America.

Why there was this attempt of filibustering President Obama's nomination for Deputy Attorney General of the United States, and depriving law enforcement in this country of his support, I cannot not understand.

Two weeks ago, we debated and voted on the nomination in the Judiciary Committee. Those who opposed the nomination had the opportunity to explain their negative vote. I urge all Senators to reject these false and scurrilous attacks that have been made against Mr. Ogden. I also held out hope that they would reject applying an obvious double standard when it comes to President Obama's nominees. Remember, these are the same people who voted unanimously for one of the worst attorneys general in this Nation's history, former Attorney General Gonzales.

I am glad some semblance of common sense has finally prevailed on the Republican side of the aisle. I guess somebody looked at the facts and said: "This makes absolutely no sense whatsoever, and there is no way of justifying this to Americans, other than to the most partisan of Americans," and they reversed their position. They now say they will not filibuster this nomination.

It was disturbing to see the President's nomination of Mr. Ogden to this critical national security post being held up this long by Senate Republicans apparently on some kind of a partisan whim.

I voted for all four of the nominees that the Senate confirmed and President Bush nominated to serve as the Deputy Attorney General during the course of his Presidency. In fact, each of the four was confirmed by voice vote. Not a single Democratic Senator voted against them and some may not have been the people we would have chosen had it been a Democratic President. But we respected the fact the American people elected a Republican President and he deserved a certain amount of leeway in picking his nominees.

Of course, we heard the same preaching from the Republican side. Suddenly their position has now changed since the American people, by a landslide, elected a Democratic President. What Republicans are essentially saying is President Obama does not get the same kind of credit that President Bush did. That amounts to a double standard, especially after every Republican Senator supported each of President Bush's nominees, as they did the nomination of Alberto Gonzales.

Today, however, there will be no more secret and anonymous Republican holds. Any effort to oppose the President's nominees—executive or judicial—will have to withstand public scrutiny. There can be no more anonymous holds. We can turn at last to consideration of President Obama's nomination of David Ogden to be Deputy Attorney General, the No. 2 position at the Department.

Let me tell you a little bit about David Ogden. As a former high-ranking official at both the Defense Department and the Justice Department, he is the kind of serious lawyer and experienced Government servant who understands the special role the Department of Justice must fulfill in our democracy. It is no surprise that his nomination has received strong support from leading law enforcement organizations, children's advocates, civil rights organizations, and former Government officials from Republican and Democratic administrations.

The confirmation of Mr. Ogden to this critical national security post should not be further delayed. The Deputy Attorney General is too important a position to be made into a partisan talking point for special interest politics.

Now, I understand some people want to do fundraising as they talk about their ability to block nominations of President Obama. I wonder if they know how critical the situation is in this country. This is not the time for partisan political games. This is a time where all of us have a stake in the country getting back on track and we ought to be working to do that. Stop the partisan games. The Deputy Attorney General is needed to manage the Justice Department with its many divisions, sections, and offices and tens of thousands of employees. As Deputy Attorney General, Mr. Ogden would be responsible for the day-to-day management of the Justice Department, including the Department's critical role of keeping our Nation safe from the threat of terrorism.

I want to thank Mark Filip, the most recent Deputy Attorney General and a Republican. Judge Filip came from Chicago last year motivated by public service. He had a lifetime appointment as a Federal judge where he served with distinction as a conservative Republican. He gave up his lifetime appointment after the scandals of the Gonzalez Justice Department, where not only did the Attorney General resign but virtually everybody at the top echelon of the Department of Justice resigned because of the outrageous scandals at that time. I urged his fast and complete confirmation and he was confirmed just over one year ago, unanimously, by voice vote.

Now, are Judge Filip and I different politically? Yes, of course we are. We differ in many areas. Yet, I saw a man dedicated to public service. He gave up his dream of a lifetime position on the Federal bench. He saw the scandals of the former Attorney General and all the people who had to be replaced by President Bush because of the scandalous conduct, and he came in for the good of the country to help right it. I admire him for that. I was chairman of the committee that unanimously endorsed his nomination. As chairman of the committee, I came to the floor of the Senate and urged his support.

On February 4, after 11 months of dedicated and commendable service to us all he left the Justice Department. It is time, over a month later, that his replacement be confirmed by the Senate.

The Senate's quick consideration of Mr. Filip's nomination was reflective of how Senate Democrats approached the confirmations of nominees for this critical position. President Bush's first nominee to serve as Deputy Attorney General, Larry Thompson, received similar treatment. At the beginning of a new President's term, it is common practice to expedite consideration of Cabinet and high level nominees. I remember that nomination very well. I was the ranking Democrat on the committee at that time. His hearing was just 2 weeks after his nomination. He was reported by the Judiciary Committee unanimously. Every Democratic Senator voted in favor of reporting his nomination. And he was confirmed that same day by voice vote by the Senate. No shenanigans. No partisanship. No posturing for special interests.

His replacement was James Comey. He, like Mr. Ogden, was a veteran of the Department of Justice. The Democratic Senators in the Senate minority did not filibuster, obstruct or delay that nomination. We knew how important it was. We cooperated in a hearing less than 2 weeks after he was nominated. He was reported from the committee unanimously in a 19-0 vote, and he was confirmed by the Senate in voice vote.

Even when President Bush nominated a more contentious choice, a nominee with a partisan political background, Senate Democrats did not filibuster. Paul McNulty was confirmed to serve as the Deputy Attorney General in 2006 in a voice vote by the Senate. While there were concerns, there was no filibuster. As it turned out, Mr. McNulty resigned in the wake of the U.S. attorney firing scandal, along with Attorney General Gonzales and so many others in leadership positions at the Department of Justice.

I voted for all four of the nominees that the Senate confirmed and President Bush appointed to serve as the Deputy Attorney General during the course of his presidency. In fact, each of the four was confirmed by voice vote. Not a single Democratic Senator voted against them. And, of course, every Republican Senator supported each of those nominees as they did the nomination of Alberto Gonzales and the other nominations of President Bush to high ranking positions at the Justice Department.

I bring up this history to say let us stop playing partisan games. Mr. Ogden's nomination to be Deputy Attorney General, a major law enforcement position, is supported by Republicans and Democrats, at a time when we need the best in our law enforcement in this country.

The Justice Department is without a confirmed deputy at a time when we face great threats and challenges. Indeed, one of the recommendations of the bipartisan 9/11 Commission was that after Presidential transitions, nominees for national security appointments, such as Mr. Ogden, be accelerated. In particular, the 9/11 Commission recommended:

A president-elect should submit the nominations of the entire new national security team, through the level of undersecretary of cabinet departments, not later than January 20.

The commission also recommended that the Senate:

should adopt special rules requiring hearings and votes to confirm or reject national security nominees within 30 days of their submission.

President Obama did his part when he designated Mr. Ogden to be the Deputy Attorney General on January 5, more than 2 months ago. We now are at March 11. It is time for the Senate to act. Stop the partisan games, stop the holding up, stop the holds and the threats of filibusters and all the rest. The problems and threats confronting the country are too serious to continue to delay and to play partisan games, no matter which fundraising letter somebody wants to send out. Forget the fundraising letters for a moment; let us deal with the needs of our Nation.

Scurrilous attacks against Mr. Ogden have been launched by some on the extreme right. David Ogden is a good lawyer and a good man. He is a husband and a father. The chants that David Ogden is somehow a pedophile and a pornographer are not only false, they are so wrong. Senators know better than that. Forget the fundraising letters, let us talk about a decent family man, an exceptional lawyer. Let us talk about somebody who answered every question at his confirmation hearing, not only about those he represented legally but about his personal views.

I questioned Mr. Ogden at his hearing and he gave his commitment to vigorously enforce Federal law, regardless of the positions he may have taken on behalf of his clients in private practice. I asked him if he had the right experience to be Deputy Attorney General and he pointed out his extensive experience managing criminal matters at the Department and in private practice. I asked him to thoroughly review the practice of prosecutors investigating and filing law suits on the eve of elections, and he said he would. I asked him to work with me on a mortgage and financial fraud law, and he was agreeable. I asked about his experience in the type of national security matters that have become more than ever before central to the mission of the Justice Department, and he highlighted his extensive national security experience and lessons he learned as General Counsel for the Department of Defense. On all these matters he was candid and reassuring.

That is why Mr. Ogden's nomination has received dozens of letters of support, including strong endorsements from Republican and Democratic former public officials and high-ranking veterans of the Justice Department, from the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children, the Boys and Girls Clubs of America, and from nearly every major law enforcement organization.

As one who began his public career in law enforcement, I would not stand here and endorse somebody for such a major law enforcement position if I did not feel it was a person who should do this. Larry Thompson, a former Deputy Attorney General himself, and somebody I worked with on law enforcement matters when he was here as a Republican nominee, described Mr. Ogden as

A brilliant and thoughtful lawyer who has the complete confidence and respect of career attorneys at Main Justice. David will be a superb Deputy Attorney General.

Chuck Canterbury, who is the national president of the Fraternal Order of Police, wrote that Mr. Ogden ... possesses the leadership and experience the Justice Department will need to meet the challenges which lay before us.

A dozen retired military officers who served as judge advocates general have endorsed Mr. Ogden's nomination, calling him

... a person of wisdom, fairness, and integrity, a public servant vigilant to protect the national security of the United States, and a civilian official who values the perspective of uniformed lawyers in matters within their particular expertise.

I know something about law enforcement, not only from my past career but the 35 years I have served in this body, most of that time on the Senate Judiciary Committee dealing with law enforcement matters. I know that David Ogden is an immensely qualified nominee whose priorities would be the safety and security of the American people, but also to reinvigorate the traditional work of the Justice Department in protecting the rights of Americans—all Americans. We do not want to go back to the scandalous time of a former Attorney General, where the rights of only certain Americans were protected, and political and partisan decisions were made about whose rights would be protected. This is the Department of Justice. It is the Deputy Attorney General of the United States. It is not the Deputy Attorney General of the Republican Party or the Democratic Party, but the Deputy Attorney General for all of us. That is why he is going to be a critical asset to the Attorney General.

I urge all Senators to support him. Give the same kind of support to Mr. Ogden as Democrats did to Judge Filip when he came in to try to clean up the mess created by a former Attorney General.

One of the joys of being chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee are the people I get to serve with. Over the years, I have served with numerous Senators, including the father of one of our current Senators. For a lawyer, it is an intellectually exhilarating committee to serve on, but again because of some of the great people who serve here.

The Senator from Delaware is the newest member of the committee because the former Senator from Delaware—whom I served with for well over 30 years on that committee. Part of the time he was chairman and part of the time he was ranking member; part of the time I was chairman and part of the time he was ranking member—has left the Senate to be involved in the Senate now only as the presiding officer, because he went on to become Vice President of the United States. His replacement, Senator KAUFMAN of Delaware, moved into that seat on the Senate Judiciary Committee as though he had served there for all those decades. In a way, he did, as a key person working for former Senator BIDEN.

I have often joked that Senators are merely constitutional impediments or constitutional necessities to the staff, who do all the work. Now we have somebody who has both the expertise of having been one of the finest staff people I have ever served with and now one of the best Senators I have served with, and a great addition to the Senate Judiciary Committee.

So as not to embarrass him further, I will yield to the distinguished Senator from Delaware.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. KAUFMAN. Mr. President, people have asked me what it is like to be a Senator as opposed to being chief of staff, and one of the great things is getting to work with a chairman such as Chairman LEAHY on the Judiciary Committee; someone who knows what he is about, knows the Senate, and is a former prosecutor. We are truly fortunate to have him as chair and also to have a truly great staff on the Senate Judiciary Committee, led by Bruce Cohen. So it is a great and a genuine pleasure. Pleasure is used a lot of times on the floor. Sometimes it is not too pleasurable. But this is truly pleasurable, to work with the chairman and the staff of the Judiciary Committee, but especially the chairman. So I thank the chairman for his kind remarks.

I do agree with so much of what he has to say about David Ogden for Deputy Attorney General. I, along with him, am deeply disappointed that the nomination of David Ogden for Deputy Attorney General has been so needlessly delayed. This has real consequences for the administration of law in our country during a challenging time. Depriving the Department of Justice of senior leadership at this critical juncture is much more than unfortunate.

As we saw from his confirmation hearings in the Judiciary Committee more than a month ago, David Ogden has excellent academic credentials and broad experience in law and government. He fully understands the special role of the Department of Justice and is deeply committed to the rule of law. He has broad support from lawyers of all political and judicial philosophies.

President Obama designated Mr. Ogden be Deputy Attorney General on January 5, which seems like an eternity ago—over 2 months ago. We held his confirmation hearing in the Judiciary Committee over a month ago and, on February 26, after thorough consideration, a bipartisan majority of the committee, 14 to 5, voted to report his nomination. The ranking member, the Senate minority whip and the well-respected senior Senator from South Carolina, voted in favor of his nomination.

Despite that bipartisan vote and broad support from law enforcement groups, children's advocates, civil rights organizations, former Democratic and Republican officials, his nomination has faced unwarranted delay. This delay is unfortunate in itself, particularly when the nominee has impeccable credentials and broad support. However, as important, this delay has come at a critical time for the Department of Justice. Without a Deputy Attorney General, the Department is forced to deal with some of the most important issues facing this Nation with one hand tied behind its back.

The Deputy Attorney General holds the No. 2 position at the Department of Justice and, as we all know, is responsible for the day-to-day management of the Department, including critical national security responsibilities. The Deputy Attorney General, for example, signs FISA applications. These are essential to ensuring that our intelligence services get the information they need to protect us from terrorism and other national security threats. The Deputy Attorney General will also play an important role in overseeing the Guantanamo Bay detainee review, to make sure we assess each of the remaining detainees and make sure they are safely and appropriately transferred—I know an issue that everyone in this body shares a concern about.

One of the recommendations of the bipartisan 9/11 Commission was that after Presidential transitions, nominations for national security appointments, such as Mr. Ogden's, be accelerated. The delay we are seeing now, to put it mildly, is not helping those who are sworn to protect our country. The Deputy Attorney General manages the criminal division of the FBI, which helps keep Americans safe, not only from violent crime but also from financial fraud. In the aftermath of the financial fraud meltdown that has thrown the American economy into a serious recession, we must ensure that lawbreakers will be identified and prosecuted for financial fraud. Punishing complex financial crimes and deterring future fraud are vital in restoring confidence in our decimated financial markets. How can people be expected to go back in the market again when they do not know or cannot have confidence that the people who perpetrated these crimes are not still there but are in jail? This is important. As we know in dealing with crime, the sooner you deal with it after the crime happens the better your chance of catching the people involved. Getting the Deputy Attorney General involved as soon as possible is essential for our financial well-being.

The Deputy Attorney General also oversees efforts to fight waste and corruption in Federal programs by means of the False Claims Act. As we expend vast sums in two wars and work to stimulate the economic recovery, we must do everything we can to make sure the taxpayer dollars are well spent. Along the same line, the Deputy Attorney General oversees the distribution of billions of dollars in economic recovery funds in support of critical State and local law enforcement initiatives. Everyone agrees that to fulfill the promise of the economic recovery package, we need to get the funds out the door quickly. Again, depriving the Department of Justice of senior leadership at this critical time is bad policy.

The American people need a Deputy Attorney General in place now, to meet all these critical efforts. The problems and threats confronting the country are too serious to delay.

We know David Ogden is extraordinarily well qualified. We know the Judiciary Committee fully vetted his background, experience and judgment and reported out his nomination with a bipartisan majority. We know the Attorney General needs his second in command as well as other members of his leadership team in place and working as soon as possible. We know further delay in this crucial nomination is inexcusable.

I hope on this nomination, and going forward, we do better.

I yield the floor, suggest the absence of a quorum, and ask the time be charged equally.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. HAGAN). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SPECTER. Madam President, at the outset in addressing the Chair, may I note that it is my distinguished colleague, Senator CASEY from Pennsylvania. Nice to see you acting as Vice President, Senator CASEY.

May I just say that in the 2 years plus that you have been here, I have admired your work and found it very gratifying to be your colleague in promoting the interests of our State and our Nation.

I have sought recognition to comment on the nomination of David W. Ogden to be Deputy Attorney General. In reviewing the pending nomination, I have noted Mr. Ogden's academic and professional qualifications. I have also noted certain objections that have been raised by a number of organizations. As a matter of fact, some 11,000 contacts in opposition to the nomination have been received by our Judiciary Committee offices.

As to Mr. Ogden's background, his resume, his education, and his professional qualifications—he received his undergraduate degree from the University of Pennsylvania in 1976, Phi Beta Kappa, and his law degree from Harvard, magna cum laude, where he was an editor of the Law Review.

I know it is difficult to get a Phi Beta Kappa key at the University of Pennsylvania. I know that being on the Law Review at a school like Harvard is an accomplishment. He then clerked for Judge Sofaer on the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York. I came to know Judge Sofaer when he was counsel to the New York Department of State. I have a very high regard for him.

Mr. Ogden then clerked for Harry Blackmun on the Supreme Court. That is a distinguished achievement. Then he worked for Ennis Friedman Bersoff & Ewing and became a partner there. Then he was a partner at Jenner & Block and was an adjunct professor at Georgetown University Law Center from 1992 to 1995. He then had a string of prestigious positions in the Department of Justice: Associate Deputy Attorney General, Counselor to the Attorney General, Chief of Staff to the Attorney General, Acting Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Division, and Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Division—all during the administration of President Clinton.

We have seen quite a series of nominees come forward when the current administration selects people from a prior administration. There have been quite a few people who served in President Reagan's administration who later served in President George H.W. Bush's administration. Then some of those individuals served in the administration of President George W. Bush. Similarly, individuals from President Carter's administration came back with President Clinton, and the people from President Clinton are now serving in President Obama's administration. So it is a usual occurrence.

Contrasted to the resume Mr. Ogden has, I have noted the objections raised by the Family Research Council headed by Mr. Tony Perkins, who wrote the committee expressing his concerns about Mr. Ogden's nomination because, as Mr. Perkins puts it:

Mr. Ogden has built a career on representing views and companies that most Americans find repulsive . . . Mr. Ogden has also profited from representing pornographers and in attacking legislation designed to ban child pornography.

It was also noted by those opposing his nomination that a brief filed by Mr. Ogden in Planned Parenthood v. Casey argued that "women who have had abortions suffer no detrimental consequences and instead should feel 'relief and happiness' after aborting a child." Fidelis, a Catholic-based organization, Concerned Women of America, Eagle Forum, and the Alliance Defense Fund have also written the committee in opposition to Mr. Ogden's nomination based on similar concerns; specifically, his representation of several entities in the pornography industry and organizations that oppose restrictions on abortions.

As I noted earlier, the committee has received an unprecedented number of opposition phone calls and letters for a Department of Justice nominee. In total, the committee has received over 11,000 contacts in opposition to the nomination.

The objections raised call into focus the issue as to whether an attorney ought to be judged on the basis of arguments he has made in the representation of a client. I believe it is accurate to say that the prevailing view is not to bind someone to those arguments. I note an article published by David Rivkin and Lee Casey, who served in the Justice Department under President Reagan and President George H.W. Bush, that advances the thesis that a lawyer is not necessarily expressing his own views when he represents a client. They point out how Chief Justice Roberts' nomination to serve on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit was vociferously opposed by pro-choice groups based upon briefs he had filed when he served as Deputy Solicitor General under President George H.W. Bush and the arguments for restrictions of abortion rights contained in those briefs. I recollect that NARAL had a commercial opposing then-Judge Roberts. I spoke out at that time on the concern I had about their inference that those were necessarily his own views. As I recollect, NARAL withdrew the commercial.

The article by Mr. Rivkin and Mr. Casey notes the objections of the Family Research Council, Focus on the Family, and Concerned Women for America, and comes to the conclusion that a person's representation of a client does not necessarily state what a person's views are on an issue.

I further note that Mr. Ogden has been endorsed by very prominent people from Republican administrations: Deputy Attorney General Larry Thompson, former Assistant Attorney General Peter Keisler, former Assistant Attorney General Rachel Brand, and former Acting Assistant Attorney General Daniel Levin.

Professor of law Orin Kerr at George Washington University Law School noted that he disagreed with arguments that Mr. Ogden had made, but despite his disagreement with Mr. Ogden's arguments, he believed those arguments should not be held against him.

In the consideration of nominees who are now pending before the Judiciary Committee, we are taking a very close look at all of them. I think it appropriate to note at this point that the nomination of Harvard Law School dean Elena Kagan is being analyzed very carefully. Without going into great detail at this time because her nomination, which has been voted out of committee, will be on the floor at a later date, I and others voted to pass on Ms. Kagan because we are not satisfied with answers to questions that she has given.

I ask unanimous consent to put in the RECORD a letter that I wrote to Dean Kagan, February 25, 2009, and her reply to me on March 2, 2009.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY,
Washington, DC, February 25, 2009.

Dean ELENA KAGAN,
Harvard Law School,
Cambridge, MA.

DEAR DEAN KAGAN: I write to express my dissatisfaction with many of the answers you provided to the Committee in response to my written questions following your confirmation hearing. I believe these answers are inadequate for confirmation purposes.

In a 1995 review of a book entitled The Confirmation Mess, you made a compelling case for senatorial inquiry into a nominee's judicial philosophy and her views on specific issues. You stated, "when the Senate ceases to engage nominees in meaningful discussion of legal issues, the confirmation process takes on an air of vacuity and farce, and the Senate becomes incapable of either properly evaluating nominees or appropriately educating the public." You further asserted that the Senate's inquiry into the views of executive nominees, as compared to Supreme Court nominees, should be even more thorough, stating, "the Senate ought to inquire into the views and policies of nominees to the executive branch, for whom 'independence' is no virtue." I agree with the foregoing assessment, and, therefore, am puzzled by your responses, which do not provide clear answers concerning important constitutional and legal issues.

For example, in response to several questions related to the constitutionality of the imposition of the death penalty, you offer only the following: "I do not think it comports with the responsibilities and role of the Solicitor General for me to say whether I view particular decisions as wrongly decided or whether I agree with criticisms of those decisions. The Solicitor General must show respect for the Court's precedents and for the general principle of stare decisis. If I am confirmed as Solicitor General, I could not frequently or lightly ask the Court to reverse one of its precedents, and I certainly would not do so because I thought the case wrongly decided." You repeatedly provide this answer verbatim, or a similarly unresponsive answer, to numerous questions regarding the First and Second Amendments, property rights, executive power, habeas corpus rights of detainees, the use of foreign law in constitutional and statutory analysis, and the Independent Counsel statute, among others. I think you would agree that, given the gravity of these issues and the significance of the post for which you are nominated, this Committee is entitled to a full and detailed explanation of your views on these matters.

Please provide the Committee with adequate answers to these questions so that I may properly evaluate your nomination and determine whether any supplemental questions are necessary.

Sincerely,

ARLEN SPECTER.

HARVARD LAW SCHOOL,
OFFICE OF THE DEAN,
Cambridge, MA, March 2, 2009.

Senator ARLEN SPECTER

U.S. Senate, Committee on the Judiciary, Dirksen Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR SPECTER: I am writing in response to your letter of February 25. I am sorry that you believe some of my answers to written questions to be inadequate. I wish to respond to your request for additional information as fully as possible while still meeting the obligations attendant to a nominee for the Solicitor General's office.

Let me first say how much I respect the Senate and its institutional role in the nominations process. As the members of a co-equal branch of government charged with the "advice and consent" function, you and your colleagues have a right and, indeed, a duty to seek necessary information about how a nominee will perform in her office. By the same token, each nominee has a responsibility to address senatorial inquiries as fully and candidly as possible. But some questions—and these questions will be different for different positions—cannot be answered consistently with the responsible performance of the job the nominee hopes to undertake. For that reason, some balance is appropriate, as I remarked to Senator Hatch at my nomination hearing and as you quoted approvingly in the introduction to your written questions.

I endeavored to strike that proper balance in responding to your and other senators' written questions. I answered in full every question relating to the Solicitor General's role and responsibilities, including how I would approach specific statutes and areas of law. I also answered in detail every question relating to my own professional career, including my relatively extensive writings and speeches. Finally, I answered many questions relating to general legal issues. In short, I did my best to provide you and the rest of the Committee with a good sense of who I am and of how I would approach the role of Solicitor General. The only matters I did not address substantively were my personal views (if any) regarding specific Supreme Court cases and constitutional doctrines. These personal views would play no role in my performance of the job, which is to represent the interests of the United States; and expressing them (whether as a nominee or, if I am confirmed, as Solicitor General) might undermine my and the Office's effectiveness in a variety of ways.

In answering these questions as I did, I was cognizant of the way other nominees to the position of Solicitor General have replied to inquiries from senators. For example, in answering a question about his views of the use of foreign law in legal analysis, Paul Clement wrote: "As Solicitor General, my role would be to advance the interests of the United States, and previous statements of my personal views might be used against the United States' interests, either to seek my recusal, to skew my consideration of what position the United States should take, or to impeach the arguments eventually advanced by the United States." Similarly, Seth Waxman stressed in responding to questions about his understanding of a statute that "[i]t is the established practice of the Solicitor General not to express views or take positions in advance of presentation of a concrete case" and prior to engaging in extensive consultation within and outside the office. The advice I received from former Solicitors General of both parties prior to my nomination hearing was consistent with what the transcripts of their hearings reveal: all stressed the need to be honest and forthcoming, but also the responsibility to protect the interests of the office and of the United States. In my hearing and in my responses to written questions, I believe I have provided at least as much information to the Committee as any recent nominee.

As you noted to me when we met, I have lived my professional life largely in the public eye. I have written and spoken widely, so the Committee had the opportunity to review many pages of my law review articles and many hours of my remarks. I tried to answer every question put to me at my hearing completely and forthrightly. I met with every member of the Committee who wished to do so in order to give all of you a more personal sense of the kind of person and lawyer I am. I submitted letters from numerous lawyers, who themselves hold views traversing the political and legal spectrum, indicating how I approach legal issues. And as noted above, I answered many written questions from you and other members of the Committee.

In all, I did my best to provide you and the other members of the Committee with a complete picture of who I am and how I would approach the role of Solicitor General, consistently with the responsibilities of that office and the interests of the client it serves. But I am certainly willing to do anything else I can to satisfy your concerns, including meeting with you again.

Thank you for your consideration of this letter.

Sincerely,

ELENA KAGAN.

Mr. SPECTER. The comments that are in Ms. Kagan's letter require further analysis. She has, as a generalization, stated that she does not think it appropriate to answer certain questions about her views because she has the ability as an advocate to disregard her own personal views and to advocate with total responsibility to the law, even though she may have some different point of view. I think as a generalization, that is valid. However, as I discussed at her hearing, some of her points of view raise a question as to whether, given the very strongly held views she has expressed, she can totally put those views aside. When her nomination was before the committee for a vote, I passed. I agreed it ought to go to the floor, and we ought not to delay; but I wanted to have another talk with her. I have scheduled a meeting for tomorrow to go over Dean Kagan's record because I think it is important to take a very close look at it.

I also think it is relevant to comment about the pending nomination of Dawn Johnsen for Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Office of Legal Counsel. That is the Assistant Attorney General who passes on legal questions, a very important position. They all are important, whether it is Deputy Attorney General or Solicitor General or Assistant Attorney General for the various divisions. But the Office of Legal Counsel, OLC as it is called, is especially important. We now have challenges in dealing with opinions on the torture issue by people who held leadership positions in the Office of Legal Counsel under President George W. Bush—whether they were given in good faith and whether they went far beyond the law as to what interrogation tactics were appropriate.

With respect to Ms. Johnsen's nomination, she has equated limiting a woman's right to choose with slavery in violation of the 13th amendment. While I personally believe, as did Senator Goldwater, that we ought to keep the Government out of our pocketbooks, off our backs, and out of our bedrooms, I am not going to raise the contention that abortion restrictions are a violation of the 13th amendment and that it constitutes slavery. Her nomination is being subjected to very careful analysis, especially the part of her testimony where she disclaimed making that the connection between abortion restrictions and the 13th amendment because the records and a footnote suggest the contrary.

I talk about the nominations of Dean Kagan and Ms. Johnsen briefly, when considering the nomination of Mr. Ogden, to point out that there is very careful scrutiny given to these very important positions. I am looking forward to meeting Dean Kagan tomorrow to examine further her capabilities to be the Solicitor General and advance arguments with the appropriate adversarial zeal. We have an adversarial system. We put lawyers on opposite sides of the issue and we postulate that, from the adversarial system, the truth is more likely to emerge. An advocate has to pursue the cause within the range of advocacy. With Ms. Johnsen, we are going to be considering further her qualifications in light of her statements to which I have referred.

But coming back to Mr. Ogden, my net conclusion is that he ought to be confirmed. I say that based upon a resume that is very strong, both academically and professionally. I think it is important to note that when questioned about some of his positions, Mr. Ogden has, one might say, backed off some of his earlier views. When asked about some of the things he had written, he criticized a 1983 memo he wrote when he was a law clerk to Justice Blackmun that referred to the defenders of a challenged law in a way that disparagingly suggested their insincerity. He told the committee that after maturing, he had some different views.

In a 1990 tribute to Justice Blackmun, he expressed agreement with the Justice's endorsement of affirmative action programs that entailed set-asides or quotas. At his hearing, he said he now believes that such an approach was inappropriate and instead believes that consideration of race, as he put it, "in limited circumstances" should be one of many factors in affirmative action programs.

Mr. Ogden also stated he no longer agrees with the position he took in a 1980 case comment that "state expansion of speech rights at the expense of property rights does not constitute a taking." That case comment involved the issue of whether there was an unlimited right of speech on private property. So he has maintained a little different position. It is fair to raise a question about whether statements made in the confirmation amount to a confirmation conversion. That has been an expression used from time to time that you have to take statements at a confirmation with a grain of salt because of the motivation to be confirmed. That has to be taken into account. But I listened to what Mr. Ogden had to say, and I think he is entitled to modify his views over a substantial period of time from what he did in 1983 and 1990, with a maturation process.

Then there is the consideration that the President is entitled to select his appointees within broad limits. The Deputy Attorney General, while important, is not a lifetime appointment as a judge. I had a call from the Attorney General who raised the issue that he does not have any deputies and the Department of Justice has now been functioning for more than a month and a half. It is a big, important department, and we ought to give appropriate latitude to President Obama and appropriate latitude to Attorney General Holder and move ahead with Mr. Ogden's confirmation.

For all of those factors, I intend to vote in favor of Mr. Ogden. I think those who have raised objections have done so, obviously, in good faith. They are entitled to have their objections considered and to know that the Judiciary Committee is giving very careful analysis to their facts and will do so, as I have outlined, on the consideration of other nominees.

Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the full text of an article I referred to from Mr. Rivkin and Mr. Casey be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, along with the résumé of Mr. Ogden.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DON'T BLAME THE LAWYER

(By David B. Rivkin Jr. and Lee A. Casey)

President Barack Obama's selection of David Ogden as deputy attorney general has drawn fire from conservative family values groups, including the influential Family Research Council, Focus on the Family, and Concerned Women for America. Conservative talk show hosts including Fox News' Bill O'Reilly, have highlighted the story, and there appears to be a real effort under way to derail the nomination.

This effort undoubtedly has not escaped notice on Capitol Hill, and several Republican senators on the Judiciary Committee—including Orrin Hatch (Utah), Jon Kyl (Ariz.), and Jeff Sessions (Ala.)—have pressed Ogden on some of the issues raised by these groups.

Unfortunately, much of this opposition from the family values groups is based upon Ogden's representation of controversial clients and the positions he has argued on their behalf. This tactic has been used against conservatives in the past, including Chief Justice John Roberts Jr. Punishing lawyers for who they represent and what they argue before the courts is not in the interest of justice and makes for bad public policy.

"FROM PLAYBOY"?

Among the principal objections to Ogden's nomination is that he has represented adult magazine, book, and film producers, including Playboy and Penthouse, on whose behalf he has argued for a broad interpretation of First Amendment protections.

Ogden also represented a number of library directors who filed an amicus brief supporting the American Library Association's challenge to the Children's Internet Protection Act of 2000, which among other things required the use of Internet filtering software by public libraries.

In addition, as noted by the Family Research Council, "Ogden worked for the ACLU and filed a brief in the landmark abortion case Planned Parenthood v. Casey that denied the existence of adverse mental health effects of abortion on women."

His participation and arguments in cases involving parental notification, the Pentagon's "don't ask, don't tell" policy, and gay rights has also raised conservative hackles. According to the president of an important Catholic values organization, "David Ogden is a hired gun from Playboy and the ACLU. He can't run from his long record of opposing common-sense laws protecting families, women, and children."

ZEALOUS REPRESENTATION

The premise of this opposition is a familiar one—that lawyers must be presumed to agree with, or be sympathetic to, the clients they represent or, at a minimum, that they should be held accountable for the arguments they advance on a client's behalf. In fact, of course, lawyers represent clients for many and varied reasons—for money or fame, out of a sense of duty, an interest in a particular subject matter, or for professional growth and development. Sometimes lawyers are motivated by all of the above, and more.

It is simply inaccurate to attribute to a lawyer his or her client's beliefs. That is just not the way our legal system works—at least not all the time.

Sometimes, of course, lawyers do personally agree with the client's substantive views and the legal positions they advance. There is no doubt that lawyers are often drawn to a particular area of practice, or undertake to represent particular clients—especially on a pro bono basis—because they do believe in the client's cause. It is possible, however, to believe in a client's cause—a broad application of free speech rights, for example—and not to approve of the client's personal behavior or business model.

And, just as a lawyer's character cannot be judged based on a client list, neither can a lawyer's policy preferences easily be divined by reading his or her briefs. Lawyers must represent their clients zealously, and this means they often must deploy legal arguments with which they personally disagree.

SUBVERTING THE SYSTEM

Moreover, even in cases where a lawyer does share the client's opinions, or where he or she personally believes that the law means, or should mean, what the briefs say, there are very good reasons why this should not disqualify such individuals from high government office.

Lawyers are human beings, and punishing them in this way would result in many avoiding controversial clients and causes. Indeed, this is often the purpose and intent of such opposition, but it also is subversive of our legal system. That system is adversarial and works only if both sides of an issue are adequately represented. If there are clients or causes, be they the adult entertainment industry, tobacco companies, or Guantánamo detainees, that are classified as being so disreputable or radioactive that their lawyers are later personally held to account for representing them, the quality of justice will suffer.

Conservatives and Republicans who are tempted in that direction now that a liberal Democrat is in office should recall that similar arguments about supposedly disreputable clients and unacceptable arguments have been raised against their own nominees in the past. For example, now-Chief Justice Roberts' nomination to serve on the U.S.

Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit was vociferously opposed by pro-choice groups based upon briefs he had filed—and the arguments for restriction of abortion rights they contained—when he served as deputy solicitor general under President George H.W. Bush.

CLEARLY QUALIFIED

Although there are many issues on which conservatives can and should disagree with Ogden as ideological matters, those disagreements are not good reasons why he should not be confirmed as deputy attorney general. His views of the law and legal policy are certainly legitimate topics of inquiry and debate, both for the Senate and the public in general, but only in the context of what they may mean about Obama's own beliefs and plans.

Like his presidential predecessors, Obama is entitled to select the men and women who will run the federal government, including the Justice Department, exercising the executive authority vested in him as president by the Constitution.

It is entirely appropriate that Obama's appointees share his policy preferences and ideological inclinations. If their legal views are considered by some to be out of the "mainstream," that is the president's problem. If they push for extreme policies, it will be up to Obama to curtail them. If not, there will be another election in 2012, at which time the country can call him to account.

In the meantime, so long as the individuals Obama chooses to serve in the executive branch have sufficient integrity, credentials, and experience to perform the tasks they will be assigned, they should be confirmed.

This is the case with Ogden. He is clearly qualified for the job. His training and experience are outstanding, including a Harvard law degree and a Supreme Court clerkship. Ogden has practiced at one of the country's premier law firms. He served as Attorney General Janet Reno's chief of staff and as assistant attorney general in charge of the Justice Department's Civil Division—its largest litigating unit—in the Clinton administration. This service is important. The deputy attorney general is, in large part, a manager, and Ogden clearly understands the Justice Department, its role in government, its career lawyers, and its foibles.

Significantly, his nomination has been endorsed by a number of lawyers who served in the Reagan and two Bush administrations, including one who preceded, and one who succeeded, Ogden as head of the Civil Division. They are right; he should be confirmed.

Mr. SPECTER. I thank the Chair and yield the floor to my distinguished colleague from Montana.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to speak as in morning business and that the time be charged against the time under the control of the majority on the nomination.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

HEALTH CARE REFORM

Mr. BAUCUS. Madam President, on February 24, President Obama said:

[N]early a century after Teddy Roosevelt first called for reform, the cost of our health care has weighed down our economy and the conscience of our nation long enough. So let there be no doubt: Health care reform cannot wait, it must not wait, and it will not wait another year.

I could not agree more with our President. Our next big objective is health care reform. Comprehensive health care reform is no longer simply an option, it is an imperative. If we delay, the problems we face today will grow even worse. If we delay, millions more Americans will lose their coverage. If we delay, premiums will rise even further out of reach. And if we delay, Federal health care spending will soak up an even greater share of our Nation's income.

In the Finance Committee, we have now held 11 hearings preparing for health care reform. We held our latest hearing yesterday. The Director of the Office of Management and Budget, Dr. Peter Orszag, testified to the Finance Committee about the President's health care budget.

Yesterday, Director Orszag told the committee the cost of not enacting health care reform is enormous. He said:

The cost of doing nothing is a fiscal trajectory that will lead to a fiscal crisis over time.

Director Orszag said if we do not act, then we will further perpetuate a system in which workers' take-home pay is unnecessarily reduced by health care costs. Director Orszag said if we do not act, then 46 million uninsured Americans will continue to be denied adequate health care. According to the Center for American Progress, the ranks of the uninsured grow by 14,000 people every day—14,000 more people uninsured every day. And Director Orszag said if we do not act, then a growing burden will be placed on State governments, with unanticipated consequences. For example, health care costs will continue to crowd out State support of higher education. That would have dire consequences for the education of our Nation's young people.

We must move forward. Senator GRASSLEY and I have laid out a schedule to do just that. Our schedule calls for the Finance Committee to mark up a comprehensive health care reform bill in June. We should put a health care bill on the President's desk this year.

The President's budget makes a historic downpayment on health care reform. Over the next 10 years, the President's budget invests $634 billion to reform our health care system.

Reforming health care means making coverage affordable over the long run. It means improving the quality of the care. And I might say, our quality is not as good as many Americans think it is, certainly compared to international norms. It means expanding health insurance to cover all Americans. We need fundamental reform in cost, quality, and coverage. We need to address all three objectives at the same time. They are interconnected. If you do not address them together, you will never really address any one of them alone.

Costs grow too rapidly because the system pays for volume, not quality. Quality indicators such as lifespan and infant mortality remain low. Why? Because too many are left out of the system. Families do not get coverage because health costs grow faster than wages. And without coverage, health insurance costs increase because providers shift the cost of uncompensated care to their paying customers. It is a vicious cycle. Each problem feeds on the others.

We need a comprehensive response. Let us at long last deliver on the dream of reform Teddy Roosevelt called for nearly a century ago. Let us at long last lift the burden of health care costs on our economy and on the conscience of our Nation. And let us at long last enact health care reform this year.

Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum and ask unanimous consent that the time consumed during the quorum call be charged equally against both sides.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Madam President, I would like to say a few words in opposition to the nomination of David Ogden to be Deputy Attorney General at the U.S. Department of Justice.

There is no doubt that Mr. Ogden is an experienced lawyer. However, I have serious concerns about Mr. Ogden's views and some of the cases he has argued. Mr. Ogden is an attorney who has specialized in first amendment cases, in particular pornography and obscenity cases, and has represented several entities in the pornography industry. He has argued against legislation designed to ban child pornography, including the Children's Internet Protection Act of 2000 and the Child Protection and Obscenity Enforcement Act of 1998. These laws were enacted to protect children from obscene materials in public libraries and to require producers of pornography to personally verify that their models are not minors. I supported both these important pieces of legislation.

In addition, Mr. Ogden authored a brief in the 1993 case Knox v. United States, where he advocated for the same arguments to shield child pornography under the first amendment that the Senate unanimously rejected by a vote of 100 to 0 and the House rejected by a vote of 425 to 3. In the Knox case, the Bush I Justice Department successfully had prosecuted Knox for violating Federal antipornography laws; but on appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court, the Clinton Justice Department reversed course and refused to defend the conviction. After significant public outrage, President Clinton publicly chastised the Solicitor General, and Attorney General Reno overturned the position. At the time, I was involved in the congressional effort opposing this switch in the Justice Department's position on child pornography.

Mr. Ogden also has filed briefs opposing parental notification before a minor's abortion, opposing spousal notification before an abortion, and opposing the military's policy against public homosexuals serving in uniform.

Significant concerns have been raised in regard to Mr. Ogden's nomination. I have heard from a very large number of Iowa constituents, including the Iowa Christian Alliance, who are extremely concerned with Mr. Ogden's ties to the pornography industry and the positions he has taken against protecting women and children from this terrible scourge. The Family Research Council, Concerned Women of America, Eagle Forum, Fidelis, the Alliance Defense Fund, and the Heritage Foundation, among others, have all expressed serious concerns about Mr. Ogden's advocacy against restrictions on pornography and obscenity.

The majority of Americans support protecting children from pornography exploitation, protecting children from Internet pornography in libraries, and allowing for parental notification before a minor's abortion. So do I. I feel very strongly about protecting women and children from the evils of pornography. I have always been a strong supporter of efforts to restrict the dissemination of pornography in all environments. As a parent and grandparent, I am particularly concerned that children will be exposed to pornographic images while pursuing educational endeavors or simply using the Internet for recreational purposes. Throughout my tenure in Congress I have supported bills to protect children from inappropriate exposure to pornography and other obscenities in the media, and I support the rights of parents to raise children and to be active participants in decisions affecting their medical care. Mr. Ogden has consistently taken positions against these child protection laws and this troubles me.

Because of my concerns, I must oppose the nomination of David Ogden.

Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Madam President, I didn't make a complete request, as I should have, for a quorum, so I ask unanimous consent that the time be evenly divided.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DORGAN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DORGAN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent to speak in morning business for as much time as I may consume.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

TRANSPORTATION TROUBLES

Mr. DORGAN. Last evening, I was driving from the Capitol and listening to Jim Lehrer News Hour. They had a report about transit systems in this country that are facing significant financial problems. The report was fairly interesting. It turns out to be a subject with which I am fairly familiar. The report was that there are more than a couple dozen transit agencies in some of America's largest cities that are in deep financial trouble. Why? Because they had sold their subway system or bus system to a bank in order to raise needed revenue. Under what is called a SILO, a sale in/lease out transaction, a city can sell its property to a bank, so the bank takes title to the property. The bank then leases it back to the city, and the bank gets a big tax write-off because it can depreciate the property. So the city still gets to use its subway system because they are leasing it back.

All of a sudden, a couple dozen cities discovered that this transaction they entered into, which I think is kind of a scam, landed them in huge trouble because the transaction was insured with a derivative that went through AIG. AIG's credit rating collapsed, and now the banks are calling in substantial penalties on the part of the transit system that they cannot meet. So they are in trouble.

Surprised? I am not particularly surprised. I have been on the floor of the Senate talking about what is happening with respect to these so-called sale in/lease out, SILO practices. I have talked about banks and about Wachovia Bank, by the way, which was buying German sewer systems. I will describe a couple of these transactions. These are cross-border leasing provisions, sale and lease back.

Wachovia Bank buys a sewer system in Bochum, Germany. Why? Is it because it is a sewer specialist? Do they have executives who really know about sewers in Germany? I don't think so. This is a scam. It has always been a scam. An American bank buys a sewer system in a German city so it can depreciate the assets of that sewage system and then lease it back to the German city. The Germans were scratching their heads, saying: This seems kind of dumb, but as long as we are on the receiving end of a lot of money, we are certainly willing to do it.

I am showing this example of a bank called Wachovia, which used to be First Union, that originally started some of these transactions. I believe Wachovia itself, which was in deep financial trouble, has now been acquired by Wells Fargo. First Union was involved in a cross-border lease of Dortmund, Germany, streetcars. What is an American bank doing leasing streetcars in a German city? To avoid paying U.S. taxes, that is why.

We have seen all kinds of these transactions going on. I have described them on the floor of the Senate previously.

This one is the transit system railcars in Belgium. Since many of these transactions are confidential, I don't know which American company bought Belgium National Railway cars. One of our corporations bought the Liefkenshoek Tunnel under the river in Antwerp, Belgium. Why? To save money on taxes. Some companies don't want to pay their taxes to this country.

PBS Frontline's Hedrick Smith did a piece on it. The cross-border leasing contracts appear particularly hard to justify because all the property rights remain as they were even after the deal was signed. The Cologne purification plant keeps cleaning Cologne's sewage water. In the words of Cologne's city accountant:

After all, the Americans should know themselves what they do with their money. If they subsidize this transaction, we gratefully accept.

I mention this because the tax shelters that big American banks and some cities have discovered are unusual and, I think, raise very serious questions about whether they are fair to do.

Here is a Wall Street Journal article about how the city of Chicago actually sold Chicago's 9-1-1 emergency call system to FleetBoston Financial and Sumitomo Mitsui Banking. Why would a city sell its 9-1-1 emergency call system? Why would somebody buy it? It is in order to avoid paying U.S. taxes.

The reason I mention all of this is, last evening, I heard about the transit systems being in trouble in this country. Why? They are engaged in this. They were engaged in exactly the same thing. A transit system that is established by a city to provide transportation for folks in that city decides it wants to get involved in a transaction to sell its transit system to a bank someplace and then lease it back, allowing the bank to avoid paying U.S. taxes and, all of a sudden, they are in trouble. Do you know what? I do not have so much sympathy for people who are involved in those kinds of transactions. It reminded me, last evening, listening to this issue of cross-border leasing, SILOs and LILOs, and all these scams going on for a long time, many established by U.S. companies who apparently, in their boardrooms, are not only trying to figure out how to sell products but how to avoid taxes through very sophisticated tax engineering.

I think it raises lots of questions about the issue of economic patriotism and what each of us owes to our country. It reminded me again of another portion of this financial collapse and financial crisis that we now face in this country. It reminded me of the work that the attorney general of New York, Andrew Cuomo, is doing and something he disclosed. We should have disclosed it, but we didn't know it. We know it because Andrew Cuomo, the attorney general of New York, dug it out. Let me tell you the story.

Last year, Merrill Lynch investment bank was going belly up. So the Treasury Secretary arranged a purchase of Merrill Lynch by Bank of America in September to be consummated in January. And it happened. What we now understand and learn is that Merrill Lynch, which lost $27 billion last year, in December, just prior to it being taken over by Bank of America, paid 694 people bonuses of more than $1 million each. I will say that again. They paid 694 people bonuses of more than $1 million each, with the top four executives sharing $121 million.

Moments later—that is, in a couple of weeks—the American taxpayers, through the TARP program, put tens of billions of dollars more into the acquiring company, Bank of America. At least a portion of that would have been attributable to the takeoff of Merrill Lynch, which just lost $15 billion the previous quarter. It appears to me that this was an arrangement, and Bank of America understood it was buying Merrill Lynch. Merrill Lynch lost a ton of money—$27 billion—last year but wanted to pay bonuses to its executives. So 694 of their folks got more than $1 million each—just prior to the American taxpayer coming in and providing the backstop to the acquiring company, Bank of America, at least in part because of the purchase.

Is there any wonder the American people get furious when they read these kinds of things? The top four executives received $121 million. The top 14 received $250 million. I describe this because we didn't know this. We are the ones who are pushing TARP money. This Congress appropriated TARP money—now $700 billion. This Congress has appropriated that money, but we don't know what is going on. That is why I introduced, with Senator McCain, a proposal for a select committee to investigate the narrative of what happened with respect to this financial crisis. These tax scams are just a part of it. It is the way everything was happening around here, with some of the biggest institutions in the country.

There is plenty of blame to go around. The Federal Government was running deficits that were far too large. Corporate debt was increasing dramatically. Personal debt, household debt, doubled in a relatively short time. It is not as if everybody doesn't have some culpability. Our trade deficit, $700 billion a year, is unsustainable. You cannot do that year after year. There were a lot of reasons.

Then the subprime loan scandal—this unbelievable scandal. At the same time the subprime loan scandal ratchets up, we have a circumstance where regulators, who were appointed by the previous administration, essentially advertised they were willing to be willfully blind and not look. "Self regulation" is what Alan Greenspan called it.

So then there grew a substantial pot of dark money that was traded outside of any exchanges. Nobody knew what they were. The development of newly engineered products, credit default swaps, CDOs—you name it, was very complicated—so complicated that many could not understand them. I was asked by a television interviewer 2 days ago: If you did a select committee to investigate all of this, with due respect, do you think Members of the Senate could understand these very complicated products?

I said: I think if your question is could we understand them as well as the heads of financial institutions who steered their companies into the ditch with these products, can we understand them as well as they did, yes, I think so. I think we are capable of figuring out what caused all this, but we would not do it without looking. We would not do it, in my judgment, without the establishment of a select committee with subpoena power to develop the narrative of what happened, who is accountable, what do we do to make sure this never happens again.

I believe we ought to go back a ways, go back to 1999, when the Congress passed something called the Financial Services Modernization Act that took apart the Glass-Steagall Act that was put in place after the Great Depression, and it separated banking from risk. It said you cannot be involved in deposit-insured banking and then involved in real estate and securities as well.

In 1999, Congress passed legislation that said that is old-fashioned. Let's get rid of Glass-Steagall. Let's abolish Glass-Steagall. Let's create big financial holding companies for one-stop financial capabilities for everybody. I was one of eight to vote no. I said on the floor of the Senate 10 years ago that I think this will result in a big taxpayer bailout. I said that during the debate, not because I knew it but because I felt it. You cannot take apart the protections that existed after the Great Depression and somehow believe you are doing the country a favor. We were not.

We have to reconnect some of those protections and separate banking from the substantial risks that are involved in things such as the derivatives and some of the complex products with great risk that now exist as something called toxic assets deep in the bowels of some of the largest financial institutions of our country.

We have a lot to do and a lot to do in a hurry to try to fix what is wrong in this country. I said before that I do not think you can fix what is wrong unless you clean up the banking system. I understand a banking system is a circulatory system for an economy. You have to have a working system of finance.

I was asked the other day: Do you believe in nationalizing the banks?

I said: That is a word that is thrown around. I don't know what words to use. But I think perhaps for the biggest banks in the country that have failed that are loaded with massive, risky toxic assets and are now saying to the American taxpayers: Bail me out, but keep me alive because I have a right to exist because I am too big to fail, I said

I think instead we ought to run it through a banking carwash. Start at the front end—I know “banking carwash” is a goofy idea—start at the front end and when they come out new, you have gotten rid of the bad assets, keep the good assets, change the name, perhaps change their ownership, put them back up. We need banks, I understand that. But there is no inherent right with all the banks with the current names to exist if they ran into the ditch, taking on very big risks and then decide the taxpayers have to retain them because it is their inherent right to exist. I don't believe that is the case.

I do believe all of us have to find a way to put together this banking and financial system in a manner that works because business cannot exist without credit. We have plenty of businesses out there right now that have the capability to make money, have the capability to survive and get through this but cannot find credit. We have to find a way to put that together so our financial system works.

CUBA

I wish to make a couple points about a subject I did not talk about in recent days because there was a lot of controversy on the floor of the Senate over some provisions that I included in the omnibus bill dealing with Cuba. I wish to make a couple comments because much of the discussion has been inaccurate.

Fifty year ago, Fidel Castro walked up the steps of the capitol in Havana, having come from the mountains as a revolutionary. Fidel Castro turned Cuba into a Communist country. I have no time for Fidel Castro or the Communist philosophy of Cuba. But it has always been my interest to try to understand why we treat Cuba differently than we do other Communist countries.

China is Communist, Communist China. What is our policy with China? Engagement will be constructive; allow people to travel to China; trade with China; constructive engagement will move China in the right direction. That has always been our policy with respect to Communist China. I have been to China.

Vietnam is a Communist government. What is our policy? Engagement is constructive; travel to Vietnam; trade with Vietnam; constructive engagement will move Vietnam toward better human rights and greater freedoms. I have been to Vietnam.

That is our constructive approach with respect to Communist countries. Cuba? Different, an embargo with respect to Cuba, a complete embargo, which at one time even included food and medicine which, in my judgment, is immoral. In addition to an embargo, we said: We don't like Fidel Castro; so we are going to slap around the American people as well because we are going to prevent them from traveling to Cuba. So we have people in the Treasury Department in a little organization called the Office of Foreign Assets Control, called OFAC, that at least until not long ago was spending 20 to 25 percent of its time tracking American citizens who were suspected of vacationing in Cuba.

Can you imagine that? The organization was designed to track terrorist money. But nearly a quarter of its time was spent trying to track whether Americans went to Cuba to take a vacation illegally. Let me show you some of what they have done.

This woman is named Joan Slote. I have met Joan. Joan is a senior Olympian bike rider. Joan went to Cuba to ride bicycle with a Canadian bicycling group. Canadians can go to Cuba, and she assumed it was legal for Americans also. She answered an ad in a bicycling magazine and said: Yes, I would like to bicycle in Cuba. So she went.

For going to bicycle in Cuba, she was fined $7,630 by the U.S. Government under the Trading with the Enemy Act. Think of that, the Trading with the Enemy Act. This senior citizen bicyclist was fined by her Government. Then, because her son had a brain tumor and she was attending to her son in another State, she did not get this notice. So the Government took steps to threaten to attach her Social Security check. Unbelievable. This is unbelievable, in my judgment.

This is Joni Scott, a young woman who came to see me one day. She went to Cuba with a religious group to pass out free Bibles. You can guess what happened to her. Her Government was tracking her down to try to fine her for going to Cuba to pass out free Bibles. Why? Because we decided to punish Fidel Castro by not allowing the American people to travel to Cuba.

Here is Leandro. He is a Cuban American but he could not attend his father's funeral in Cuba. President Bush, by the way, changed the circumstances that Cuban Americans living in this country could travel to Cuba so they can go only once in 3 years rather than once in 1 year. Your mother is dying? Tough luck. Your father is dying? Tough luck. You can't go there. That policy is unbelievable to me.

This is a man I met, SGT Carlos Lazo. SGT Carlos Lazo fled from Cuba on raft and went to Iraq to fight for this country. He won a Bronze Star there. He is a great soldier. His sons were living in Cuba with their mother. One of his sons was quite ill. He came back from fighting in Iraq, and was denied the opportunity see his sick son in Cuba 90 miles away from Florida. That is unbelievable to me. In fact, we even had a vote on the floor of the Senate—we did it because I forced it—whether we were going to let this soldier go to Cuba to see his sons. We fell only a few votes short of the two thirds we needed to change the law.

My point is, our policies make no sense at all. We are going to slap around the American people because we are upset with Castro and Cuba. I am upset with Castro. I am upset with Cuba's policies. But with Communist China and Communist Vietnam, we say travel there, trade with them, constructive engagement moves them in the right direction.

John Ashcroft and I, when John Ashcroft was in the Senate, passed the first piece of legislation that opened a crack for American farmers to be able to sell food and for us to sell medicine in Cuba. We opened just a crack. There was a time a few years ago when the first train carloads of dried peas from North Dakota went to a loading dock to be shipped to Cuba.

President Bush decided: I am going to tighten up all that. I am going to tighten up family visits; I am going to tighten up and try to thwart the ability of farmers to sell food into Cuba. It made no sense to me. So in this omnibus legislation, I made the changes we have been talking about and debating for years; that is, restoring the right of family visits once a year rather than once in 3 years and a couple other changes to make it easier to export food and medicine to Cuba.

But I wish to make the point that some people on the floor of the Senate have claimed this legislation that was in the omnibus would extend U.S. credit to Cuba. It is flat out not true. There is nothing in these provisions that would extend credit to Cuba. In fact, the Ashcroft-Dorgan or Dorgan-Ashcroft legislation that allowed us to sell food into Cuba explicitly prohibits U.S. financing for food sales to Cuba. They cannot purchase food from us unless it is in cash, and the payments cannot even be conducted directly through an American bank. They have to run through a European bank for a cash transaction to buy American farm products. But at least the law allows us to compete with the Canadians, the Europeans, and others who sell farm products into Cuba.

These policies, in my judgment, have been a failure, dating back to 1960. There is no evidence at all that this embargo has been helpful.

I have been to Cuba. I have been to Havana. I talked with the dissidents who take strong exception and fought the Castro regime every step of the way, and a good number of those dissidents said to me this embargo we have with respect to Cuba is Castro's best excuse. Castro says: Sure our economy is in shambles. Wouldn't it be? Wouldn't you expect it to be if the 500-pound gorilla north of here has its fist around your neck? That is what the Castro regime says to excuse its dismal record—the economy, human rights, and all of it.

I, personally, think it is long past the time to take another look. I know Senator LUGAR also published some recommendations on Cuba policy recently. Sometime soon, Senator ENZI and I and others are going to talk about legislation we have introduced on this subject. It is long past the time to take another look at this issue and begin to treat Cuba as we treat Communist China and Communist Vietnam.

I think constructive engagement is far preferable because now the only voice the Cuban people hear effectively is the Castro voice, whether it is Raul or Fidel—I guess it is now Raul. That is the only thing they hear, and they need to hear more. Hearing more from a flock of tourists who go to a country such as Cuba would, in my judgment, open a substantial amount of new dialog. So I think travel and trade will be constructive, not just with China and Vietnam. I think there is evidence in both cases—I have been to both countries—that constructive engagement has moved forward in both countries in a measurable way.

Has engagement resulted in a quantum leap with china and Vietnam? No, but it is measurable. I think the same would be true with respect to Cuba.

What persuaded me to come to the floor to talk about this today was a discussion this past week on the floor regarding the provisions I sponsored on the bill we passed last night. I didn't engage in that discussion because we needed to move the omnibus bill.

I did want the Senate RECORD to understand and show exactly what the history has been and what we have done. What we have done, I think, is a very small step in the right direction. Much more needs to be done, whether it is saying to American farmers: You have a right to compete, you have a right to sell farm products without constraints. By the way, one of the provisions in the bill authorizes a general license that would make it easier for farm groups like the Farmers Union and Farm Bureau to go to an agriculture expo in Cuba to be able to sell their products. That is not radical. That is not undermining anything. That is common sense.

The drip, drip, drip of common sense in this Chamber could be helpful over a long period of time. This is just a couple small drops of common sense that I think will help us as we address the issue of Cuba.

I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE BUDGET

Mr. ALEXANDER. Madam President, I ask the Chair to let me know when I have 2 minutes remaining. I believe we have 30 minutes allocated to us at this stage.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will notify the Senator.

Mr. ALEXANDER. I thank the Chair.

Madam President, this is an important next 3 or 4 weeks for the United States. The President of the United States has outlined his 10-year blueprint for our country's future in the form of a budget. The budget is now before the Congress, and it is our job to consider it. We are doing that every day in hearings, and we are looking forward to the details the President will send later this month. But for the next 4 weeks, including this week, the major subject for debate in this Senate Chamber is this: Can we afford the Democrats' proposals for spending, taxes, and borrowing? And our view—the Republican view—is the answer is no.

As an example, in the 1990s, President Clinton and the Congress raised taxes, but they raised taxes to balance the budget. This proposal—and we will be discussing it more as we go along—will raise taxes to grow the government.

Not long ago, the President visited our Republican caucus, and we talked some about entitlement reform—the automatic spending that the government says we don't appropriate; mostly all of it is for Social Security, Medicare, and Medicaid—and he talked about the importance to him of dealing with entitlement spending. Senator MCCONNELL, the Republican leader, made a speech at the National Press Club to begin this Congress in which he said that he was going to say to this President: Let's work together to bring the growth in entitlement spending, automatic spending, under control. We had a summit at the White House, which we were glad to attend, about that.

But I say to Senator GREGG, the Senator from New Hampshire, who is the ranking Republican on the Budget Committee, I was disappointed to come back from the excellent meeting we had at the White House on fiscal responsibility and find, for example, that in this budget we have $117 billion more for entitlement spending on Pell grants. So my question to the Senator from New Hampshire is: Does this budget actually reform entitlement spending, or does it not?

Mr. GREGG. I thank the Senator from Tennessee. I know the Senator from Tennessee will not be surprised to learn that there is no entitlement reform in this budget; that this budget, regrettably, dramatically increases entitlement spending.

The chart I have here reflects that increase. If you would use the present baseline on entitlement spending, that would be the blue. Now that is going up pretty fast. During this period, it would go from $1.2 trillion up to almost $2.4 trillion. That is the baseline, if you did nothing. Now one would have presumed with that type of increase in entitlement spending, and the fact that this budget, as it is proposed, is going to run up a public debt which will double in 5 years and triple in 10 years, that it will create a deficit this coming year of $1.7 trillion and a deficit in the last year of the budget of $700 billion—deficits which are larger in the last years of this budget than have historically been those that we have borne as a nation over the last 20 years, and a debt which will go from $5.8 trillion to $15 trillion plus. One would have presumed that in that area where the budget is growing the fastest, and which represents the largest amount of cost, that this administration would have stepped forward and said: Well, we can't afford that; we have to try to slow the rate of growth of spending in that area, or at least not have increased it. But what the President's budget has done is they have proposed to dramatically increase the amount of spending in the entitlement accounts.

Most of this increase will come in health care. Now, people say, and legitimately so, that we have to reform our health care delivery system in this country; that we have to get better with health care in this country. But does that mean we have to spend a lot more money on it? No. We spend 17 percent of our national product, of what we produce as a nation, on health care. The closest country to us in the industrialized world only spends 11½ percent of their product on health care. So we have a massive amount of money we are spending on health care as an industrialized nation that is available to correct our health care system. We don't have to increase it even further.

What the President is proposing is to increase health care spending. As a downpayment, they are saying $600 billion, but actually what they are proposing is $1.2 trillion of new entitlement spending in health care. No control there. In addition, as the Senator from Tennessee noted, they are taking programs which have traditionally been discretionary, which have therefore been subject to some sort of fiscal discipline around here, because they are subject to what is known as spending caps on discretionary programs, and taking these programs and moving them over to the entitlement accounts. Why? Because then there is no discipline. You spend the money, and you keep spending the money, and there is no accountability. So they are taking the entire Pell program out of discretionary accounts and moving it over to entitlement accounts. As the Senator from Tennessee noted, this is over $100 billion of new entitlement spending.

If we keep this up, what is it going to do? Essentially, what it is going to do is bankrupt our country, but it will certainly bankrupt our kids. We are going to pass on to them a country which has this massive increase in debt—something our children can't afford, as I mentioned earlier—a debt which will double in 5 years because of the spending, and triple in 10 years. Almost all of this growth in debt is a function of the growth of the entitlement spending in this program. Although there is a considerable amount of growth in discretionary, the vast majority of this increase is in spending for entitlement programs.

To put it another way, and to show how much this is out of the ordinary and how much this is a movement of our government to the left—an expansion of government as a function of our society—this chart shows what historically the spending of the Federal Government has been. It has historically been about 20 percent of gross national product. That has been an affordable number. Granted, we have run deficits during a lot of this period, but at least it has been reasonably affordable. But this administration is proposing in their budget that we spike the spending radically next year, which is understandable because we are in the middle of a very severe recession and the government is the source of liquidity to try to get the economy going. So that is understandable. Maybe not that much, but maybe understandable. It is more than I would have suggested, but I will accept that. The problem is out here, when you get out to the year 2011, 2012, and 2013, when the recession is over. When the recession is over, they do not plan to control spending. They plan to continue spending on an upward path so it is about 23 percent of gross national products.

What does that mean? That means we are going to run big deficits, big debt, and all of that will be a burden and fall on the shoulders of our children. Our children are the ones who have to pay this cost.

Mr. ALEXANDER. At this point, let me ask the Senator from New Hampshire a question. I have heard you say, and I believe I said a moment ago, that in the 1990s, President Clinton raised taxes, as President Obama is planning to raise taxes, but that President Clinton used it to reduce the deficit.

Mr. GREGG. Yes. When President Clinton raised taxes in the mid 1990s, and a Republican Congress came into play, we controlled spending. He got his tax increase, the deficit went down, because the tax increase was put to reducing the deficit. What President Obama is proposing is that he increase taxes by $1.4 trillion—the largest tax increase in the history of our country. Is it going to be used to reduce the deficit? No, just the opposite. It is going to be used to grow the government and allow the government to now take 23 percent of gross national product instead of the traditional 20 percent.

So you can't close this gap. Basically, all the new taxes in this bill—and there are a lot of them. There is a national sales tax on everybody's electric bill, a tax which is basically going to hit most every small business in this country and make it harder for them to hire people; and a tax which limits the deductibility of charitable giving and of home mortgages. All these new taxes are not being used to get fiscal discipline in place, to try to bring down the debt, or limit the rate of growth of the debt, or to limit the size of the deficit. They are being used to explode—literally explode—the size of the Federal Government, with ideas such as nationalizing the educational loan system, ideas such as quasinationalization of the health care system, which is in here, and massive expansion of a lot of other initiatives that may be worthwhile but aren't affordable in the context of this agenda.

So this budget is a tremendous expansion in spending, a tremendous expansion in borrowing, and a tremendous expansion in taxes. And it is not affordable for our children.

Mr. ALEXANDER. I wonder if I may ask the Senator from New Hampshire about this. Some people may say, with some justification: You Republicans are complaining about spending, yet in the last 8 years you participated in a lot of it yourself. How would you compare the proposed spending and proposed debt over the next 10 years in this blueprint by the Obama administration with the last 8 years?

Mr. GREGG. That is a good point, and that has certainly been made by the other side of the aisle: Well, under the Bush administration all this spending was done and this debt was run up.

In the first 5 years of the Obama administration, under their budget—not our numbers, their numbers—they will spend more and they will run up the debt on the country more and on our children more than all the Presidents since the beginning of our Republic—George Washington to George Bush. Take all those Presidents and put all the debt they put on the ledger of America, and in this budget President Obama is planning to run up more debt than occurred under all those Presidents. It is a massive expansion in debt.

It is also an interesting exercise in tax policy. Now, I know we are not talking so much about taxes today, but I think it is important to point out that when you put a $1.4 trillion tax increase on the American people, you reduce productivity in this country rather dramatically. One of the unique things about President Bush's term was that he set a tax policy which actually caused us to have 4 years—prior to this massive recession, which is obviously a significant problem and a very difficult situation—but for the runup during the middle part of his term right up until this recession started, the Federal Government was generating more revenues than it had ever generated in its history. Why was that? Because we had a tax policy which basically taxed people in a way that caused them to go out and be productive, to create jobs, and to do things which were taxable events.

Unfortunately, what is being proposed here, under this administration's tax policy, is going to cause people to do tax avoidance. Instead of investing to create jobs, they will go out to invest to try to avoid taxes, and that is not an efficient way to use dollars. The practical effect is it will reduce revenues and increase the deficit. So on your point, the simple fact is, as this proposal comes forward from the administration, it increases the debt of the United States more in 5 years than all the Presidents of the United States have increased the debt since the beginning of the Republic.

Mr. ALEXANDER. I see the Senator from Arizona, who is a longtime member of the Senate Finance Committee and pays a lot of attention to Federal spending and is the assistant Republican leader. I wonder, Senator KYL, as you have watched the Congress over the years, to what do you attribute this remarkable increase in spending? We heard a lot of talk last year about change, but this may be the kind of change that produces a sticker shock. It may be a little bit more change in terms of spending than a lot of Americans were expecting.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I appreciate the question of my colleague from Tennessee. I also compliment the ranking member of the Budget Committee, the Senator from New Hampshire, who has tried to deal with budgets all the time he has been in the Senate.

If I could begin by just asking him one question: How would you characterize this budget proposed by the President as compared with others, in terms of the taxes and the spending and the debt created? Is there some way to compare it with all of the other budgets that you have worked with, including all of the Bush budgets?

Mr. GREGG. It has the largest increase in taxes, the largest increase in spending, and the largest increase in debt in the history of our country.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I first would answer my colleague from Tennessee. We ought to be spending less and taxing less and borrowing less. Our minority leader asked his staff to do some calculations. Just from the time that the new President raised his hand and was inaugurated as President, how much money have we spent? They calculated that we have spent $1 billion every hour. That is just in the stimulus legislation, this omnibus bill that was just passed last night, which is 8 percent over the stimulus bill, and we have not even added in the spending that is going to occur as a result of this budget which, as the Senator from New Hampshire said, in just the first year is a third more spending than even the previous year—$3.55 trillion.

In addition to that, it makes much of the so-called temporary spending in the stimulus bill permanent. Some of us predicted that would happen, that when they have a new program in the stimulus bill they surely wouldn't cut it off after 2 or 3 years. We said they will probably make it permanent. Sure enough, and the ranking member on the Budget Committee can speak to that better than I, but a great many of these programs are made permanent. On health care, for example, the Senator from New Hampshire talked about that, but there is no effort to control entitlements. In fact, Medicare, Medicaid, and Social Security all rise between 10 and 12 percent, Medicare itself by $330 billion. This is increased spending, and it is permanent programs.

We also wondered what would happen with respect to the Federal Government's growth as a result. According to a March 3 Washington Post article, "President Obama's budget is so ambitious, with vast new spending on health care, energy independence, education, services for veterans, that experts say he probably will need to hire tens of thousands of new Federal Government workers to realize his goals." According to the article, estimates are as high as 250,000 new Government employees will have to be hired to implement all of this spending.

I know we want to create jobs in this economy, but I wonder if the American people intended that we create a whole bunch of new Government bureaucrats to spend all of this money.

This is not responsive to my colleague's question, but the one area where we do not have high unemployment is Government jobs. The unemployment in the country is about 8 percent now. In Government jobs it is between 2 percent and 3 percent, so that is not an area we needed to grow more jobs.

Mr. ALEXANDER. I wonder if I might ask the Senator from Arizona, one might look at the chart Senator GREGG has up and say that is not too big an increase in Federal spending, but of course the United States produces about 25 percent of the world's wealth. When we go up on an annual basis by a few percentage points, it begins to change the character of the kind of country we have.

How do you see this kind of dramatic increase in spending and taxing and debt affecting the character of the country as compared with, say, countries in Europe or other countries around the world?

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I would say that is getting to the heart of the matter. We can talk about these numbers all day. They are mind-boggling, they are very difficult to take in. But what does it all mean at the end of the day? I will respond in two ways.

First of all, it makes us look a whole lot more like the countries in Europe that have been stagnating for years because they spend such a high percent of their gross national product on government. As the Senator from New Hampshire pointed out, we are headed in that direction under this budget. It is a recipe for a lower standard of living in the United States and makes us look a lot more like Europe.

The second way goes back to the policy I think is embedded in this budget. The President has been very candid about this. He talks about it as his blueprint. He says this budget is not about numbers, it is about policies; it is about a blueprint for change. The Wall Street Journal on February 27 said:

With yesterday's fiscal 2010 budget proposal, President Obama is attempting not merely to expand the role of the federal government but to put it in such a dominant position that its power can never be rolled back.

That is the problem. It is the growth of Government controlling all of these segments of our lives. That is what this spending is ultimately all about, as the Senator from New Hampshire said, taking over the energy policy, taking over the health care, taking over the education policy, as well as running our financial institutions. It is not just about spending more money and creating more debt and taxing in order to try to help pay for some of that. It is also about a huge increase in the growth of Government and therefore the control over our lives.

In a way, the Wall Street Journal says, "In a way that can never be rolled back."

Mr. ALEXANDER. I wonder if either the Senator from Arizona or New Hampshire would have a comment on the way that spending was accomplished in the stimulus bill. For example, in the Department of Education, where I used to work, the annual budget was $68 billion. But the stimulus added $40 billion per year to the department's budget for the next 2 years. There were no hearings. There was no discussion about this. No one said: Are we spending all the money we are spending now in the right way, and if we were to spend more would we give parents more choices? Would we create more charter schools? Would we, as the President said yesterday, of which I approve, spend some money to reward outstanding teachers?

What about the way this is being spent on energy, education, and Medicaid, for example?

Mr. GREGG. I think the Senator is absolutely right. The stimulus package was a massive unfocused effort by people to fund things they liked. I don't think it was directed at stimulus. It was more directed at areas where people believed there needed to be more money, people who served on the Appropriations Committee, and therefore they massively funded those areas. Between the stimulus bill and the omnibus bill, there were 21 programs which received on average an 88-percent increase in funds for 2009 compared to 2008; $155 billion more was spent on those programs for this year than last year. That is just a massive explosion in the size of the Government. It is inconsistent with what the purposes of a stimulus package should have been.

The stimulus package should have put money into the economy quickly for purposes of getting the economy going. What this bill did was basically, as you mentioned earlier, build programs that are going to be very hard to rein in. The obligations are there. They are going to have to be continued to be paid for, and, as the Senator from Arizona pointed out, that was probably the goal: to fundamentally expand the size of Government in a way that cannot be contracted.

Take simply, for example, a very worthwhile exercise which is NIH. They received an extra $10 billion, I believe, on the stimulus package, for 2 years of research. Research doesn't take 2 years. Research takes years and years and years, so you know if you put in that type of money up front you are going to have to come in behind it and fill in those dollars in the outyears.

They basically said you are going to radically expand the size of this initiative. The same thing happening in education. The same thing happening in health care. That is where this number goes up so much, 23 percent of gross national product, and it goes up from there. The only way you pay for it is basically taxing our children to the point they cannot have as high a quality of life as we have.

Mr. ALEXANDER. I heard the Senator from Arizona say it was not just a $1 trillion stimulus package, that by the time you add in all these projected costs in the future, it might be much more.

Mr. KYL. I think the number was $3.27 trillion. I believe that was the correct number over the time of the 10 years.

The Senator from Tennessee certainly knows a bit about education. It all was not spent. There were some policies that actually attempted to reduce some costs—of a program that works very well, that thousands of people in the District of Columbia depend upon to send their kids to good schools. That is the program we put into effect to give a voucher of $7,500 a year to kids to attend private schools, kids who would never have that opportunity otherwise.

If I could ask a question of my colleague from Tennessee, since as former Secretary of Education he knows something about how to make sure our kids have the best opportunities for education in this country, why, with the District of Columbia costing about $15,000 a year to educate children and not doing a very good job of it according to all of the test scores, and thousands of parents wishing their kids had an alternative choice, somewhere else to go—when we create a program that provides a few of them, less than 2,000 a year, I believe, with a voucher that returns only half of that much money to the private school—$7,500, so it doesn't cost the public anything—why, when it gives these kids such a great opportunity, would our colleagues on the other side of the aisle, and the President, whose two daughters, by the way, attend one of the schools that kids would have to be taken out of because they can't afford to go there without the voucher—why would they remove that school choice and the voucher program?

Mr. ALEXANDER. It is very hard to imagine, Senator KYL. Just to make the point we are not being personal about that, my son attended the same school that the President's daughters attend when we were here and I was Education Secretary.

School vouchers may not be the solution in every rural county in America, but in the District of Columbia, 1,700 children who are low-income children have a chance to choose among private schools, their parents are delighted with the choice, and a study is coming out this spring to assess what they are learning. I do not know the motive behind this, but I do know the National Education Association has made its reputation opposing giving low-income parents the same choices that wealthy people have. That is a poor policy and one we ought not to have stuck on an appropriations bill like that.

The President has shown good instincts on education. His Education Secretary is a good one. But had we had a chance to debate this in committee and to hear from them, perhaps we could have had a bipartisan agreement that we need to pay good teachers more, we need more charter schools, and we need to give parents some more choices like these District of Columbia parents.

I know our time is running short. I wonder if the Senator from New Hampshire has any further thoughts about spending.

Mr. GREGG. I thank the Senator from Tennessee for taking this time. I think it all comes down to these numbers. Really, what does spending do? Sure it does a lot of good things, but in the end, if you don't pay for it, it makes it more difficult for our country to succeed and for our children who inherit the debts to succeed. When you double the debt in 5 years because of the spending, and you triple it in 10 years, you are absolutely guaranteeing that you are passing on to our children a country where they will have less opportunities to succeed than our generation. That is not fair. It is simply not fair for one generation to do this to another generation. Yet that is what this budget proposes to do: to run up bills for our generation and take them and turn them over to our children and grandchildren at a rate greater than ever before, a rate of spending greater than has ever been seen before, and a rate of increasing the debt that has never been conceived of before, that you would triple the national debt in 10 years.

It is not fair, it is not right, it is not appropriate, and it certainly is a major mistake, in my opinion.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Senator KYL, to conclude our discussion, this is the beginning of a process in the Senate in which everyone in this country can participate. We are asking that they consider: Can you afford this amount of spending, this amount of borrowing, this amount of taxes? There is a different path we could take toward the future.

Mr. KYL. Indeed. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Tennessee. As this debate unfolds, I think our colleagues will see that Republicans have some better ideas. We want to spend less and tax less and borrow less. We believe we can accomplish great results in the field of energy, for example, in the field of education, in the field of health care—much more positively, much better results in the long run with a lot less burden on our children and our grandchildren in the future.

As this debate unfolds, we are very anxious to present our alternative views on how to accomplish these results.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CARDIN.) The Senator is notified that 28 minutes has elapsed.

Mr. ALEXANDER. I thank the Senator from Arizona for his leadership and the Senator from New Hampshire for his views.

This is the beginning of a discussion about a 10-year blueprint offered by our new President about the direction in which our country should go. We on the Republican side believe American families cannot afford this much new spending, this many new taxes, and this much new debt. We will be suggesting why over the next 3 or 4 weeks, and in addition to that we will be offering our vision for the future. For example, on energy, some things we agree with, such as conservation and efficiency; some things we would encourage more of, such as nuclear power for carbon-free electricity.

This is the beginning of a very important debate, and the direction in which it goes will dramatically influence the future of this country and make a difference to every single family, not just today's parents but children and their children as well.

I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the time be equally charged to each side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Alabama is recognized.

Mr. SHELBY. Mr. President, I rise today with great concern regarding the nomination of Mr. David Ogden to serve as the Deputy Attorney General of the United States. There is no doubt that Mr. Ogden has a long record of legal experience. He also, however, brings a long history of representation of the pornography industry and the opposition to laws designed to protect children from sexual exploitation.

He opposed the Children's Internet Protection Act of 2000 that would restrict children's exposure to explicit online content. Mr. Ogden filed an amicus brief supporting the American Library Association in a case that challenged mandatory anti-obscenity Internet filters in public libraries. He treated pornography like informative data, writing that the "imposition of mandatory filtering on public libraries impairs the ability of librarians to fulfill the purposes of public libraries—namely, assisting library patrons in their quest for information. . . ."

Mr. Ogden also argued against laws requiring pornography producers to verify that models were over 18 at the time their materials were made. Think of that. He challenged the Child Protection and Obscenity Enforcement Act of 1988 and a companion law adopted in 1990, the Child Protection Restoration and Penalties Enhancement Act. Mr. Ogden argued that requiring pornography producers to personally verify that their models were over age 18 would "burden too heavily and infringe too deeply on the right to produce First Amendment-protected material."

Among the many cases in which Mr. Ogden has advocated interests of the pornography industry, none is more egregious than the position he took in Knox v. the United States.

The facts in the next case are straightforward. Steven Knox was convicted of receiving and possessing child pornography under the Child Protection Act after the U.S. Customs Service found in Mr. Knox's apartment several videotapes of partially clothed girls, some as young as age 10, posing suggestively. Serving as counsel on an ACLU effort, Mr. Ogden argued to strike down the 1992 conviction of Mr.

Knox. On behalf of the ACLU and other clients, Mr. Ogden submitted a Supreme Court brief advocating the same statutory and constitutional positions as the Clinton Justice Department. Mr. Ogden's arguments stated that while nudity was a requirement for prosecution, nudity alone was insufficient for prosecutions under child pornography statutes. Put simply, Mr. Ogden argued that the defendant had been improperly convicted because the materials in his possession would only qualify as child pornography if children's body parts were indecently exposed.

In response, on November 3, 1993, the Senate, right here, passed a resolution by a vote of 100 to 0 condemning this interpretation of the law by Mr. Ogden. President Clinton then publicly rebuked the Solicitor General, and Attorney General Reno overturned his position. Now the Senate is being asked to confirm as Deputy Attorney General someone who advocated the same extreme position on a Federal child pornography statute that the Senate unanimously repudiated 16 years ago.

The Supreme Court has "recognized that there is a compelling interest in protecting the physical and psychological well-being of minors. This interest extends to shielding minors from the influence of literature that is not obscene by adult standards." Pornography should not be regarded as immune from regulation simply because it is deemed "free speech."

Furthermore, child pornography in any form should not be tolerated. How can Mr. Ogden's clear position on the right to unfettered access to pornography not interfere with the Justice Department's responsibility to protect children from obscene material and exploitation?

When asked about this very issue at the Senate hearing on his nomination, Mr. Ogden said he hoped he would not be judged by arguments made for clients. If we cannot judge him on his past positions, what can we judge him on? Past performance is a great indicator of future action.

David Ogden is more than just a lawyer who has had a few unsavory clients. He has devoted a substantial part of his career, case after case for 20 years, in defense of pornography. Ogden has profited from representing pornographers and in attacking legislation designed to ban child pornography. Should a man with a long list of pornographers as past clients, with a record of objection to attempts to regulate this industry in order to protect our children, be confirmed for our Nation's second highest law enforcement position? Is he the best choice to actively identify and prosecute those who seek to harm our children?

Highlights of the Department of Justice's budget request for the year 2010 indicate an increased focus on educating and rehabilitating criminals, while neglecting funding for vital child-safety programs such as the Adam Walsh Act. I believe Mr. Ogden's past positions, coupled with the Department's growing trend to prioritize criminal rehabilitation over child safety, cause me great concern this afternoon.

There is not a quick and easy solution to the problems of child exploitation, but I can state unequivocally that we need a proactive and aggressive Department of Justice to take the steps necessary to attack this problem and demonstrate that protecting our children is a top priority. I am not certain David Ogden will bring that leadership to the Department; therefore, I must oppose this nomination.

This vote is made with the belief that a person's past legal positions do mean a great deal. I think if most Americans knew what this man has worked for and whom he has willingly represented, support for his nomination would disappear. I do not believe his legal philosophy, illustrated in the clients he freely chose to represent, reflects the majority's views on the issue of child exploitation. I know certainly they do not reflect mine.

TRAGEDY IN ALABAMA

Mr. SHELBY. Mr. President, I want to get into something else you have been reading about what happened in my State of Alabama yesterday. I offer my condolences to the families and friends of the victims killed in Samson, AL.

Yesterday, my State of Alabama suffered the worst mass shooting in our State's history. As this tragedy unfolded, our law enforcement responded bravely. I commend them for their actions and efforts. I also offer my sincere sympathies to the victims, their families, and the community. This is a tragedy that did not have to happen.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan is recognized.

(The remarks of Mr. LEVIN and Mr. GRASSLEY pertaining to the introduction of S. 569 are printed in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

Mr. GRASSLEY. I suggest the absence of a quorum and ask unanimous consent that the time be equally divided.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. SHAHEEN). Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BROWNBACK. I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BROWNBACK. Madam President, I rise to speak about the nomination of David Ogden to be Deputy Attorney General of the Department of Justice.

To summarize what I see in the RECORD, what I have read, I am very disappointed in the Obama administration for nominating this individual who is obviously talented but has also obviously chosen to represent, sometimes on a pro bono basis, groups that push pornography. He even represented interests against child pornography laws that we have passed by unanimous votes in the Senate.

Here is a gentleman who has taken up these causes as a lawyer. I appreciate his skill and ability as a lawyer. I appreciate his willingness to represent a client. But he has chosen to consistently represent pornography companies and groups. Even against the unanimous opinion of this body on child pornography cases, he has taken the other side. The message that sends across the country to people—when we are struggling with a huge wave of pornography, and then, at the worst end of it, child pornography—the message it sends around the rest of the country is this is a Justice Department that is not going to enforce these child pornography laws or is not concerned about this, when we have an epidemic wave of pornography, and particularly of child pornography, that is striking across the United States, and that this is harming our children. It is harming our society overall. Now, at the second to the top place of enforcement, you are putting your Deputy Attorney General who has taken on these cases, and sometimes in a pro bono manner.

I have no doubt of his legal skills. But the message this sends across the country to parents, who are struggling to raise kids, is not a good one. Our office has been receiving all sorts of calls opposed to Mr. Ogden's nomination because of that very feature—and deeply concerned calls because they are struggling within their own families to try to raise kids, to try to raise kids responsibly, and to try to raise them in a culture that oftentimes is very difficult with the amount of violent material, sexual material that is out there, and hoping their Government can kind of back them a little bit and say: These things are wrong. Child pornography is wrong. It should not take place. It should not be on the Internet. And you should not participate in it.

Instead, to then nominate somebody who has represented groups supporting that dispirits a number of parents and says: Is not even my Government and its enforcement arms going to take this on? Are they not going to be concerned about this, as I am concerned about it as a parent? I see it pop up on the Internet, on the screen, at our home way too often, and I do not want to see this continue to take place. Then along comes this nominee, who knocks the legs out from under a number of parents.

I want to give one quick fact on this that startled me when I was looking at it. It is about the infiltration of pornography into the popular culture, and particularly directly into our homes, and now it is an issue that all families grapple with, our family has grappled with. My wife and I have five children. Three of them are out of the household now. We still have two of them at home. We grapple and wrestle with this. Once relatively difficult to procure, pornography is now so pervasive that it is freely discussed on popular, prime-time television shows. The statistics on the number of children who have been exposed to pornography are alarming.

A recent study found that 34 percent of adolescents reported being exposed to unwanted—this is even unsolicited; unwanted—sexual content online, a figure that, sadly, had risen 9 percent over the last 5 years. Madam President, 9 out of 10 children between the ages of 8 and 16 who have Internet access have viewed porn Web sites—9 out of 10 children between the ages of 8 and 16 who have Internet access have viewed porn Web sites—usually in the course of looking up information for homework.

It is a very addictive situation we have today. I held a hearing several years back about the addictiveness of pornography, and we had experts in testifying that this is now the most addictive substance out in the U.S. society today because once it gets into your head, you cannot like dry off or dry out of it.

The situation is alarming on its impact on marriages. There is strong evidence that marriages are also adversely affected by addiction to sexually addictive materials. At a past meeting of the American Academy of Matrimonial Lawyers, two-thirds of the divorce lawyers who attended said that excessive interest in online pornography played a significant role in divorces in the previous year. That is two-thirds of the divorce lawyers saying this is getting to be a situation that is impacting so many of our clients and is so pervasive.

While David Ogden possesses impressive academic credentials, and he certainly is a talented lawyer, he has also represented several clients, significant clients, with views far outside the mainstream, and he has not, to my satisfaction, disavowed the views of these clients. He was given every chance to in hearings. He was trying to be pinned down by people on the committee about: What are your views? I understand your clients' views. What are your views? And he would not respond to those.

He said: Well, these are views of my clients. I understand the views of your clients. If they are pushing pornography, child pornography, want to have access to this, I understand that. What are your views? And he demurred each time and would not respond clearly.

Based on that record, I am led to believe it is highly likely David Ogden may share the views of some of his clients—of those who have supported pornography—and I cannot trust him to enforce some of our Nation's most important antichild pornography laws—laws that he has a history of arguing are unconstitutional. That is a position he took as a lawyer: that these are unconstitutional, antichild pornography laws.

In an amicus brief David Ogden filed in United States v. American Library Association, he argued that the Children's Internet Protection Act, which requires libraries receiving Federal funds to protect children from online pornography on library computers, censored constitutionally protected material and that Congress was violating the first amendment rights of library patrons. Now, that was the position David Ogden took.

In a response to written questions submitted by Senator GRASSLEY after his confirmation hearing, David Ogden indicated he served as pro bono counsel—for people who are not lawyers, that means he did it for free—in this case, further calling into question his personal views. If you are willing to represent a client for free, it seems to me there is some discussion or possibility you may really share your client's views on this issue regarding access to online pornography at libraries.

The Children's Internet Protection Act passed this body, the Senate, by a vote of 95 to 3 back in 2000. Ninety-five Members of this body believed the Children's Internet Protection Act was an appropriate measure to protect children from Internet filth and was constitutional because our duty, as well, is to stand for the Constitution and to abide by the Constitution and uphold it.

How can we trust David Ogden to enforce this law when he argued against it as a pro bono counsel?

In another very disturbing case, Knox v. the United States, in which Stephen Knox was charged and convicted for violating antichild pornography laws—these are child pornography laws but child pornography laws which I think are in another thoroughly disgusting category—David Ogden filed a brief on behalf of the ACLU and others challenging the Federal child pornography statutes. At issue in this case was how child pornography is defined under the Federal statutes.

I am sure many of my colleagues will remember the controversy that surrounded this case. As you may recall, Stephen Knox was prosecuted by the Bush Justice Department—during the first Bush Presidency—and ultimately convicted, after U.S. Customs intercepted foreign videotapes he had ordered. By the time his conviction was appealed, however, President Clinton was in office, and the Justice Department changed its position on Knox's conviction. Drew Days, Clinton's Solicitor General at the time, chose not to defend the conviction of Knox.

The Clinton Justice Department said: Yes, he is convicted, but we are not going to prosecute this. But the Senate, by a vote of 100 to 0—which is really rare to get around this place—and the House, by a vote of 425 to 3, rejected the Clinton Justice Department's interpretation of the child porn laws. The Senate unanimously said: Prosecute this. Prosecute this child pornography case.

David Ogden was on the wrong side of this case. I urge my colleagues to consider whether a man who has taken such extreme positions on pornography, and especially child pornography, can be trusted to enforce Federal laws prohibiting this cultural toxic waste. I am not convinced that David Ogden does not share the views he advocated in the Knox case, and I am concerned that at the very least he may be sympathetic to the views of his former clients.

I hope David Ogden proves me wrong and he demonstrates a strong willingness to enforce Federal child pornography and obscenity laws. These laws are on the books. I hope he enforces them. But I cannot in good conscience vote in favor of his nomination given his past record and the positions he has taken. His past positions have been far too extreme and outside of the mainstream for me, or I think for most Americans, and certainly for most parents, to be able to support him to be No. 2 in command of the Justice Department that enforces these laws.

I realize many of my colleagues, and likely the majority, are going to cast their votes in favor of David Ogden. Before they do, I ask them to please consider the negative impact pornography has had—and particularly child pornography has had—on this society and the important role the Justice Department plays in protecting children from obscene and pornographic material, particularly child pornography.

The infiltration of pornography into our popular culture and our homes is an issue that every family now grapples with. Once relatively difficult to procure, it is now so pervasive that it is freely discussed all over. Pornography has become both pervasive and intrusive in print and especially on the Internet. Lamentably, pornography is now also a multibillion-dollar-a-year industry. While sexually explicit material is often talked about in terms of "free speech," too little has been said about its devastating effects on users and their families.

According to many legal scholars, one reason for the industry's growth is a legal regime that has undermined the whole notion that illegal obscenity can be prosecuted. The Federal judiciary continues to challenge our ability to protect our families and our children from gratuitous pornographic images, and we must have a Justice Department that is committed to combating this most extreme form of pornography.

Perhaps the ugliest aspect of the pornographic epidemic is child pornography. This is where Mr. Ogden's record is most disturbing because he is outside of even the minimal consensus on pornographic prosecutions that exist. Children as young as 5 years old are being used for profit in this, regrettably, fast-growing industry. While there has been very little consensus on the prosecution of even the most hardcore adult pornography, there has been widespread agreement on the necessity of going after the purveyors of child porn. Despite this agreement, this exploitive industry continues to thrive. Every day, there are approximately 116,000 online searches for child pornography—116,000. I think we can all agree that we have a duty to protect the weakest members of our society from exploitation and from abuse.

I fear David Ogden will be a step backward—and certainly sends that signal across our society and to our parents and our families in this effort to combat this most dangerous form of pornography. For those reasons, I will be casting a "no" vote on his confirmation.

Madam President, I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

OBAMA BUDGET

Mr. HATCH. Madam President, a couple weeks ago the Obama administration released an outline of its budget plan for fiscal year 2010. The budget is a plan that reflects the President's agenda and priorities for the fiscal year.

The document with which most of our colleagues are quite familiar with by now is entitled, "A New Era of Responsibility—Renewing America's Promise." While this is a nice title for which I commend the President, it does not sound like the appropriate name for a work of fiction. Because of the impact of the policies outlined in this budget, a more fitting title might be, "How To End America's Global Leadership and Prosperity Without Really Trying." Even better, it sounds more like a 1973 Disney animation entitled "Robinhood."

In this Oscar-nominated movie about a legendary outlaw, I think a colloquy between Little John and Robinhood sums it up best. Little John said:

You know somethin', Robin? I was just wonderin', are we good guys or bad guys? You know, I mean our robbing the rich to give to the poor.

Robinhood responded:

Rob? Tsk, tsk, tsk. That's a naughty word. We never rob. We just sort of borrow a bit from those who can afford it.

Simply stated, this budget declares war on American jobs and on the ability of American businesses to save or create them. It is biting irony, since on the first page of the budget message the President said that the time has come, "not only to save and create new jobs, but also to lay a new foundation for growth."

The only thing this budget lays the foundation of growth for is more Government spending and more taxes.

Indeed, this budget is so bad, it is hard to know where to begin to describe what is wrong with it. But let's start with the tax provisions beginning on page 122 of the budget. Right there in black and white are the administration's plans to increase taxes on American businesses—the only entities that can create and save jobs on a permanent basis—by a minimum of $1.636 trillion over 10 years. I say "minimum" because the total amount may be much higher, as I will explain a little later in my remarks.

This budget is a masterpiece of contradiction. For example, it promises the largest tax increases known to humankind while promising tax cuts to 95 percent of working families. In reality, the President wants to play Robinhood by redistributing trillions of dollars from those who already pay the lion's share of this Nation's income taxes and give a significant portion of it, through refundable tax credits, to those who now pay no income taxes at all.

The budget promises millions of jobs to be saved or created but takes away the very means for the private sector to perform this job creation through increases in capital gains taxes, carried interest, and the top individual rates where most business income is taxed.

The budget is also contradictory to stimulating the economy. On one hand, it claims to provide $72 billion in tax cuts for businesses, but on the other hand, the budget raises $353 billion in new taxes on businesses, not counting the hundreds of billions—perhaps trillions—more in so-called "climate revenues."

The budget decries the role of housing in bringing about our economic crisis. It reduces the value of millions of homes by reducing the value of the home mortgage interest deduction. The budget talks about struggling families but reduces the incentive for taxpayers with the means to donate to charity to do so.

The President claims this budget is free from the trickery and budget gimmicks that have characterized those of previous administrations, but he then assumes the extension of all the 2001 and 2003 tax relief and the AMT patch into the baseline and then eliminates some of the same tax relief and counts it as new revenue. I could go on and on about other contradictions and ironies in this budget outline, and this is likely just a preview. Wait until we get all the details.

The budget outline indicates tax increases of $990 billion over the next 10 years in so-called "loophole closers" and "upper income tax provisions dedicated to deficit reduction." This is in addition to at least $646 billion more in so-called "climate revenues."

In short, President Obama is proposing to raise taxes at a time when we are in a recession. The last time we raised taxes during a recession, we went into a depression.

The President claims these tax hikes will not take effect until 2011, when he believes the economy will recover. This is in itself a huge contradiction. Why is it not a good idea to raise taxes this year, but it is OK to do so 2 years hence, when most economists believe we will just begin to recover from the most serious downturn since the 1930s? Huge new taxes in 2011 may be as dangerous to our long-term recovery as putting them in place right now. I find it very interesting that the new administration and many of our colleagues on the other side of the aisle recognize tax increases have a negative effect on economic growth. So please explain again why they would be a good idea 2 years from now. If the President believes the economy will have recovered by 2011, then why does he keep using the fear of a looming, deep recession to push forward his spending projects? Is it because he knows the economy will rebound with or without the "Making Work Pay" tax credit for funding for infrastructure? This budget would make the Making Work Pay tax credit permanent. If this credit, which costs the taxpayers $116 billion for just 2 years in the stimulus bill and would cost more than half a trillion dollars over 10 years in this budget, is a stimulus measure, as we were told, why is it included in the President's budget beyond 2011, when he predicts the economy to recover?

Let us take a look at the single largest tax increase proposal in the history of the world—a huge tax on middle-income people—the so-called "climate revenues" that are listed at $646 billion over 10 years. The proponents of this job-killing idea call it a "cap-and-trade" auction, but it is, in reality, nothing more than a gargantuan new tax on American businesses. Moreover, a close look at the footnotes of the tables reveals that this $646 billion is not even the extent of this new tax on American industry. The footnotes indicate this is just the portion of the new tax hike that will be used to pay for the Making Work Pay credit permanent and for clean energy initiatives. Additional revenues will be used to "further compensate the public." It sounds like more income distribution to me.

In a briefing of staff last week, top administration officials admitted these revenues could be two to three times higher than the $646 billion listed in the budget. That means this tax could reach as high as $1.9 trillion—a $1.9 trillion tax increase. That is insane. So what we have in this first part is a brandnew tax increase on the industrial output of the United States of America, a tax that has never been levied before and which could raise as much as $1.9 trillion over 10 years, and this budget says it is all right because the proceeds of the new tax will go to "compensate the public."

Now, this $1 trillion-plus tax increase will mean businesses will have less money to hire new employees or pay salaries of existing employees. How are we going to compensate the hundreds of thousands or perhaps millions of workers who are employed by these industries when they lose their jobs because their companies can no longer compete because of this new tax? Will that be part of "compensating the public"?

The next highest category of tax increases is almost as bad. The budget outline indicates it would raise $637 billion over 10 years by allowing some of the job-creating tax cuts from 2001 and 2003 to expire at the end of 2010. Now, these massive tax increases are touted as hitting only the so-called wealthy in our society; those who, in another part of the budget—page 14—are referred to as the few "well off and well connected" on whom the Government "recklessly" showered tax cuts and handouts over the past 8 years.

What this gross mischaracterization does not say is, many of these same individuals are the ones who have the ability to save or create the very jobs we need to turn our economy around.

What the Obama administration and many Democrats in Congress refuse to recognize is the fact that a majority of the income earned by small- and medium-sized businesses in America is taxed through the individual tax system. In other words, many of these small businesses pay their taxes as individuals, and they will thus be subject to these huge tax increases.

According to the National Federation of Independent Businesses, over half the Nation's private sector workers are employed by small businesses. Moreover, 50 percent of the owners of these businesses fall into the top two tax brackets which are the ones being targeted for big tax increases by the Obama budget. Let me repeat that. Fifty percent of the owners of these small businesses fall into the top two tax brackets, which are the ones being targeted for the big tax increases by the Obama budget.

The Small Business Administration tells us that 70 percent of all new jobs each year are created by small businesses. Why in the world would we want to harm the ability of America's job creation engines—small businesses—to help us create or save the jobs we so badly need right now? Why would we want to harm their ability? This is sheer folly.

President Obama claims he is providing tax relief to 95 percent of Americans. If you look closely, you will see that the budget raises the cost of living for lower wage earners. How? The budget raises $31 billion in taxes from domestic oil and gas companies. At a time when we are trying to decrease our dependence on foreign oil, we are forcing oil companies to raise the price of gas at the pump. This increase in gas prices at the pump will have a greater impact on lower income wage earners than on anyone else.

I think this cartoon illustrated by David Fitzsimmons of the Arizona Daily Star, with a few of my edits, says it best: We will create 4 million jobs out of one side, and we will raise taxes on those who create those jobs on the other. That is a little harsh, but it kind of makes its point. I don't like to see our President depicted this way, but I have to admit it is a pretty good cartoon.

The budget outline also opens the door to universal health care by creating a 10-year, $634 billion "reserve fund" to partially pay for the vast expansion of the U.S. health care system, an overhaul that could cost as much as $1 trillion over 10 years. This expansion is financed, in part, by reducing payments to insurers, hospitals, and physicians. Already I am being deluged by hospitals and physicians. How are they going to survive if they get hammered this way? Now, most people don't have much sympathy for hospitals and physicians, but it does take money to run those outfits, and to take as much as $1 trillion over 10 years by reducing payments in part to insurers and hospitals is pretty serious. Highlights of these reductions include competitive bidding for Medicare Advantage, realigning home health payment rates, and by lowering hospital reimbursement rates for certain admissions.

Almost one-third of the health reserve fund would be financed by forcing private health plans participating in the Medicare Advantage Program to go through a competitive bidding process to determine annual payment rates. I wish to remind my colleagues that in the past, Medicare managed care plans left rural States due to low payments. Utah was one of the States that was severely impacted. I know my State was hurt by it.

Many other States were hurt as well, especially rural States. To correct this situation, Members of Congress on both sides of the aisle worked with both the Clinton and Bush administrations to address this issue in a bipartisan manner by creating statutory language to create payment floors for Medicare Advantage Plans. As a result, Medicare beneficiaries across the country have access to Medicare Advantage Plans, and 90 percent of them seem to be happy with those plans.

By implementing a competitive bidding process for Medicare Advantage, choice for beneficiaries in the Medicare Advantage program will be limited.

It is unclear whether Medicare Advantage programs will continue in rural parts of our country—areas such as Utah, where Medicare payments are notoriously low. You can go on and on with the many small States that are represented by Senators on the Finance Committee—including me.

I served as a key negotiator on the House-Senate conference that created the Medicare Advantage program. I cannot support any initiative that I believe will limit beneficiaries' choices in coverage under this program.

Another outrage and irresponsible attack on U.S. jobs is contained in the proposal the budget calls "implement international enforcement, reform deferral, and other tax reform policies." This line item is estimated to raise $210 billion over 10 years. This vague description can really mean only one thing: The Obama administration plans to tax the foreign subsidiaries of all U.S.-owned businesses on their earnings whether they send the money back to the United States or keep it invested in a foreign country. This is similar to requiring individual taxpayers to pay taxes each year if the value of their home or investments goes up even if they do not sell them.

The real danger of this proposal, however, is its impact on U.S. companies and their ability to compete in the global marketplace. Almost all of our major trading partners tax their home-based businesses only on what they earn at home. The rest of the world taxes it that way. They don't tax their businesses for moneys earned overseas that don't come back. Those moneys are taxed there. The U.S. system is practically the only worldwide system in the industrialized world.

What this means is that an American company that is competing for business in some other nation—let's say India—may have competitors from France, the UK, and Germany. Because these other nations don't tax their companies on profits earned in countries other than the home country, they would enjoy a significant competitive advantage over any U.S. company, which, under the Obama proposal, would have to pay U.S. taxes on any profits earned. The result would simply be that multinational businesses would shun the United States and relocate elsewhere, as many have already done. A lot of Fortune 500 companies have left our country, in part because of tax ideas such as this. They don't want to go. U.S. firms will become ripe for international takeovers, and we would lose our global leadership, prestige, market share, jobs, and the bright future our country has enjoyed for decades.

In 1960, 18 of the world's largest companies were headquartered in the United States. Today, just eight are based in the United States. We have the largest corporate tax rates of any major country in the world. Can you imagine, if we reduced those rates, as I and other Republicans have suggested, from 35 to 25 percent, the jobs that would be automatically created? I cannot begin to tell you.

In 1960, we had 18 of the world's largest companies right here in the United States. Today, we only have eight based in the United States, partly because of these stupid, idiotic tax changes. If we pass this proposal, within a short time, there will be none. I predict that. The United States will be the last place on Earth businesses will want to locate.

I will show you this poster: Effect of Taxing U.S.-owned Subsidiaries. The United States has the second highest corporate tax rate. Again, in 1960, 18 of the world's largest companies were headquartered here. Today, only eight of the world's largest companies are headquartered in the United States. This is part of the reason.

The President believes our Tax Code includes incentives for U.S. businesses to ship jobs overseas, and this proposal is an attempt to end this practice. However, the evidence shows that our tax laws do not lead to U.S. job loss but to increases in U.S. employment when companies invest overseas.

We have all heard the accusations, time after time, right here on the Senate floor. It goes something like this: U.S. companies close their plants here, laying off all of their workers, just to move their production to a lower wage paying country, where those same goods are made with cheap labor and then shipped right back into the United States. Well, these accusations are largely unfounded. In 2006, just 9 percent of sales of U.S.-controlled corporations were made back to the United States. Our companies are not sending production jobs for U.S. products overseas. Instead, they are making products overseas for the overseas market, and they are doing it for solid business reasons, such as transportation savings, not for tax reasons.

Moreover, the evidence shows that the U.S. plants of companies without foreign operations pay lower wages than domestic plants of U.S.-owned multinational companies. This means companies that have overseas operations pay more to their U.S. workers than those that do not invest in other nations.

Studies by respected economists show that increasing foreign investment is associated with greater U.S. investment and higher U.S. wages. Overseas investment by U.S. companies is generally a good thing for the U.S. economy and for U.S. jobs. Attacking the deferral rule, as the Obama budget proposes, would do horrendous damage to our ability to compete in an increasingly global economy and will lead to our loss of world industrial leadership.

Just this week, I talked to one of the leading pharmaceutical CEOs in America. This leader and his family all came to America. They love this country. They don't want to leave. He made it very clear that if this type of tax law goes through, he is going to move to a more fair country. He will have to in order to compete. He probably will move his operations to Switzerland, where they are not treated like this. He doesn't want to do that—leave this beloved country—but to compete he would have to. All those jobs would go from here to there. I don't know who is thinking about this in the Obama administration, but they better start thinking about it.

I could go on about why this is the worst budget proposal I have seen in all of my nearly 33 years in this body. However, I will simply focus on one more reason.

President Obama has said this budget would allow us to reduce the Federal deficit by half over the next 4 years. While this is a noble goal, unfortunately, it is not one he can claim. Using the only common baseline there is, which assumes no change to current law, the deficit would decline—if we had no changes in current law—from $1.428 trillion in 2009 to $156 billion in 2013. That is including the expiring tax cuts. To put it in other words, if we do nothing, according to CBO, the deficit would decline by 90 percent over the next 4 years. Let me say that again. If we do nothing, the Federal deficit would decline by 90 percent, according to the estimates. President Obama proposes to reduce that decline to 50 percent by adding more Government spending.

I wish President Obama would follow his own lofty rhetoric. He says he wants to save and create jobs. We all do. But the way to do it is not through the job-killing policies found in this budget. He said it is time for honest and forthright budgeting. But this document is just a means for him to put forth his ultraliberal philosophy while claiming to be fiscally responsible. As you can see from this cartoon, the President talks the talk, but this budget doesn't walk the walk. Again, I know he probably laughs at these things, as I do when they do it to me. I don't want to treat the President like that, but it does make the point. He talks bipartisanship, he talks fiscal responsibility, but everything they are doing can be called irresponsible by good people who understand economics.

Look, I happen to like this President. I happen to want him to succeed. I care for the man. He is bright, articulate, and charismatic. I think that is apparent by the way the general public treats him. They want him to succeed. I do too. He doesn't write this budget himself. I don't blame him for this, except it is under his auspices that it is being touted. He has bright people around him. It is tough to find people brighter than Larry Summers; I think a lot of him. JOE BIDEN is very bright, and he knows a little bit about this. JOE admits that he is a self-confessed liberal. They are allowing this to go forward at a time when they are going to hurt this country rather than help it. I think we have to point some of these things out, and hopefully the President will see some of these things and say: Holy cow, I didn't realize this was in the budget. It is pretty hard because most people don't know what is in the budget. I doubt he has had a chance to read it. I want him to succeed, but he is not going to succeed with this kind of a budget.

This country is resilient, and maybe the country will pull out of this no matter what he does. I think we are in very trying times. This is the greatest country in the world. I don't want to see it diminished in any way. I am prepared to do things—people know that around here—to bring people together on both sides and help this President be successful. He has made overtures to me, and I very much respect him and I appreciate that. I want to help him.

I have to tell you that one of the reasons I am giving these remarks today is because I am very concerned about this type of a budget. We have put up with this kind of stuff in both Democratic and Republican administrations. It is time to quit doing it and start facing realities in this country. I see as much as a $5 trillion deficit in the near future. It is hard to even conceive of that. Yet that is where we are headed.

I want Mr. Geithner to succeed. Everybody knows I stood firmly for him in spite of all of the problems. He is a very bright guy, and I hope he succeeds. I will do what I can to help him, as a member on the Finance Committee and other committees as well.

They are not going to succeed with this type of budget. If they do, it will only be temporary. Our kids are going to pay these costs. They are going to pay for this mess. Elaine and I have 23 grandchildren I am concerned about, and 3 great-grandchildren. I don't want to stick them like this. I hope the President will get into it a little bit more, and I hope Larry Summers will get into it a little bit more. I think they have been taking advantage of a crisis to pass a huge welfare agenda that is going to hurt this country.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. INHOFE. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. INHOFE. Madam President, I have been watching the nominations from President Obama with quite a bit of concern. When I go back to my State of Oklahoma, people say: What would happen to us if we didn't pay our taxes? And I thought it couldn't get much worse than that.

I am here today to make sure everyone focuses attention on a couple of nominations that I think are outrageous.

First is my opposition to the nomination of David Ogden to be the U.S. Deputy Attorney General. Last year, Congress passed a significant piece of legislation, the Protect Our Children Act, to address a growing problem of child pornography and exploitation. Both sides of the aisle hailed it as a great success. Democrats and Republicans thought that was great; we are going to protect our kids against child pornography and exploitation. While I proudly supported that legislation, I am shocked President Obama has nominated a candidate to serve in the No. 2 position in the Department of Justice who has repeatedly represented the pornography industry and its interests.

As we are witnessing a significant increase in the exploitation of children on the Internet, we do not need a Deputy Attorney General who will be dedicated to protecting children with that kind of a background. David Ogden has represented the pornography industry for a long period of time.

In United States v. American Library Association, Ogden challenged the Children's Internet Protection Act of 2000. I remember that well. We passed it here. He filed a brief with the Supreme Court opposing Internet filters that block pornography at public libraries. He challenged provisions of the Child Protection and Obscenity Enforcement Act of 1988 which seeks to prevent the exploitation of our Nation's most vulnerable population; that is, our children. He instead fought for the interests of the pornography industry.

As a grandfather of 12 grandchildren, I am confident that I stand with virtually all of the parents and grandparents around this country in opposing gross misinterpretations of our Constitution some use to justify the exploitation of women and children in the name of free speech. That is what was happening. That is David Ogden.

Some claim Ogden is simply serving his clients. Yet his extensive record in representing the pornography industry is pretty shocking, especially considering he has been nominated to serve in the Government agency that is responsible for prosecuting violations of Federal adult and children pornography laws.

Let's keep in mind, he is in the position of prosecuting the offenders of these laws, and yet he has spent his career representing the pornography industry.

Additionally, his failure to affirm the right to life gives me a great concern. I don't think that is uncharacteristic of most of the nominees of this President. No one is pro-life that I know of, that I have seen.

In the Hartigan case, Ogden coauthored a brief arguing that parental notification was an unconstitutional burden for a 14-year-old girl seeking to have an abortion. In the case of abortion, parents have the right to know.

Furthermore, as a private attorney, Ogden filed a brief in the case of Planned Parenthood v. Casey in opposition to informing women of the emotional and psychological risks of abortion. In the brief, he denied the potential mental health problems of abortion on women. This is what he wrote. The occupier of the chair is a woman. I think it is interesting when men are making their interpretation as to what feelings women have.

He wrote this. Again, this is the same person we are talking about, David Ogden. He said:

Abortion rarely causes or exacerbates psychological or emotional problems . . . she is more likely to experience feelings of relief and happiness, and when child-birth and child-rearing or adoption may pose concomitant . . . risks or adverse psychological effects . . .

What he is saying is it is a relief. This is something he finds not offensive at all. He is actually promoting abortions.

We have to be honest. We need to talk about the mounting evidence of harmful physical and emotional effects that abortion has on women.

For these reasons, I oppose his nomination.

I also want to address my opposition to the nomination of Elena Kagan to serve as Solicitor General. Because of its great importance, quite often they talk about the Solicitor General as the tenth Supreme Court Justice and, therefore, it requires a most exemplary candidate. She served as the dean of Harvard Law School, which is no doubt an impressive credential. However, in that role, she demonstrated poor judgment on a very important issue to me.

While serving as the dean of Harvard Law School, Kagan banned the military from recruiting on campus. We have to stop and remember what happened in this case. In order to protect the rights of people to recruit—we are talking about the military now—on campuses to present their case—nothing mandatory, just having an option for the young students—Jerry Solomon—at that time I was serving in the House of Representatives with him—had an amendment that ensured that schools could not deny military recruiters access to college campuses. Claiming the Solomon amendment was immoral, she filed an amicus brief with the Supreme Court in Rumsfeld v. FAIR opposing the amendment. The Court unanimously ruled against her position and affirmed that the Solomon amendment was constitutional.

It is interesting, for a split division it might be different. This is unanimous on a diverse Court.

I also express my opposition to two other Department of Justice nominees—Dawn Johnsen and Thomas Pirelli. Dawn Johnson, who has been nominated to serve as Assistant Attorney General in the Office of Legal Counsel, has an extensive record of promoting a radical pro-abortion agenda. She has gone to great lengths to challenge pro-life provisions, including parental consent and notification laws. She has even inserted on behalf of the ACLU that “Our position is that there is no ‘father’ and no ‘child’—just a fetus.”

As a pro-life Senator who believes each child is the creation of a loving God, I believe life is sacred. I cannot in good conscience confirm anyone who has served as the legal director for the National Abortion and Reproductive Rights Action League. The right to life is undeniable, indisputable, and unequivocal. It is a foundational right, a moral fiber fundamental to the strength and vitality of this great Nation.

For a similar reason I can't support the nomination of Thomas Perrelli to serve as Associate Attorney General. Keep in mind now, we are talking about the four top positions in the Justice Department. And like other nominees I have discussed today, Mr. Perrelli has failed to affirm and protect the dignity of all human life, as an advocate for euthanasia, and I think we know the background of that.

I would only repeat that these are not people with just an opinion, they are extremists. We are talking about someone in the No. 2 position of the Department of Justice who actually has been involved in representing the pornography industry, and this is something that is totally unacceptable.

I think as we look at these nominations, I suggest that those individuals who are supporting these look very carefully, because people are going to ask you the question: How do you justify putting someone who supports pornography, who has worked for it and been paid by that industry, in the No. 2 position in the Justice Department?

With that, Madam President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota.

Ms. KLOBUCHAR. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent to speak for up to 7 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Ms. KLOBUCHAR. Madam President, I am here to speak in favor of David Ogden to be the next Deputy Attorney General of the United States.

I have listened to my colleague and friend from Oklahoma, and I am not going to be able to respond to everything he said about every nominee, but I did want to talk today about Mr. Ogden. He is someone who I believe should be our next Deputy Attorney General, at a Department of Justice that is much in need of a Deputy Attorney General, and he is someone who will hit the ground running. He will beef up civil rights and antitrust enforcement. He will address white-collar crime and drug-related violence, as well as help to keep our country safe from terrorist attacks.

We know the to-do list and the demands on the next Deputy Attorney General will be great. Part of why it will be so great is something that I saw in my own State. We had a gem of a U.S. Attorney General Office in Minnesota, and we still do, but there was a period of time where I saw its destruction and rot by putting one political appointee in charge of that office. It was a huge mistake. The office was in an uproar. They got away from their regular mission. Luckily, Attorney General Mukasey put in a career prosecutor, Frank McGill, who has put the office back on track, and I thank him for that. We have suggested—recommended—a new name to the Attorney General and the President for the next U.S. Attorney in Minnesota. But I tell you that story for a reason, and that is justice is important and order is important and management is important in our criminal justice system. We went so far away from that when Alberto Gonzalez was the Attorney General. That is why it is so important to have David Ogden in there to work with Eric Holder.

David Ogden has demonstrated intelligence and judgment, leadership and strength of character and, most importantly, a commitment to the Department of Justice. He has the experience and the integrity, I say to my colleagues, to serve as the next Deputy Attorney General. One of the most important roles of a Deputy Attorney General is to make sure that the day-to-day operations of the Department run smoothly and to provide effective and competent management guided by justice. I know David Ogden can do that. His experience both as Chief of Staff and counselor to former Attorney General Reno, as well as his experience as Assistant Attorney General for the Department's civil division under President Clinton proves that David Ogden has experience and the integrity to do the job.

I have heard all these allegations made, including by my colleague. I want to tell you some of the people who are supporting David Ogden. His nomination is supported by a number of law enforcement and community groups, including among others, the Fraternal Order of Police—not exactly a radical organization. He is supported by the National District Attorneys Association, the Partnership for a Drug Free America, and the National Sheriffs' Association.

The National Center for Missing and Exploited Children is a strong supporter. In fact, they sent a letter saying they gave David Ogden their enthusiastic support. In particular, they wrote:

... during Mr. Ogden's tenure as Chief of Staff and Counsel to the Attorney General, we worked closely with the Attorney General in attacking the growing phenomenon of child sexual exploitation and child pornography. As counselor to the Attorney General, Mr. Ogden was intricately involved in helping to shape the way our group responded to child victimization challenges and delivered its services.

It is seconded by the Boys and Girls Clubs of America, which also supports David Ogden's nomination. In addition to these law enforcement and child protective groups, David Ogden has received broad bipartisan support from a number of former Department officials, including Larry Thompson, a former Deputy Attorney General under President George W. Bush, and George Terwilliger, who served in the same role under President George H. W. Bush.

There are so many things on the Justice Department's plate, and we need someone to be up and running. But I want to respond specifically to some of the things we have heard today. There was a statement by one of Senators that Mr. Ogden opposed a child pornography statute that we passed in 1998. That is simply not correct, and I hope my colleagues know that. In fact, as head of the Civil Division of the Department of Justice, he led the vigorous defense of the Child Online Protection Act of 1998 and the Child Pornography Prevention Act of 1996.

There were also mischaracterizations, for political reasons, of Mr. Ogden's record. We have already talked about how he is supported by the major police organizations in this country. Well, in addition to that, he has a general business practice, and before that he served in government. His work at the WilmerHale law firm over the past 8 years, for example, hasn't centered on first amendment litigation. He has represented corporate clients, from Amtrak to the Fireman's Fund.

They also said that somehow Mr. Ogden took some position taken by Mr. Ogden's clients, who were America's librarians and booksellers. Rather, the Senate rejected the Clinton administration's interpretation, and Mr. Ogden made clear to the Judiciary Committee that he disagreed with that interpretation. In his testimony, he made clear that he is comfortable with the ruling of the Court and agreed with the Senate resolution.

You can go on and on about some of these misstatements about Mr. Ogden's record, but let us look at what is going on here. As I mentioned before, the child protection community supports Mr. Ogden based on his strong record of protecting children. Now, I tend to believe the people who deal every day with helping families with missing children more than I believe some statement that is made in a political context. I will be honest with you, I tend to believe the Fraternal Order of Police when they give an endorsement more than I believe some statement made in a political context.

Let me tell you this. Why is this so important? Why can we not go back and forth and back and forth and have all these political partisan attacks? Well, we need a Deputy Attorney General now. We need a Deputy Attorney General right now. The Department of Justice has more than 100,000 employees and a budget exceeding $25 billion. Every single Federal law enforcement officer reports to the Deputy Attorney General, including the FBI, the DEA, the ATF, the Bureau of Prisons, and all 93 U.S. Attorney's Offices. The Attorney General needs the other members of his Justice Department leadership team in place.

Look what we are dealing with: the Madoff case and billions of dollars stolen. We are dealing with childcare cases. We are dealing with administering this $800 billion in money and making sure people aren't ripped off. We are dealing with murders and street crimes across this country. Yet people are trying to stop the Justice Department from operating? That can't happen.

I want to end by saying I was a prosecutor for 8 years, and always my guiding principle was that you put the law above politics. That is what I am asking my colleagues to do here. We need to get David Ogden in as a Deputy Attorney General. Now is the time.

Madam President, I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DURBIN. Madam President, pending before the Senate is the nomination of David Ogden to be the Deputy Attorney General. I rise to speak in support of that nomination.

The Justice Department and our Nation are fortunate that President

Obama has put forward this nomination. Mr. Ogden has the experience, the talent, and the judgment needed for this critical position.

The Deputy Attorney General is the No. 2 person at the Justice Department. He is the day-to-day manager of the entire agency. This includes supervising key national security and law enforcement offices such as the FBI and our counterterrorism operations. Mr. Ogden is a graduate of Harvard Law School, former law clerk to a Supreme Court Justice, which is one of the most prestigious jobs in the legal profession. He had three senior positions in the Janet Reno Justice Department and served as her Chief of Staff, Associate Deputy Attorney General, and also served as Assistant Attorney General in the Civil Division, a position for which he received unanimous confirmation by this Senate. Mr. Ogden also served as the Deputy General Counsel at the Defense Department.

Given this excellent background, it is not surprising that David Ogden gained the support of many prominent conservatives. At least 15 former officials of the Reagan and both Bush administrations have announced their support for his nomination. They include Larry Thompson, the first Deputy Attorney General of the most recent Bush administration; Peter Keisler, former high-level Justice Department official; and Rachel Brand, another high-level Justice Department official in the Bush administration. Their words are similar. I will not read into the RECORD each of their statements, but they give the highest possible endorsement to David Ogden.

Due to a scheduling conflict, I could not attend his hearing, but I asked him to come by my office so we could have time together and I could ask my questions face to face. We talked about a lot of subjects, including criminal justice reform, human rights, and the professional responsibilities of the Department of Justice lawyers. I was impressed by Mr. Ogden's intellect, his management experience, and his commitment to restoring the Justice Department's independence and integrity.

We talked about the Senate Judiciary Committee's Subcommittee on Crime and Drugs, a subcommittee I will chair in the 111th Congress, and the issues we are going to face—including the Mexican drug cartels, which will be the subject of a hearing in just a few days, racial disparities in the criminal justice system in America, and the urgent need for prison reform. That is an issue, I might add, that is near and dear to the heart of our colleague, Senator JIM WEBB of Virginia. I am going to try to help him move forward in an ambitious effort to create a Presidential commission to look into this.

The Justice Department will play an important role in reclaiming America's mantle as the world's leading champion for human rights. Mr. Ogden and I discussed the Justice Department's role in implementing President Obama's Executive orders in relation to the closure of the Guantanamo Bay detention facilities and review of detention and interrogation policies. We discussed the investigation by the Justice Department's Office of Professional Responsibility, as to the attorneys in that Department who authorized the use of abusive interrogation techniques such as waterboarding. Senator SHELDON WHITEHOUSE of Rhode Island and I requested this investigation. Mr. Ogden committed to us that he would provide Congress with the results of the investigation as soon as possible. This is the kind of transparency and responsiveness to congressional oversight we expect from the Justice Department and something that we have been waiting for.

We also discussed the Justice Department's role in ensuring that war criminals do not find safe haven in the United States. I worked with Senator COBURN who is a Republican from Oklahoma, on the other side of the aisle. We passed legislation allowing the Justice Department to prosecute the perpetrators of genocide and other war crimes in the U.S. courts. I believe Mr. Ogden appreciates the importance of enforcing these human rights laws.

At the end of our meeting, I felt confident David Ogden will be an excellent Deputy Attorney General.

I want to make one final point. There is some controversy associated with his appointment that I would like to address directly. I am aware there has been some criticism that David Ogden represented clients whom some consider controversial. He has been criticized in his representation of libraries and bookstores who sought first amendment free speech protections, and for his representation of a client in an abortion rights case.

I would like to call to the attention of those critics a statement that was made by John Roberts, now Chief Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, when he appeared before the Senate Judiciary Committee several years ago at his confirmation hearing.

He was asked about the positions he had advocated on behalf of his clients as an attorney. Here is what the Chief Justice told us:

It's a tradition of the American Bar Association that goes back before the founding of the country that lawyers are not identified with the positions of their clients. The most famous example probably was John Adams, who represented the British soldiers charged in the Boston Massacre. He did that for a reason, because he wanted to show that the Revolution in which he was involved was not about overturning the rule of law, it was about vindicating the rule of law.

And he went on to say:

That principle, that you don't identify the lawyer with the particular views of the client, or the views that the lawyer advances on behalf of a client, is critical to the fair administration of justice.

You practiced law, Madam President. I have too. Many times you find yourself in a position representing a client where you do not necessarily agree with their position before the court of law. But you are dutybound to bring that position before the court so the rule of law can be applied and a fair outcome would result. If we only allowed popular causes and popular people representation in this country, I am afraid justice would not be served.

Chief Justice Roberts made that point when he was being asked about his representation of legal clients. I would say to many on the other side of the aisle who are questioning David Ogden's reputation, they owe the same fairness to him that was given to Chief Justice Roberts in that hearing.

I would remind the conservative critics of Mr. Ogden, look carefully at that testimony. What is good for the goose is good for the gander.

After 8 years of a Justice Department that often put politics over principle, we now have a chance to confirm a nominee with strong bipartisan support who can help restore the Justice Department to its rightful role as guardian of our laws and the protector of our liberties.

David Ogden has the independence, integrity, and experience for the job. I urge my colleagues to join me in voting for his nomination to be Deputy Attorney General.

CLEAN COAL RESEARCH PROJECT

Mr. DURBIN. Madam President, it was about 7 years ago when the Bush administration announced what they said was the most significant coal research project in the history of the United States. The name of the project was FutureGen. The object was to do research at a facility to determine whether you could burn coal, generate electricity, and not pollute the environment. It is an ambitious undertaking.

The way they wanted to achieve it was to be able to capture the CO₂ and other emissions, virtually all of them coming out of a powerplant burning coal, and to sequester them; that is, to stick them underground, find places underground where they can be absorbed by certain geological foundations, safely held there. Of course, it was an ambitious undertaking. It had never been done on a grand scale anywhere in the country.

Well, the competition got underway and many States stepped forward to compete for this key research project on the future of coal. There were some five to seven different States involved in the competition. My State of Illinois was one of them. The competition went on for 5 years.

Each step of the way, the panel of judges, the scientists and engineers would judge the site. Is this the right place to build it? Is it going to use the right coal? Can they actually pump it underground and trap it so that it will not ever be a hazard or danger at any time in the future? Important and serious questions.

My State of Illinois spent millions of dollars to prove we had a good site. When it finally came down to a decision, there were two States left: Texas and Illinois. Well, I took a look around at our President and where he was from, and I thought, we do not have a chance. Yet the experts made the decision and came down in favor of Illinois. They picked the town of Mattoon, IL, which is in the central eastern part of our State, in Coles County, and said that is the best place to put this new coal research facility.

We were elated. After 5 years of work, we won. After all of the competition, all of the different States, all of the experts, all the visits, everything that we put into it, we won the competition.

Within 2 weeks, the Secretary of the U.S. Department of Energy, Mr. Bodman, came to my office on the third floor of the Capitol and said: I have news for you.

I said: What is that?

He said: We are canceling the project.

I said: You are cancelling it? We have been working on this for 5 years.

He said: Sorry, it cost too much money. The original estimate was that this was going to cost $1 billion. When the President first announced it, we knew inflation would add to the construction costs over some period of time. But here was Mr. Bodman saying it cost almost twice as much as we thought it would cost; therefore, we are killing the project.

Well, I was not happy about it. In fact, I thought it was totally unfair, having strung us along for 5 years, made my State and many others spend millions of dollars in this competition, go through the final competition and win, and then be told, within 2 weeks: It is over; we are not going to go forward with it.

So I said to Mr. Bodman: Well, you are going to be here about a year more, and I am going to try to be here longer. At the end of that year, when you are gone, I am going to the next President, whoever that may be, and ask them to make this FutureGen research facility a reality.

I told the people back home: Do not give up. Hold on to the land we have set aside. Continue to do the research work you can do. Bring together the members of the alliance—which are private businesses, utility companies, coal companies—not only from around the United States but around the world interested in this research and tell them: Don't give up.

So we hung on for a year, literally for a year, and a new President was elected. It happened to be a President I know a little bit about, who was my colleague in the Senate, Senator Obama. When we served together, he knew all about this project and had supported it.

So now comes the new administration and a new chance. The Obama administration has said to me and all of us interested in this project: There is one man who will make the decision: it is the Secretary of Energy, Dr. Chu. He is a noted scientist who will decide this on the merits. He is going to decide whether this is worth the money to be spent. So we made our appeal to him, we presented our case to him, and left it in his hands. We are still worried about this whole issue of cost.

BART GORDON, a Congressman from the State of Tennessee and serves on the House Science Committee, he sent the Government Accountability Office to take a look at FutureGen to find out what happened to the cost, why did it go up so dramatically.

Well, the report came out last night. Here is what the report found. The report found the Department of Energy had miscalculated the cost of the plant, overstating its cost by $500 million because they made a mathematical error—$500 million.

Taking that off the ultimate cost brings it down into the ordinary construction inflation cost. And so many of us who argued their estimate of cost was exaggerated now understand why. They made a basic and fundamental error calculating the cost of this project.

Here is what we face. Now, 53 percent of all the electricity in America is generated by coal. Burning coal can create pollution. Pollution can add to global warming and climate change, and we have to be serious about dealing with it.

This plant is going to give us a chance to do that. When the GAO took a look at the Department of Energy documentation, they also discovered a memo which said: If we kill the FutureGen coal research plant, we will set coal research back 10 years with all of the time they put into it. All of the effort they put into it would have been wasted and could not be replicated.

So that is what is at stake. The ultimate decision will be made by Dr. Chu at the Department of Energy. I trust that he will find a way to help us move forward, but I want him to do it for the right scientific reasons.

If we are successful, we will not only be able to demonstrate this technology for America but for the world. The reason why foreign countries are joining us in this research effort is what we discover will help them. China is building a new coal-fired plant almost every week and is going to be adding more pollution to the environment than we can ever hope to take care of in the United States alone.

But if we can find a way, a technology, a scientific way, using the best engineering and capture that pollution before it goes into the air, it is a positive result not just for the United States but for the world.

From a parochial point of view, we happen to be sitting on a fantastic energy reserve right here in America. There are coal reserves all across the Midwestern United States, and almost 75 percent of my State of Illinois has coal underneath the soil. It is there to be had and used. But we want to use it responsibly.

We want to make sure at the end of the day that we can use coal and say to our kids and grandkids: We provided the electricity you needed but not at the expense of the environment you need to survive.

So this finding by the GAO has given us a new chance. We are looking forward to working with the Department of Energy. For those back in Illinois who did not give up hope, we are still very much alive, and this latest disclosure gives us a chance to bring the cost within affordable ranges. I hope the Department of Energy will decide to move forward on this critical research project.

I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. WEBB. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The remarks of Mr. WEBB pertaining to the introduction of S. 572 are printed in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

EARMARKS

Mr. WEBB. Madam President, I rise to address the recent debate we have had on the Omnibus appropriations bill with respect to earmarks. The premise seems to be, for those who have criticized the earmarks process, that this is pork. Sometimes it is; sometimes it is not. But I would start first with the Constitution.

There is nothing in the Constitution that says the executive branch of Government should appropriate funds or decide which funds should be spent. That is a procedure that has evolved over the centuries because of the complexities of Government, where the executive branch looks at its needs and comes to the Congress and asks for appropriations. Earmarks take place when individual Members of Congress, exercising their authority to appropriate under the Constitution, decide and recommend that worthwhile programs in an ideal case should be included in a budget process, programs that have not been considered or included by the executive branch or through other processes.

For instance, I was able, last year, along with Senator John Warner, now retired, to bring $5 million into a rural area of Tidewater, VA, so they could put broadband in. Broadband is something we know all Americans who want to compete for their future and contribute equally need to have. It didn't make it into anybody's bill. Who is thinking about sparsely populated areas such as rural Virginia? Yet we were able to bring a lot of benefit to those who otherwise would not have received it.

What I would ask my colleagues, particularly those who have become so adamant in their concern over the earmarks process, to consider is, let's take a look at the budget that comes to the Congress. Is there pork in the budgets that come over, pork that comes through, in some cases, unnecessary influence or individual discretion? You bet there is.

I say that as someone who spent 5 years in the Pentagon, 4 years of which I was on the Defense Resources Board where on any given day we were implementing a budget, arguing a budget in the Congress, and developing the next year's budget. I offer an example of a situation that my staff has been following for the last 10 months and use it as an invitation to colleagues to join me in looking at where there can be abuses of discretion and where there can be a lot of money that can be saved.

Ten months ago, on May 21, there was an article in the Wall Street Journal that talked about Blackwater Worldwide attempting to obtain local approval for a new training center in San Diego, CA. We all remember Blackwater. They are an independent contractor that has done more than a billion dollars of business since the Bush administration, the most recent Bush administration took office. I became curious about this project, first, because I had seen reports of what a very high percentage of the Blackwater contracts had been awarded were either noncompetes or minimal competes and the high volume number, more than a billion of them. And also the fact that having at one time been Secretary of the Navy, they were apparently wanting to build a training center so they could train Active-Duty sailors how to defend themselves onboard a ship.

Having spent time in the Marine Corps, I immediately started thinking about what it would have been like to have a nonmilitary contractor teaching me how to do patrolling when I was going through basic school in Quantico all those years ago. It didn't fit.

I started asking around. The first thing I found out was, this was a contract from the Navy that was worth about $64 million. I wrote a letter to Secretary Gates. I said: Is this Blackwater program in any way authorized or funded by U.S. tax dollars?

The answer came back, yes, obviously. I asked: Is there specific legislative authorization for it? Because I couldn't find any, as a member of the Armed Services Committee. The answer was no. According to Secretary Gates, this activity falls under the broad authorization provided to the Secretary of Defense and the Secretaries of the military departments to procure goods and services using appropriated funds and prescribed procedures for those procurements.

Then I asked him in this letter: Is there a specific appropriation, either in an appropriations bill or through an earmark? The answer is: No, there was no specific appropriation or earmark directing this effort.

As we started to peel this back, here is what we found. An individual, an SCS, midlevel individual in the Department of the Navy had the authority to approve this type of a program up to the value of $78 million, without even having a review by the Secretary of the Navy. This was not an authorized program. It was not an appropriated program. It was money that came out of a block of appropriated funds for operation and maintenance that then somebody in the Navy said was essential to the needs of the service, the needs of the fleet, which is a generic term.

I ask my colleagues who are so concerned about some of the pork projects or earmarks process here, which has gained a great deal of visibility since I have been here over the past 2 years and transparency, to join me in taking a look at these sorts of contracts. When a midlevel person in the Pentagon has the authority to approve a program that hasn't been authorized and hasn't been appropriated up to the value of $78 million and not even have the oversight of the Secretary of that service, that is where you see the potential for true abuse of the process. That is where we need to start focusing our energies as a Congress.

Mr. REID. Madam President, today we debate the nomination of David Ogden to be the Deputy Attorney General of the United States.

Mr. Ogden is highly qualified for this important job. He is a graduate of Harvard Law School and clerked on the Supreme Court for Justice Harry Blackmun. During the Clinton Administration, he served as the Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Division and as chief of staff to the Attorney General.

He also previously served as Deputy General Counsel at the Department of Defense, so he has a keen appreciation for the national security issues that he will face at DOJ. He has an excellent reputation among his fellow lawyers and is supported by a number of former Republican Justice Department officials.

It is surprising to me that we need to spend more than a full day debating this obviously qualified nominee. Mr. Ogden was favorably reported by the Judiciary Committee by a vote of 14-5, so it seems clear he will be confirmed. But apparently some far-right advocates have made this nomination more controversial than it should be.

As I understand it, those who oppose this nominee disagree with positions he took on behalf of some of his clients, including media organizations. In my view, that is a very unfair basis for opposing a nominee. As a former practicing lawyer, I feel strongly that a lawyer should not be held personally responsible for the views of his clients.

President Obama deserves to have his advisors, especially members of his national security team, in place as quickly as possible. I urge confirmation of this outstanding nominee.

Mr. LEAHY. Madam President, even after abandoning their the ill-conceived filibuster of President Obama's nomination of David Ogden to be Deputy Attorney General, we still hear Republican Senators making scurrilous attacks against Mr. Ogden, launched by some on the extreme right.

As I said on the Senate Floor earlier, David Ogden is a good lawyer and a good man. He is a husband and a father. Yet, regrettably and unbelievably, we still hear chants that he is a pedophile and a pornographer. Those charges are false and they are wrong. Senators know better than that.

Special interests on the far right have distorted Mr. Ogden's record by focusing only on a narrow sliver of his diverse practice as a litigator spanning over three decades. Dating back to the 1980s, Mr. Ogden's practice has included, for example, major antitrust litigation, counseling, representation and authorship of a book on the law of trade and professional associations, international litigation and dispute resolution, False Claims Act and Export Controls Act investigations, and a significant practice in administrative law. In other words, he has been a lawyer, representing clients. For the last 8 years, since leaving Government service, Mr. Ogden has represented corporate clients in a range of industries, including transportation clients like Amtrak and Lufthansa, insurance and financial institutions like Citibank and Fireman's Fund, petrochemical companies like Shell and BP and pharmaceutical concerns like PhRMA and Merck.

Here are the facts that underlie the overheated rhetoric: As a young lawyer in a small firm with a constitutional practice, along with other lawyers in that respected DC law firm, Mr. Ogden represented a range of media clients. He represented the American Library Association, the American Booksellers Association, and Playboy Enterprises.

In the early 1990s, while at the respected firm of Jenner & Block, Mr. Ogden represented a Los Angeles County firefighter. The firefighter was being prohibited from possessing or reading Playboy magazine at the firehouse, even when on down time between responding to fires. The Federal Court reviewing the matter held that the first amendment protected the firefighter's right to possess and read the magazine. That representation does not make Mr. Ogden a pornographer, a pedophile or justify any of the other epithets that have been thrown his way.

He also challenged a prosecution strategy that threatened simultaneous indictments in multiple jurisdictions with the goal of negotiating plea agreements that put companies out of business without ever having to prove that the materials they were distributing were obscene. That sounds like the kind of overreaching prosecution strategy that Senator SPECTER and other Republican Senators would condemn, just as they have the excesses of the "Thompson memo" pressuring investigative targets to waive their attorney-client privilege.

Those who have argued that Mr. Ogden has consistently taken positions against laws to protect children ignore Mr. Ogden's record and his testimony. What these critics leave out of their caricature is the fact that Mr. Ogden also aggressively defended the constitutionality of the Child Online Protection Act and the Child Pornography Prevention Act of 1996 while previously serving at the Justice Department. This work has led to support and praise from the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children. He has the support of the Boys and Girls Clubs of America. In private practice he wrote a brief for the American Psychological Association in Maryland v. Craig in which he argued for protection of child victims of sexual abuse. In his personal life, he has volunteered time serving the Chesapeake Institute, a clinic for sexually abused children.

Nominees from both Republican and Democratic administrations and Senators from both sides of the aisle have cautioned against opposing nominees based on their legal representations on behalf of clients. When asked about this point in connection with his own nomination, Chief Justice Roberts testified, "it has not been my general view that I sit in judgment on clients when they come" and, "it was my view that lawyers don't stand in the shoes of their clients, and that good lawyers can give advice and argue any side of a case." Part of the double standard being applied is that the rule Republican Senators urge for Republican nominees—that their clients not be held against them—is turned on its head under a Democratic President.

As recently as just over 1 year ago, every Senate Republican voted to confirm Michael Mukasey to be Attorney General of the United States. That showed no concern that one of his clients, and one of his most significant cases in private practice as identified in the bipartisan committee questionnaire he filed, was his representation of Carlin Communications, a company that specialized in what are sometimes called "dial-a-porn" services. It is more evidence of a double standard.

Senators should reject the partisan tactics and double standards from the extreme right and support David Ogden's nomination. The last Deputy Attorney nominee to be delayed by such a double standard was Eric Holder, whose nomination to be Deputy Attorney General in 1997 was delayed for three weeks by an anonymous Republican hold after being reported favorably by the Judiciary Committee before being confirmed unanimously. Like now Attorney General Holder, Mr. Ogden is an immensely qualified nominee whose priorities will be the safety and security of the American people and reinvigorating the traditional work of the Justice Department in protecting the rights of Americans.

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that on Thursday, March 12, the Senate resume consideration of the Ogden nomination at 12 noon and that it be considered under the parameters of the order of March 10; that the vote on the confirmation of the nomination occur at 2 p.m.; further, that upon confirmation of the Ogden nomination, the Senate remain in executive session and consider Calendar No. 23, the nomination of Thomas John Perrelli to be Associate Attorney General; that debate on the nomination be limited to 90 minutes equally divided and controlled between the leaders or their designees; that upon the use or yielding back of time, the Senate proceed to a vote on confirmation of the nomination; that upon confirmation, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, no further motions be in order; that the President be immediately notified of the Senate's action; and that the Senate then resume legislative session.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. NELSON of Florida). Without objection, it is so ordered.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to a period for the transaction of morning business, with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

OMNIBUS APPROPRIATIONS ACT

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, during consideration of the Omnibus Appropriations Act, members of the minority party attempted to attach amendments in an effort to delay passage of this important bill. Because further delay in passing this bill could have resulted in the shutdown of the Federal Government, I voted against all amendments to the bill.

I believe that this omnibus bill is important for job growth and will help revitalize our economy. That must be our concern at this critical time.

I would like to clarify my position of some of these amendments:

Amendment 630 would have required the Secretary of State to report on whether additional military aid to Egypt could be used to counter the illegal smuggling of weapons into Gaza. The omnibus bill already explicitly authorizes the use of military aid provided to Egypt for border security programs so the amendment was completely unnecessary.

Amendment 631 would have prohibited funds for reconstruction efforts in Gaza unless the administration certifies that the funds will not be diverted to Hamas or entities controlled by Hamas. The Omnibus bill and permanent law already prohibit any funds from being provided to Hamas or entities controlled by Hamas so this amendment was also completely unnecessary.

Amendment 634 would have prevented funds in this bill from going to companies that assist Iran's energy sector. While I have long supported tough action against Iran for its illicit nuclear program, sending this provision back to the House of Representatives could have endangered final passage of the bill.

Amendment 613 would have cut off all U.S. funding for the United Nations if it imposes any tax on any United States person. The U.N. has never imposed a tax, is not a taxing organization, and if the U.N. ever decided it wanted to impose a tax the U.S. would veto it. This amendment is unnecessary.

Amendment 604 would have extended the E-Verify worker identification program for an additional five years. The omnibus bill already contains a 6-month extension of this program.

Amendment 662 would prohibit the use of funds by the Federal Communications Commission to promulgate the fairness doctrine. On February 26, 2009, I voted in favor of an amendment offered by the junior Senator from South Carolina to prevent the FCC from promulgating the fairness doctrine. This amendment passed the Senate as part of S. 160, the Washington, DC voting rights bill. Also, there are no provisions in the omnibus bill related to the fairness doctrine, making this amendment unnecessary.

Amendment 604 repeals the provision of the Legislative Reorganization Act which grants Members an automatic pay adjustment each year. The amendment would take effect beginning December 11, 2010, and would require the enactment of new legislation to grant

Members a pay raise. I believe the junior Senator from Louisiana was doing nothing more than playing politics with his amendment, as he objected to passing a stand-alone bill offered by the Senate majority leader that would have accomplished the same goal as the Vitter amendment. I would have supported passing the majority leader's bill.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, earlier this week the Senate voted down amendment No. 668 offered by my colleague Senator ENZI by a vote of 42 to 53. I strongly opposed this amendment and am pleased that my colleagues defeated this harmful amendment.

The amendment, if passed, would have cut more than $983,000 in Ryan White Part A funding to the city of Hartford, CT, and more than $770,000 in funding to the city of New Haven, CT, in fiscal year 2009. The Enzi amendment would have forced these cities to absorb a combined cut of more than 35 percent to their Ryan White Part A grant in 1 year.

During floor debate on the Enzi amendment, the amendment was represented as a proposal that would simply cut funding from San Francisco. That is not the case and if the Enzi amendment had become law, thousands of individuals living with HIV/AIDS in the State of Connecticut would have been denied direct medical services for the treatment of their disease.

Cuts in funding as envisioned under the Enzi amendment would have deprived individuals living with HIV/AIDS in Connecticut access to medications, clinics would have to turn away patients, and programs would have to make drastic cuts to counseling, transportation, and nutrition assistance.

In fact, 13 cities in Florida, California, New York, New Jersey, Puerto Rico, and Connecticut would have seen huge funding cuts under the Enzi amendment.

For the information of my colleagues, the State of Connecticut was severely disadvantaged because of the way the last reauthorization was handled. Despite receiving assurances and seeing numbers that told a different picture, the 2006 reauthorization bill has led to more than $3 million in annual losses to Connecticut. The funding provided in the omnibus is essential to restoring these cuts.

It is my sincere hope that we can address the problems underlying the cuts to Connecticut when we reauthorize this program which expires this year. I find it regretful that the senate had to take up this funding fight yesterday because reauthorizations of the Ryan White CARE Act program have traditionally enjoyed bipartisan support.

I want to thank Senators HARKIN and INOUE for including the largest increase in Part A of Ryan White in 8 years in the fiscal year 2009 omnibus bill. With the defeat of the Enzi amendment, cities under Part A will receive a total increase of more than $25 million.

I thank my colleagues for defeating this harmful amendment.

IDAHOANS SPEAK OUT ON HIGH ENERGY PRICES

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. President, in mid-June, I asked Idahoans to share with me how high energy prices are affecting their lives, and they responded by the hundreds. The stories, numbering well over 1,200, are heartbreaking and touching. While energy prices have dropped in recent weeks, the concerns expressed remain very relevant. To respect the efforts of those who took the opportunity to share their thoughts, I am submitting every e-mail sent to me through an address set up specifically for this purpose to the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. This is not an issue that will be easily resolved, but it is one that deserves immediate and serious attention, and Idahoans deserve to be heard. Their stories not only detail their struggles to meet everyday expenses, but also have suggestions and recommendations as to what Congress can do now to tackle this problem and find solutions that last beyond today. I ask unanimous consent to have today's letters printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Thanks for asking our input. As Republican delegates to the convention in Sandpoint, my wife and I were pleased to help pass resolutions encouraging energy development.

I am really not sure what blend of ineptitude/conspiracy (not you, sir) to blame for not drilling in Alaska and off our coasts for the last 15 years, but I am glad to see that clearing up.

I do encourage domestic and offshore drilling; China is already drilling past the 16 mile limit off the coasts of California and Florida. (I gave a letter from delegate Jack Streeter to Bill Sali regarding this at the convention; he may recall it).

Also, I would like to plug Idaho developing not only nuclear power (I could go either way on that) but I really think, as our forefathers had the wisdom to use government resources to develop hydroelectric power, which we still benefit from, so we should develop wind power, in a state so blessed with wind, water and mountains!

Rather than our children inheriting simply an enormous U.S. debt burden, I would like to see us drill on a national level (Idaho might benefit from deep drilling, like the Russians are doing, 30-40,000 foot deep wells, unlike anything we have—that is how you get oil in high altitude regions like Idaho) and produce cheap, renewable energy from wind in Idaho to bless our selves, and children and generations beyond.

Please let me hear your thoughts; wind power for Idaho by state funding or even a U.S. bill would be an earmark few in the state would hold against you.

BOB, Mountain Home.

I heard on the radio that you want input from Idahoans on the subject of gas prices and ideas for solutions. That is why I am writing. In my opinion, this is a manipulated situation, designed to pull more money from the pockets of working Americans and put it in the coffers of corporate America and a few of the mega wealthy citizens. We have seen this happen before with the Enron debacle and the spike of electricity prices a few years ago. We have seen it with the .com stock market crash. We have seen it with the housing market crisis. This is but another symptom of the larger problem—corporate irresponsibility and subsequent government bailout.

The larger problem is the corruption in Washington. Corporate business cannot run government and have the citizens of the country be the winner in anything. The only solution to the problem of gas prices (and drug prices, and food prices) is to kick corporate lobbies out of Washington, step up to the plate and legislate for the people, not corporate. If this does not happen, next year's problem will be extreme food shortages in the U.S., as is happening in much of the rest of the world. Corporate farming giants are not producing as the old-fashioned family farmer did.

The other part of this problem is the [partisan blaming of] each other for the problems. Continuing along this line simply compounds the problems, and bipartisan solutions are not found. Again, the citizens of our nation suffer. I am one of a growing majority of Americans who are sick to death of hearing the yammering and in-fighting coming from Washington. At the rate our leaders in Washington are going, the terrorists will not have anything left to terrorize. Government and corporate corruption will have torn the country apart for them. You all need to put your party difference aside and come up with solutions with the other party for the good of the country, or there is not going to be a country anymore.

It is not just a fuel price crisis; it is a country in crisis, from sea to shining sea.

ANNA, Weiser.

I am writing in response to your recent request for input about gas prices and how it has affected our lives in Idaho. As you mentioned: "The driving distances between places in our state as well as limited public transportation options mean that many of us do not have any choice but to keep driving and paying those ever-increasing prices for fuel." I could not agree more. The opportunity for good solid employment in Idaho is not something that can be found too often in the little towns spread across the state. This of course means that if you want a good job you will have to commute. Being a single mother, I have had no choice but to find good steady employment. I have been commuting from west of Blackfoot to Idaho Falls to work every day. Due to the price of gas, I have recently been forced to sell my home and try to relocate in Idaho Falls. I have had to uproot my 3-year-old little boy from his daily routine and child care. I have had to move away from family and friends who helped with him therefore causing yet more costs to me in the form of more expensive daycare. It is so sad that my son will now have to be with strangers each day while I work to support the two of us all because I could not afford to commute a mere 45 miles to work. It is sad that I am forced to be secluded from lifelong friends and family because now that I am moving to Idaho Falls I cannot afford to drive to Blackfoot to see them. Sick—it is just sickening.

SHERI, Blackfoot.

Sir, you asked for input on energy issues. Here is mine:

First, I fully support nuclear energy. When viewed in terms of energy independence, being environmentally friendly (e.g., green house gas emission, waste), sustainability, cost and efficiency, it stands out above every other option. Wind, solar, ocean tides and the like may be reasonable supplemental energy sources in certain cases but they are not primary energy sources. The public needs to be educated on this.

Second, the gas tax holiday concept is foolish. It is robbing Peter-to-pay-Paul. We need that tax money for highway maintenance and construction. Also, a gas tax holiday would do nothing to increase supply but would increase demand (in the short term due to a drop in pump prices), therefore worsening the supply/demand situation.

Third, we need to aggressively pursue gasoline's ultimate replacement (e.g., ethanol) like Brazil has. E85 fuel is a prudent start. Also, we are at the door step to the hydrogen economy; we need to be seriously working toward it.

Regarding a response to this inquiry, just an acknowledgement that you received it is adequate. Thanks.

CHRIS, Falls.

The people of Idaho are affected by the energy crisis. This is why we in Idaho and across our country need to learn to conserve and to develop clean and safe energy alternatives which do not pose a risk for our children's future. I oppose the use of nuclear energy as it does pose a health risk however small. Remember Chernobyl and Three Mile Island. In addition, I oppose more domestic drilling. Harming our earth more just to feed our excessive oil habit is a short term knee-jerk reaction. I strongly hope that Idaho can be a role model for other states, by really looking at the problem and creating long term solutions such as conservation, more public transportation, and investment in extensive wind and solar power energy.

SHEILA, Hailey.

You ask for people to tell you their story about what the high cost of gas and energy is doing to them. Well, here it is. We live in rural Idaho. For those that do not know what that means, it is ninety miles to a doctor or a reasonably priced grocery store. Some people are going to say, "take mass transit"; we do have a subsidized transit system (it costs over $90 for the round trip). They also charge extra for more than one stop. It is cheaper to pay $4 per gallon for gas. Some will say "buy a hybrid" that would be nice if I could afford one, $40,000, and it will not do me any good. They get great mileage in town but at highway speeds, they do not get any better mileage than what I have. My family, daily, makes the choice "do we put gas in the car or do we buy food". I do not think anyone in government has ever had to make that choice.

I am so disgusted with our government and Congress in general that, I think, for the first time in fifty years, I will sit the next election out. In long-term results, I do not see an ounce of difference in the two candidates running for President. You need look no farther than congressional approval ratings. The government (all of you) have lied to the American people for so long that I believe you have started believing your own lies. You take my Social Security money and spend it to buy votes. You take the items out that we all have to buy to calculate inflation. Everything you do is calculated on a political power basis. You borrow money from my grandchildren to send me a check and tell me it is good for the economy. You have us so deep in debt that what money we have is not worth anything. I do not expect my Social Security check to feed me the rest of my life.

I guess I have ranted enough. You ask for it; there it is. I do not expect it to do any good. You will not do what the people want, you are going to do whatever generates you the most power wither it is good for the country or not. Drill here—drill now!

JESS, Aberdeen.

Like everyone, I have been very concerned about the rising cost in fuel, and everything else. I am trying to raise a family with my husband, and we definitely feel the pinch. Even as the price of filling our cars has increased dramatically, so has the cost of feeding our family. It is costing my husband almost $10 per day, in a fuel-efficient sedan, just to go to work. We also have my husband's brother's family living here to get back on their feet, so, of course, the cost of running our household and everything in it is a concern.

I wanted to tell you that I strongly support domestic drilling. It is something we should have done years ago, and should be implemented as soon as possible. We need to decrease our reliance on foreign oil! I also think that if we are to continue fighting for the freedoms of the people in the Middle East, we should expect that they compensate us, maybe with oil. I know the answers are more complicated than that, but there has to be something done. I would also, of course, support alternative energy sources. I have heard interesting things about algae, some of which you can see in a video here: <http://www.valcent.net/misc/Vertigro/index.html>.

I am not eloquent or succinct, but I wanted my voice heard. Please encourage Washington to lift bans on off-shore drilling, and also to explore domestic drilling. Also please express support for programs to research alternative energy; and anything else that will decrease our dependence on other countries for our energy.

Thank you for your time, and your continued service to our great state. Your representation is much appreciated.

JENNIFER, Nampa.

You are trying to find out the public mind on what should be done about the energy crisis and I really appreciate that. Thank you.

I am in college, married and working to pay for school. The gas prices have not helped me at all.

It is great that we are trying to get more fuel-efficient cars but, I would like to see cars that do not need fuel at all. (hydrogen fuel cell) The batteries for electric cars have harmful chemicals in them and are going to be expensive to replace and hard to dispose of. If we can push hydrogen we will eliminate a lot of our dependency on oil altogether, demand will go down; then the people who still need fossil fuels can afford it.

As far as powering the nation goes, I am a great fan of nuclear power. I started working at the INL outside of Idaho Falls; here I was educated on nuclear energy and radiation. Education was the key to convince me of the benefits of nuclear power. People are just scared of it because they do not understand it or radiation. If the public can be educated, I believe nuclear power can become much more feasible. Even new coal-fired power plants have a near zero emission operation and I would be OK with using our coal resource to ease the burden until a new energy strategy can be implemented. In recent years, windmills were placed east of Idaho Falls, and I like the idea of making the best use of the resources in our area. Some things may work well here, and other things may work well in other places. Researching what works best in our area and implementing that is a wise strategy.

Lastly, I favor drilling for our own oil. Self-sufficiency is a principle that applies not only to individuals but to a country as well. It is good to deal and trade with other nations, but when a crisis is present making us pay unfair prices we need to be able to step away from the problem and be able to deal with it effectively. However, that oil is no good without refineries. We need to make sure we can do something with the oil we produce.

Thank you once again for listening and hopefully this can help you in making a decision.

Rising fuel costs are a big concern for us here in Idaho where a large percent of the working public have to drive 30 miles or more to work each day. And even with fuel efficient cars it still takes a large chunk of change to keep the gas tank full I carpool with three other coworkers to help the situation. Even with the carpool, it still costs me $200 to $250 per month for fuel. We have family that live 600 miles + away and we can hardly afford to go see them. A trip to Reno costs over $300 so we have to limit our trips to visit because it is too expensive. Our recreation has been limited, too. We have a cabin that is in the mountains east of where we live about 40 miles away but, because of fuel costs, we do not go there as often. Fuel costs are also driving the cost of everything we buy. Where is it all going to stop?

I think that we need to become less dependent on oil from overseas and do more work on developing our own resources. We need to work on alternative methods for powering the automobile. Charge higher fuel prices in the areas they have mass transportation available. Do not hammer the work force with all the high costs.

ORIN.

High energy prices are affecting my ability to provide resources for living for my family. I am a disabled veteran and on a fixed income, which prevents me from offsetting the costs of oil. We have had to make significant changes in the way we buy food, travel to the store and how much gas we use for cooking and heating, often times being stuck with a $500 gas bill for a few gallons. The American people are smart. They know that Congress is scrambling to hide the real issue. That issue being, that they are no longer looking out for the best interests of the American people.

Though I am grateful that you and others in Idaho are finally trying to change things, this should have never been a problem in the first place. We have one of the world's largest resources of coal. We have very significant amount of oil on the coasts and within the continental United States. Still, you all bend to the wishes of eco-terrorists like Al Gore and that fraud agency EPA.

Drill now! Here! Kick China and other countries off of our coast lines. What were you thinking!! Letting other countries drill on our soil and coasts while forbidding and banning our own companies from doing it. That is obviously an attack on our sovereignty.

Please sir, get Congress back on track, and let them know we are on to them. For Idaho,

For the United States of America! Please allow refineries. Allow drilling. Allow coal. Allow more nuke plants! Now please, stop wasting your time with email and written answers. Action is worth a thousand words!

ADAM.

[We] converted [our] pick-up truck to all electric. Why does not Congress give tax breaks to people who drive alternative vehicles?

In our home, we are conserving energy by making our house more energy-efficient. Why is not Congress enacting legislation to reward homeowners for replacing windows, furnaces, appliances with more energy efficient ones?

Rather than expand domestic oil supplies (off shore and in Alaska), why does not Congress raise the CAFE and heavily tax people who drive gas guzzlers for pleasure (not business)? Congress should be enacting meaningful legislation to curb consumption before jumping to open up off shore resources and ANWR.

I think Congress should be embarrassed for talking about opening up domestic oil resources when they just defeated a windfall profit tax on oil companies. Higher prices at the pumps, record profits, a Congress who cannot do the right things to curb consumption and encourage conservation/alternative resources, a Congress who caters to the oil companies at the expense of the environment and the non-rich.

Come on, Senator Crapo—please vote, sponsor, support a government “of, by, and for the people”.

MICHAEL.

We still pay less than European countries. What I think is a total same is the fact that the Treasure Valley still does not have a decent bus system. When I was in Olympia, Washington (pop of 20,000) during the 1960s that had a better bus system that included other cities than we have now. Think of the energy savings possible if the bus system was easy and accessible for all of the residents.

MICHAEL.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

TRIBUTE TO EMMA JEAN GUYN MILLER

• Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, it is with great admiration and respect that I take this time to memorialize one of Kentucky's most cherished citizens, Mrs. Emma Jean Guyn Miller. Unfortunately, Mrs. Miller passed away at the age of 107. However, her life story should serve as an inspiration for people in central Kentucky and around the entire United States.

Mrs. Miller was born in Woodford County on September 29, 1901, and moved with her family to Nicholasville in 1902. Since she was young Mrs. Miller knew that she wanted to gain an education and better her community. However, since Kentucky schools were still segregated during this time period, Mrs. Miller could only attend the Nicholasville Colored School, that only served students through the eighth grade. This situation did not stop Mrs. Miller. Her mother, making only $4.50 a week, and her local church saved enough money to send Mrs. Miller to Russell High School in Lexington where she graduated in 1920.

After graduating from high school she attended Turner Normal School in Shelbyville, TN, and earned her teaching certificate. She then returned to Nicholasville and began a teaching career that lasted over 40 years. Mrs. Miller began her career teaching in a one room schoolhouse and did not retire until segregated schools were ended in Nicholasville. Her students remembered Mrs. Miller as a kind but strict teacher who always had their best interest at heart.

In 1940 she married William Miller, and although they did not have any children, the Millers opened their home to numerous young people in the community who needed a place to stay. She also continued to be active in Bethel AME Church, now Bethel Methodist Church, and was a member for over 80 years. This church was the same congregation that helped pay for her education at Russell High School.

Mrs. Miller's life story should serve as an inspiration to every American. Her uniquely American story should give us hope that we can make a difference in our local communities and change the world one person at a time.●

HONORING DANCEBLUE

• Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, today I invite my colleagues to join me in congratulating the University of Kentucky's DanceBlue student organization and 24-hour dance marathon. This organization operates through the support and leadership of UK students, faculty, and staff as well as the Lexington community. The organization improves the lives of children and families suffering from childhood cancer through the Golden Matrix Fund, and helps serve the Bluegrass by assisting those treated at the University of Kentucky Pediatric Oncology Clinic. In just 4 years of operation, the DanceBlue organization has raised over $1 million towards research in childhood cancer. I would like to take this time to recognize the student leadership behind DanceBlue: Erin Priddy, Caitlin Mullen, Betsy Cooper, Joshua Rupp, Carson Massler, Townsend Miller, Colin Wheeler, and Tyler Bolin.

Erin Priddy is a senior from Louisville, KY, and is the DanceBlue overall chair for this year. She is the fourth individual to preside over DanceBlue operations. Erin has spent many of her days and nights planning this year-long fundraising process which builds up the actual dance marathon, as well as being a full time student. The success of this organization would not be possible without the dedication and hard work of Erin.

Caitlin Mullen is the vice chair for the DanceBlue organization and is also in her senior year at the University of Kentucky. Caitlin's hard work this entire year on the budget for the organization, as well as maintaining the organization's committees and keeping them together are a value to the entire university.

Betsy Cooper is a senior from Paducah, KY, and is the dance marathon programming chair. Betsy's role with DanceBlue involves planning, organizing, and orchestrating the entire 24-hour period of which the Dance Marathon consists including overseeing 650 student dancers that will dance for 24-hours.

Joshua Rupp is a senior from Louisville, KY, and is involved with many organizations on campus. His role with DanceBlue is the rules, regulations and operations chair. He is in charge of the logistics for the dance marathon which took place this past weekend. Josh's influence and presence on the University of Kentucky is a benefit to the school and the community.

Carson Massler is a senior from Louisville, KY, and graduate of Sacred Heart Academy. Her role with DanceBlue is the family relations chair. Her position is vital to the organization since she serves as a liaison between the UK Pediatric Oncology Clinic and Golden Matrix Fund families and DanceBlue. The partnerships she has created serve as a sign of hope that this organization will continue to flourish for many more years.

Townsend Miller is a senior from Lexington, KY, and is the corporate relations chair. Townsend's role with DanceBlue this year involves maintaining relationships with corporate sponsors of DanceBlue, and he is the representative of DanceBlue to local and national businesses.

Colin Wheeler is from Bowling Green, KY, and serves as the marketing chair for DanceBlue. Colin's work on public relations, press releases, press kits and promotional materials is one of the main reasons why the organization and 24-hour dance marathon is such a big success.

Tyler Bolin is a senior from Owensboro, KY, and serves as the special events chair. Tyler has worked hard throughout the entire year planning events that help build up to the dance marathon. His hard work and motivation are truly an inspiration to all who meet him.

I am grateful that these students serve the people of the Commonwealth. I am confident that the children, families, and students whose lives they touch are all thankful for the opportunity to know them. The money that is raised through DanceBlue helps patients receive better care while improving the lives of children and their families suffering from childhood cancer. The funds are also going directly to pediatric cancer research initiatives that are helping to find a cure.

Mr. President, I would like to thank these individuals for their contributions to the Commonwealth of Kentucky, the University of Kentucky, and the Lexington community. I wish them well in all their future endeavors.●

HONORING NEW ENGLAND CASTINGS, LLC

● Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, the manufacturing sector of our Nation's economy is facing incredible hardships that are only amplified by the global economic downturn. In fact, Maine's manufacturing industry has shed an alarming 23,600 jobs in the past 10 years, which represents nearly 30 percent of the State's manufacturing employment. Despite these challenges, some manufacturers, like New England Castings, the company I rise today to recognize, have been able to adapt, expand, and succeed.

Founded in 1985, New England Castings is an investment casting foundry located in the western Maine town of Hiram. Considered the most ancient form of metal casting, investment casting allows the firm to specialize in producing specific castings that many conventional shops often find too difficult or intricate to fill. New England Castings prides itself on the timely creation of prototypes for customers to review, allowing it to produce customers' orders in a shorter timeframe. The firm was certified as a historically underutilized business zone, or HUBZone, business in 2002, allowing it access to a wide variety of Federal contracting opportunities. The HUBZone program, managed by the Small Business Administration, assists small firms in rural and disadvantaged areas in attracting contracts to benefit their businesses and grow their companies.

Castings, which are the solidified materials made after pouring a liquid into a mold, have a number of practical uses, and New England Castings' work is easily suited to supply a number of diverse industries. From medical and dental instruments to gas turbine components, New England Castings' products run the gamut from small to large, slim to heavy. For instance, New England Castings can provide sturdy turbine powered tank combustor cover assemblies for Abrams M1 tanks, or more delicate window latches or sconces for architects seeking to beautify their buildings. The company's more innovative pieces can be seen at Carnegie Hall in New York City and the Smithsonian's Museum of Natural History in Washington, DC.

Although times are difficult for most small businesses, manufacturers have been hit particularly hard by a confluence of challenges, including foreign competition, finding skilled workers, and rising energy costs. But to remain competitive, New England Castings had to transform the way it operated, and followed through by improving its practices and becoming a leaner company with increased productivity.

Seeking to secure a major contract to supply components to a railroad hardware manufacturer, New England Castings' president and owner, Walter Butler, decided that his company needed to become more efficient to earn the contract. After working with the Maine manufacturing extension partnership, MEP, a public-private partnership that assists small and medium manufacturers, New England Castings was able to double its sales, maximize the productivity of its workspace, and add 13 new employees.

As cochair of the Senate Task Force on Manufacturing, it is heartening to see small manufacturers like New England Castings utilize the tremendous resources that the MEP has to offer, and I am certain that the company will continue to benefit for years to come from the training and advice it has received. I congratulate Walter Butler and everyone at New England Castings for their dedication to creating quality products, and extend my best wishes for a productive and successful year.●

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

As in executive session the Presiding Officer laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(The nominations received today are printed at the end of the Senate proceedings.)

REPORT ON THE CONTINUATION OF THE NATIONAL EMERGENCY THAT WAS DECLARED ON MARCH 15, 1995, WITH RESPECT TO IRAN—PM 12

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, together with an accompanying report; which was referred to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs:

To the Congress of the United States:

Section 202(d) of the National Emergencies Act (50 U.S.C. 1622(d)) provides for the automatic termination of a national emergency unless, prior to the anniversary date of its declaration, the President publishes in the Federal Register and transmits to the Congress a notice stating that the emergency is to continue in effect beyond the anniversary date. In accordance with this provision, I have sent the enclosed notice to the Federal Register for publication, stating that the Iran emergency declared on March 15, 1995, is to continue in effect beyond March 15, 2009.

The crisis between the United States and Iran resulting from the actions and policies of the Government of Iran that led to the declaration of a national emergency on March 15, 1995, has not been resolved. The actions and policies of the Government of Iran are contrary to the interests of the United States in the region and pose a continuing unusual and extraordinary threat to the national security, foreign policy, and economy of the United States. For these reasons, I have determined that it is necessary to continue the national emergency declared with respect to Iran and maintain in force comprehensive sanctions against Iran to respond to this threat.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The following petition or memorial was laid before the Senate and was referred or ordered to lie on the table as indicated:

POM-10. A resolution adopted by the Senate of the Commonwealth of Kentucky urging the 111th United States Congress to enact a federal Menu Education and Labeling (Meal) Act; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

SENATE RESOLUTION NO. 76

Whereas, research continues to reveal the strong link between diet and health, and that diet-related diseases start early in life; and

Whereas, increased caloric intake is a key factor contributing to the alarming increase in obesity in the United States. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, two-thirds of American adults are overweight or obese, and the rates of obesity have tripled in children and teens since 1980. Obesity increases the risk of diabetes, heart disease, stroke, and other health problems. Each year obesity costs families, businesses, and governments $117 billion; and

Whereas, over the past two decades, there has been a significant increase in the numbers of meals prepared and consumed outside of the home, with an estimated one-third of calories and almost 46 percent of total food dollars being spent on food purchased from and consumed at restaurants and other food-service establishments; and

Whereas, studies like eating out with obesity and higher caloric intakes. Foods that people eat from restaurants and other food-service establishments are generally higher in calories and saturated fat and lower in nutrients, such as calcium and fiber, than home-prepared foods; and

Whereas, while nutrition labeling is currently required on most packaged foods, this information is required only for restaurant foods for which nutrient content or health claims are made; and

Whereas, three-quarters of American adults report using food labels on packaged foods, which are required by the Nutrition Labeling and Education Act and went into effect in 1994. Using food labels is associated with eating healthier diets, and approximately 48 percent of people report that the nutrition information on food labels has caused them to change their minds about buying a food product. Research shows that people make healthier choices when restaurants provide point-of-purchase nutrition information; and

Whereas, it is difficult for consumers to limit their intake of calories at restaurants, given the limited availability of nutrition information, as well as the popular practice by many restaurants of providing foods in larger-than-standard servings and 'super-sized' portions; and

Whereas, the enacting of a federal Meal Act would provide all Americans valuable additional nutritional information that will best equip individuals and allow them to make healthy choices when they are consuming prepared foods outside of the home: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Kentucky:

Section 1. The Senate of the Commonwealth of Kentucky hereby urges the 111th United States Congress to enact a federal Menu Education and Labeling (Meal) Act.

Section 2. The Clerk of the Senate shall forward a copy of this Resolution to the Clerk of the United States Senate and the Clerk of the United States House of Representatives.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. LEVIN (for himself, Mr. GRASSLEY, and Mrs. MCCASKILL)

S. 569. A bill to ensure that persons who form corporations in the United States disclose the beneficial owners of those corporations, in order to prevent wrongdoers from exploiting United States corporations for criminal gain, to assist law enforcement in detecting, preventing, and punishing terrorism, money laundering, and other misconduct involving United States corporations, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I am introducing today, with my colleagues

Senator GRASSLEY and Senator MCCASKILL, the Incorporation Transparency and Law Enforcement Assistance Act. This bill tackles a longstanding homeland security problem involving inadequate State incorporation practices that leave this country unnecessarily vulnerable to wrongdoers, hinders law enforcement, and damages the international stature of the United States.

The problem is straightforward. Each year, our States allow persons to form nearly 2 million corporations and limited liability companies in this country without knowing, or even asking, who the beneficial owners are behind those corporations. Right now, a person forming a U.S. corporation or limited liability company, LLC, provides less information to the State than is required to open a bank account or obtain a driver's license. Instead, States routinely permit persons to form corporations and LLCs under State laws without disclosing the names of any of the people who will control or benefit from them.

It is a fact that criminals are exploiting this weakness in our State incorporation practices. They are forming new U.S. corporations and LLCs, and using these entities to commit crimes ranging from drug trafficking, money laundering, tax evasion, financial fraud, and corruption.

Law enforcement authorities investigating these crimes have complained loudly for years about the lack of beneficial ownership information. Last year, for example, the U.S. Department of the Treasury sent a letter to the States stating: "the lack of transparency with respect to the individuals who control privately held for-profit legal entities created in the United States continues to represent a substantial vulnerability in the U.S. anti-money laundering/counter terrorist financing (AML/CFT) regime. . . . [T]he use of U.S. companies to mask the identity of criminals presents an ongoing and substantial problem . . . for U.S. and global law enforcement authorities."

Michael Chertoff, former Secretary of the U.S. Department of Homeland Security, wrote the following:

In countless investigations, where the criminal targets utilize shell corporations, the lack of law enforcement's ability to gain access to true beneficial ownership information slows, confuses or impedes the efforts by investigators to follow criminal proceeds. This is the case in financial fraud, terrorist financing and money laundering investigations. . . . It is imperative that States maintain beneficial ownership information while the company is active and to have a set time frame for preserving those records. . . . Shell companies can be sold and resold to several beneficial owners in the course of a year or less. . . . By maintaining records not only of the initial beneficial ownership but of the subsequent beneficial owners, States will provide law enforcement the tools necessary to clearly identify the individuals who utilized the company at any given period of time.

These types of complaints by U.S. law enforcement, their pleas for assistance, and their warnings about the dangers of anonymous U.S. corporations operating here and abroad are catalogued in a stack of reports and hearing testimony from the Department of Justice, the Department of Homeland Security, the Financial Crimes Enforcement Network of the Department of the Treasury, the Internal Revenue Service, and others.

To add insult to injury, our law enforcement officials have too often had to stand silent when asked by their counterparts in other countries for information about who owns a U.S. corporation committing crimes in their jurisdictions. The reality is that the United States can't answer those requests, because we don't have the information.

Our bill would cure the problem by requiring State incorporation forms to include a request for the names of a corporation's beneficial owners. States would not be required to verify the information, but civil or criminal penalties would apply to persons who submitted false information. If law enforcement issued a subpoena or summons to obtain the ownership information, States would then supply the data contained on its forms.

This bill has received the support of numerous law enforcement associations, including the Federal Law Enforcement Officers Association, the Fraternal Order of Police, the National Association of Assistant United States Attorneys, the National Narcotic Officers' Associations Coalition, the United States Marshals Service Association, and the Association of Former ATF Agents.

The Federal Law Enforcement Officers Association, FLEOA, for example, which represents more than 26,000 Federal law enforcement officers, states that "the unfortunate lax attitude demonstrated by certain states has enabled large criminal enterprises to exploit those state's flawed filing systems." FLEOA goes on:

We regard corporate ownership in the same manner as we do vehicle ownership. Requiring the driver of a vehicle to have a registration and insurance card is not a violation of their privacy. This information does not need to be published in a Yellow Pages, but it should be available to law enforcement officers who make legally authorized requests pursuant to official investigations.

The National Association of Assistant United States Attorneys, NAAUSA, which represents more than 1,500 Federal prosecutors, urges Congress to take legislative action to remedy inadequate State incorporation practices. NAAUSA states:

[M]indful of the ease with which criminals establish 'front organizations' to assist in money laundering, terrorist financing, tax evasion and other misconduct, it is shocking and unacceptable that many State laws permit the creation of corporations without asking for the identity of the corporation's beneficial owners. Your legislation will guard against that from happening, and no longer permit criminals to exploit the lack of transparency in the registration of corporations.

Our bill was also endorsed by President Obama during the last Congress when he was a member of the U.S. Senate and served as an original cosponsor of the predecessor bill, S. 2956.

In 2006, the leading international anti-money laundering body in the world, the Financial Action Task Force on Money Laundering—known as FATF—issued a report criticizing the United States for its failure to comply with a FATF standard requiring countries to obtain beneficial ownership information for the corporations formed under their laws. This standard is one of 40 FATF standards that this country has publicly committed itself to implementing as part of its efforts to promote strong anti-money laundering laws around the world.

FATF gave the United States 2 years, until July 2008, to make progress toward coming into compliance with the FATF standard on beneficial ownership information. That deadline passed long ago, and we have yet to make any real progress. Enacting the bill we are introducing today would bring the United States into compliance with the FATF standard by requiring the States to obtain beneficial ownership information for the corporations formed under their laws. It would ensure that the United States met its international commitment to comply with FATF anti-money laundering standards.

The bill being introduced today is also the product of years of work by the U.S. Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations, which I chair. As long ago as 2000, the Government Accountability Office, GAO, at my request, conducted an investigation and released a report entitled, "Suspicious Banking Activities: Possible Money Laundering by U.S. Corporations Formed for Russian Entities." This report revealed that one person was able to set up more than 2,000 Delaware shell corporations and, without disclosing the identity of the beneficial owners, open U.S. bank accounts for those corporations, which then collectively moved about $1.4 billion through the accounts. It is one of the earliest government reports to give some sense of the law enforcement problems caused by U.S. corporations with unknown owners. It sounded the alarm years ago but to little avail.

In April 2006, in response to a Subcommittee request, GAO released a second report entitled, "Company Formations: Minimal Ownership Information Is Collected and Available," which reviewed the corporate formation laws in all 50 States. GAO disclosed that the vast majority of the States do not collect any information at all on the beneficial owners of the corporations and LLCs formed under their laws. The report also found that many States have established automated procedures that allow a person to form a new corporation or LLC within the State within 24 hours of filing an online application without any prior review of that application by a State official. In exchange for a substantial fee, at least two States will form a corporation or LLC within one hour of a request. After examining these State incorporation practices, the GAO report described the problems that the lack of beneficial ownership information has caused for a range of law enforcement investigations.

In November 2006, our subcommittee held a hearing further exploring this issue. At that hearing, representatives of the U.S. Department of Justice, DOJ, the Internal Revenue Service, IRS, and the Department of Treasury's Financial Crimes Enforcement Network, FinCEN, testified that the failure of States to collect adequate information on the beneficial owners of the legal entities they form has impeded Federal efforts to investigate and prosecute criminal acts such as terrorism, money laundering, securities fraud, and tax evasion. At the hearing, DOJ testified:

We had allegations of corrupt foreign officials using these [U.S.] shell accounts to launder money, but were unable—due to lack of identifying information in the corporate records—to fully investigate this area.

The IRS testified:

Within our own borders, the laws of some states regarding the formation of legal entities have significant transparency gaps which may even rival the secrecy afforded in the most attractive tax havens.

FinCEN identified 768 incidents of suspicious international wire transfer activity involving U.S. shell companies.

In addition, in a list of the "Dirty Dozen" tax scams in 2007, the IRS highlighted shell companies with unknown owners as number four on the list, as follows:

4. Disguised Corporate Ownership: Domestic shell corporations and other entities are being formed and operated in certain states for the purpose of disguising the ownership of the business or financial activity. Once formed, these anonymous entities can be, and are being, used to facilitate under-reporting of income, non-filing of tax returns, listed transactions, money laundering, financial crimes and possibly terrorist financing. The IRS is working with state authorities to identify these entities and to bring their owners into compliance.

That is not all. Dozens of Internet websites advertising corporate formation services highlight the fact that some of our States allow corporations to be formed under their laws without asking for the identity of the beneficial owners. These Web sites explicitly point to anonymous ownership as a reason to incorporate within the United States, and often list certain States alongside notorious offshore jurisdictions as preferred locations for the formation of new corporations, essentially providing an open invitation for wrongdoers to form entities within the United States.

One Web site, for example, set up by an international incorporation firm, advocates setting up companies in Delaware by saying: "DELAWARE—An Offshore Tax Haven for Non U.S. Residents." It cites as one of Delaware's advantages that: "Owners' names are not disclosed to the state." Another Web site, from a U.K. firm called "formacompanyoffshore.com," lists the advantages to incorporating in Nevada. Those advantages include: "No I.R.S. Information Sharing Agreement" and "Stockholders are not on Public Record allowing complete anonymity."

Despite this type of advertising, years of law enforcement complaints, and mounting evidence of abuse, many of our States are reluctant to admit there is a problem with establishing U.S. corporations and LLCs with unknown owners. Too many of our States are eager to explain how quick and easy it is to set up corporations within their borders, without acknowledging that those same quick and easy procedures enable wrongdoers to utilize U.S. corporations in a variety of crimes and tax dodges both here and abroad.

Since 2006, the subcommittee has worked with the States to encourage them to recognize the homeland security problem they have created and to come up with their own solution. After the subcommittee's hearing on this issue, for example, the National Association of Secretaries of State, NASS, convened a 2007 task force to examine state incorporation practices. At the request of NASS and several States, I delayed introducing legislation while they worked on a proposal to require the collection of beneficial ownership information. My subcommittee staff participated in multiple conferences, telephone calls, and meetings; suggested key principles; and provided comments to the task force.

In July 2007, the NASS task force issued a proposal. Rather than cure the problem, however, the proposal was full of deficiencies, leading the Treasury Department to state in a letter that the NASS proposal "falls short" and "does not fully address the problem of legal entities masking the identity of criminals."

Among other shortcomings, the NASS proposal does not require States to obtain the names of the natural individuals who would be the beneficial owners of a U.S. corporation or LLC. Instead, it would allow States to obtain a list of a company's "owners of record" who can be, and often are, offshore corporations or trusts. The NASS proposal also doesn't require the States themselves to maintain the beneficial ownership information, or to supply it to law enforcement upon receipt of a subpoena or summons. The proposal also fails to require the beneficial ownership information to be updated over time. These and other flaws in the proposal have been identified by the Treasury Department, the Department of Justice, me, and others, but NASS has given no indication that the flaws will be corrected.

It is deeply disappointing that the States, despite the passage of more than 1 year, were unable to devise an effective proposal. Part of the difficulty is that the States have a wide range of practices, differ on the extent to which they rely on incorporation fees as a major source of revenue, and differ on the extent to which they attract non-U.S. persons as incorporators. In addition, the States are competing against each other to attract persons who want to set up U.S. corporations, and that competition creates pressure for each individual State to favor procedures that allow quick and easy incorporations. It is a classic case of competition causing a race to the bottom, making it difficult for any one State to do the right thing and request the names of beneficial owners.

That is why we are introducing Federal legislation today. Federal legislation is needed to level the playing field among the States, set minimum standards for obtaining beneficial ownership information, put an end to the practice of States forming millions of legal entities each year without knowing who is behind them, and bring the United States into compliance with its international commitments.

The bill's provisions would require the States to obtain a list of the beneficial owners of each corporation or LLC formed under their laws, to maintain this information for 5 years after the corporation is terminated, and to provide the information to law enforcement upon receipt of a subpoena or summons. If enacted, this bill would ensure, for the first time, that law enforcement seeking beneficial ownership information from a State about one of its corporations or LLCs would not be turned away empty-handed.

The bill would also require corporations and LLCs to update their beneficial ownership information in an annual filing with the State of incorporation. If a State did not require an annual filing, the information would have to be updated each time the beneficial ownership changed.

In the special case of U.S. corporations formed by non-U.S. persons, the bill would go farther. Following the lead of the Patriot Act which imposed additional due diligence requirements on certain financial accounts opened by non-U.S. persons, our bill would require additional due diligence for corporations beneficially owned by non-U.S. persons. This added due diligence would have to be performed—not by the States—but by the persons seeking to establish the corporations. These incorporators would have to file with the State a written certification from a corporate formation agent residing within the State attesting to the fact that the agent had verified the identity of the non-U.S. beneficial owners of the corporation by obtaining their names, addresses, and passport photographs. The formation agent would be required to retain this information for a specified period of time and produce it upon request.

The bill would not require the States to verify the ownership information provided to them by a formation agent, corporation, LLC, or other person filing an incorporation application. Instead, the bill would establish Federal civil and criminal penalties for anyone who knowingly provided a State with false beneficial ownership information or intentionally failed to provide the State with the information requested.

The bill would also exempt certain corporations from the disclosure obligation. For example, it would exempt all publicly traded corporations and the entities they form, since these corporations are already overseen by the Security and Exchange Commission. It would also allow the States, with the written concurrence of the Homeland Security Secretary and the U.S. Attorney General, to identify certain corporations, either individually or as a class, which would not have to list their beneficial owners, if requiring such ownership information would not serve the public interest or assist law enforcement in their investigations. These exemptions are expected to be narrowly drawn and used sparingly, but are intended to provide the States and Federal law enforcement added flexibility to fine-tune the disclosure obligation and focus it where it is most needed to stop crime, tax evasion, and other wrongdoing.

Another area of flexibility in the bill involves privacy issues. The bill deliberately does not take a position on the issue of whether the States should make the beneficial ownership information they receive available to the public. Instead, the bill leaves it entirely up to the States to decide whether and under what circumstances to make beneficial ownership information available to the public. The bill explicitly permits the States to place restrictions on providing beneficial ownership information to persons other than government officials. The bill focuses instead on ensuring that law enforcement and Congress, provided they are equipped with a subpoena or summons, are given ready access to the beneficial ownership information collected by the States.

To ensure that the States have the funds needed to meet the new beneficial ownership information requirements, the bill makes it clear that States can use their DHS state grant funds for this purpose. Every State is guaranteed a minimum amount of DHS grant funds every year and may receive funds substantially above that minimum. Every State will be able to use all or a portion of these funds to modify their incorporation practices to meet the requirements in the act. The bill also authorizes DHS to use appropriated funds to carry out its responsibilities under the act. These provisions will ensure that the States have the funds needed for the modest compliance costs involved with amending their incorporation forms to request the names of beneficial owners.

It is common for bills establishing Federal standards to seek to ensure State action by making some Federal funding dependent upon a State's meeting the specified standards. This bill, however, states explicitly that nothing in the bill authorizes DHS to withhold funds from a State for failing to modify its incorporation practices to meet the beneficial ownership information requirements in the act. Instead, the bill simply calls for a GAO report in 2013 to identify which States, if any, have failed to strengthen their incorporation practices as required by the act. After getting this status report, a future Congress can decide what steps to take, including whether to reduce any DHS funding going to the noncompliant States.

Finally, the bill would require the U.S. Department of the Treasury to issue a rule requiring formation agents to establish anti-money laundering programs to ensure they are not forming U.S. corporations or LLCs for criminals or other wrongdoers. GAO would also be asked to conduct a study of existing State formation procedures for partnerships and trusts.

We have worked hard to craft a bill that would address, in a fair and reasonable way, the homeland security problem created by States allowing the formation of millions of U.S. corporations and LLCs with unknown owners. What the bill comes down to is a simple requirement that States change their incorporation applications to add a question requesting the names and addresses of the prospective beneficial owners. That is not too much to ask to protect this country and the international community from wrongdoers seeking to misuse U.S. corporations and to help law enforcement stop those wrongdoers.

For those who say that, if the United States tightens its incorporation rules, new companies will be formed elsewhere, it is appropriate to ask exactly where they will go. Every country in the European Union is already required to get beneficial information for the corporations formed under their laws. Most offshore jurisdictions already request this information as well, including the Bahamas, Cayman Islands, Jersey, and the Island of Man. Our States should be asking for the same ownership information, but they don't, and there is no indication that they will any time in the near future, unless required to do so.

I wish Federal legislation weren't necessary. I wish the States could solve this homeland security problem on their own, but ongoing competitive pressures make it unlikely that the States will reach agreement. It has been more than 2 years since our 2006 hearing with no real progress to show for it, despite repeated pleas from law enforcement.

Federal legislation is necessary to reduce the vulnerability of the United States to wrongdoing by U.S. corporations with unknown owners, to protect interstate and international commerce from criminals misusing U.S. corporations, to strengthen the ability of law enforcement to investigate suspect U.S. corporations, to level the playing field among the States, and to bring the United States into compliance with its international anti-money laundering obligations.

There is also an issue of consistency. For years, I have been fighting offshore corporate secrecy laws and practices that enable wrongdoers to secretly control offshore corporations involved in money laundering, tax evasion, and other misconduct. I have pointed out on more than one occasion that corporations were not created to hide ownership, but to shield owners from personal liability for corporate acts. Unfortunately, today, the corporate form has too often been corrupted into serving those wishing to conceal their identities and commit crimes or dodge taxes without alerting authorities. It is past time to stop this misuse of the corporate form. But if we want to stop inappropriate corporate secrecy offshore, we need to stop it here at home as well.

For these reasons, I urge my colleagues to support this legislation and put an end to incorporation practices that promote corporate secrecy and render the United States and other countries vulnerable to abuse by U.S. corporations with unknown owners.

As I mentioned earlier, in the 110th Congress, then-Senator Obama was an original cosponsor of this legislation. I look forward to working with President Obama to ensure this homeland security bill is enacted into law.

I thank my cosponsor, Senator GRASSLEY, who has been such a leader in this effort for so long, as he has in so many other good government initiatives. I also thank Senator McCASKILL for her cosponsorship.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill and a bill summary be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 569

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Incorporation Transparency and Law Enforcement Assistance Act".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds the following:

(1) Nearly 2,000,000 corporations and limited liability companies are being formed under the laws of the States each year.

(2) Very few States obtain meaningful information about the beneficial owners of the corporations and limited liability companies formed under their laws.

(3) A person forming a corporation or limited liability company within the United States typically provides less information to the State of incorporation than is needed to obtain a bank account or driver's license and typically does not name a single beneficial owner.

(4) Criminals have exploited the weaknesses in State formation procedures to conceal their identities when forming corporations or limited liability companies in the United States, and have then used the newly created entities to commit crimes affecting interstate and international commerce such as terrorism, drug trafficking, money laundering, tax evasion, securities fraud, financial fraud, and acts of foreign corruption.

(5) Law enforcement efforts to investigate corporations and limited liability companies suspected of committing crimes have been impeded by the lack of available beneficial ownership information, as documented in reports and testimony by officials from the Department of Justice, the Department of Homeland Security, the Financial Crimes Enforcement Network of the Department of the Treasury, the Internal Revenue Service, and the Government Accountability Office, and others.

(6) In July 2006, a leading international anti-money laundering organization, the Financial Action Task Force on Money Laundering (in this section referred to as the "FATF"), of which the United States is a member, issued a report that criticizes the United States for failing to comply with a FATF standard on the need to collect beneficial ownership information and urged the United States to correct this deficiency by July 2008.

(7) In response to the FATF report, the United States has repeatedly urged the States to strengthen their incorporation practices by obtaining beneficial ownership information for the corporations and limited liability companies formed under the laws of such States.

(8) Many States have established automated procedures that allow a person to form a new corporation or limited liability company within the State within 24 hours of filing an online application, without any prior review of the application by a State official. In exchange for a substantial fee, 2 States will form a corporation within 1 hour of a request.

(9) Dozens of Internet websites highlight the anonymity of beneficial owners allowed under the incorporation practices of some States, point to those practices as a reason to incorporate in those States, and list those States together with offshore jurisdictions as preferred locations for the formation of new corporations, essentially providing an open invitation to criminals and other wrongdoers to form entities within the United States.

(10) In contrast to practices in the United States, all countries in the European Union are required to identify the beneficial owners of the corporations they form.

(11) To reduce the vulnerability of the United States to wrongdoing by United States corporations and limited liability companies with unknown owners, to protect interstate and international commerce from criminals misusing United States corporations and limited liability companies, to strengthen law enforcement investigations of suspect corporations and limited liability companies, to set minimum standards for and level the playing field among State incorporation practices, and to bring the United States into compliance with its international anti-money laundering obligations, Federal legislation is needed to require the States to obtain beneficial ownership information for the corporations and limited liability companies formed under the laws of such States.

SEC. 3. TRANSPARENT INCORPORATION PRACTICES.

(a) TRANSPARENT INCORPORATION PRACTICES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subtitle A of title XX of the Homeland Security Act of 2002 (6 U.S.C. 601 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“SEC. 2009. TRANSPARENT INCORPORATION PRACTICES.

“(a) INCORPORATION SYSTEMS.—

“(A) Each applicant to form a corporation or limited liability company under the laws of the State is required to provide to the State during the formation process a list of the beneficial owners of the corporation or limited liability company that—

“(i) identifies each beneficial owner by name and current address; and “(ii) if any beneficial owner exercises control over the corporation or limited liability company through another legal entity, such as a corporation, partnership, or trust, identifies each such legal entity and each such beneficial owner who will use that entity to exercise control over the corporation or limited liability company.

“(B) Each corporation or limited liability company formed under the laws of the State is required by the State to update the list of the beneficial owners of the corporation or limited liability company by providing the information described in subparagraph (A)—

“(i) in an annual filing with the State; or

“(ii) if no annual filing is required under the law of that State, each time a change is made in the beneficial ownership of the corporation or limited liability company.

“(C) Beneficial ownership information relating to each corporation or limited liability company formed under the laws of the State is required to be maintained by the State until the end of the 5-year period beginning on the date that the corporation or limited liability company terminates under the laws of the State.

“(D) Beneficial ownership information relating to each corporation or limited liability company formed under the laws of the State shall be provided by the State upon receipt of—

“(i) a civil or criminal subpoena or summons from a State agency, Federal agency, or congressional committee or subcommittee requesting such information; or “(ii) a written request made by a Federal agency on behalf of another country under an international treaty, agreement, or convention, or section 1782 of title 28, United States Code.

“(2) NON-UNITED STATES BENEFICIAL OWNERS.—To further protect the security of the United States, each State that accepts funding from the Department under section 2004 shall, not later than the beginning of fiscal year 2012, require that, if any beneficial owner of a corporation or limited liability company formed under the laws of the State is not a United States citizen or a lawful permanent resident of the United States, each application described in paragraph (1)(A) and each update described in paragraph (1)(B) shall include a written certification by a formation agent residing in the State that the formation agent—

“(A) has verified the name, address, and identity of each beneficial owner that is not a United States citizen or a lawful permanent resident of the United States;

“(B) has obtained for each beneficial owner that is not a United States citizen or a lawful permanent resident of the United States a copy of the page of the government-issued passport on which a photograph of the beneficial owner appears;

“(C) will provide proof of the verification described in subparagraph (A) and the photograph described in subparagraph (B) upon request; and

“(D) will retain information and documents relating to the verification described in subparagraph (A) and the photograph described in subparagraph (B) until the end of the 5-year period beginning on the date that the corporation or limited liability company terminates, under the laws of the State.

“(b) PENALTIES FOR FALSE BENEFICIAL OWNERSHIP INFORMATION.—In addition to any civil or criminal penalty that may be imposed by a State, any person who affects interstate or foreign commerce by knowingly providing, or attempting to provide, false beneficial ownership information to a State, by intentionally failing to provide beneficial ownership information to a State upon request, or by intentionally failing to provide updated beneficial ownership information to a State—

“(1) shall be liable to the United States for a civil penalty of not more than $10,000; and

“(2) may be fined under title 18, United States Code, imprisoned for not more than 3 years, or both.

“(c) FUNDING AUTHORIZATION.—To carry out this section—

“(1) a State may use all or a portion of the funds made available to the State under section 2004; and

“(2) the Administrator may use funds appropriated to carry out this title, including unobligated or reprogrammed funds, to enable a State to obtain and manage beneficial ownership information for the corporations and limited liability companies formed under the laws of the State, including by funding measures to assess, plan, develop, test, or implement relevant policies, procedures, or system modifications.

“(d) STATE COMPLIANCE REPORT.—Nothing in this section authorizes the Administrator to withhold from a State any funding otherwise available to the State under section 2004 because of a failure by that State to comply with this section. Not later than June 1, 2013, the Comptroller General of the United States shall submit to the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs of the Senate and the Committee on Homeland Security of the House of Representatives a report identifying which States are in compliance with this section and, for any State not in compliance, what measures must be taken by that State to achieve compliance with this section.

“(e) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

“(1) BENEFICIAL OWNER.—The term ‘beneficial owner’ means an individual who has a level of control over, or entitlement to, the funds or assets of a corporation or limited liability company that, as a practical matter, enables the individual, directly or indirectly, to control, manage, or direct the corporation or limited liability company.

SUMMARY OF LEVIN-GRASSLEY-MCCASKILL INCORPORATION TRANSPARENCY AND LAW ENFORCEMENT ASSISTANCE ACT

To protect the United States from U.S. corporations being misused to commit terrorism, money laundering, tax evasion, or other misconduct, the Incorporation Transparency and Law Enforcement Assistance Act would:

Beneficial Ownership Information. Require the States to obtain a list of the beneficial owners of each corporation or limited liability company (LLC) formed under their laws, ensure this information is updated annually, and provide the information to civil or criminal law enforcement upon receipt of a subpoena or summons.

Non-U.S. Beneficial Owners. Require corporations and LLCs with non-U.S. beneficial owners to provide a certification from an in-state formation agent that the agent has verified the identity of those owners.

Penalties for False Information. Establish civil and criminal penalties under federal law for persons who knowingly provide false beneficial ownership information or intentionally fail to provide required beneficial ownership information to a State.

Exemptions. Provide exemptions for certain corporations, including publicly traded corporations and the corporations and LLCs they form, since the Securities and Exchange Commission already oversees them; and corporations which a State has determined, with concurrence from the Homeland Security and Justice Departments, should be exempt because requiring beneficial ownership information from them would not serve the public interest or assist law enforcement.

Funding. Authorize States to use an existing DHS grant program, and authorize DHS to use already appropriated funds, to meet the requirements of this Act.

State Compliance Report. Clarify that nothing in the Act authorizes DHS to withhold funds from a State for failing to comply with the beneficial ownership requirements. Require a GAO report by 2013 identifying which States are not in compliance so that a future Congress can determine at that time what steps to take.

Transition Period. Give the States until October 2012 to require beneficial ownership information for the corporations and LLCs formed under their laws.

Anti-Money Laundering Rule. Require the Treasury Secretary to issue a rule requiring formation agents to establish anti-money laundering programs to ensure they are not forming U.S. corporations or other entities for criminals or other suspect persons.

GAO Study. Require GAO to complete a study of State beneficial ownership information requirements for in-state partnerships and trusts.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I rise to speak on the same bill the Senator from Michigan spoke on, but I ought to compliment him. He is most known for being a leader in the area of military affairs because of being chairman of that committee. But for sure, for years he has been also a chairman of the Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations and so much of the work that comes out of this legislation comes out of his work on that committee. I think he ought to be commended for the work he does through investigations there as well.

I am happy to join Senator LEVIN and Senator MCCASKILL in cosponsoring the Incorporation Transparency and Law Enforcement Assistance Act. This bill requires States to obtain corporate ownership information at the time of formation and help law enforcement investigate shell companies which are set up for the sole purpose of conducting illegal activities.

Earlier this year, Senator LEVIN joined me when I introduced a bill that we entitled the Hedge Fund Transparency Act. I said then that the major cause of the current financial crisis is a lack of transparency among hedge funds. That same thing can be said about corporate ownership. In too many States, very little ownership information is needed to register a corporation, and the actual owners of that corporation are often hidden behind the agents and lawyers who register the corporation on behalf of owners.

One example of how these criminals take advantage of this lack of transparency is the practice of setting up and using shell corporations to hide corporate ownership information. These individuals set up shell corporations that have the benefits of corporate registration and function legitimately. But these same corporations are being used to hide illegal activities. These activities include a variety of elaborate schemes to disguise money laundering, tax evasion, and securities fraud. Law enforcement officials from the Department of Justice and the Internal Revenue Service have testified before Congress about how the lack of corporate information has been a very significant impediment to their ability to conduct criminal investigations.

For example, when a corporation is involved in illegal activities, the legitimate corporate owners are often hidden, making it difficult for law enforcement agencies to determine who is actually responsible. That, in turn, makes it difficult to bring the real culprits to justice. States differ as to what corporate information is required to register a corporation and how long it takes to process that paperwork. Most States require only the name of the company, the name and address of the agent, a signature, and, of course, a fee.

In fact, the Government Accountability Office found that most States will take the time to verify that the fee has been paid but do not take the time to verify the identities of the incorporators, officers, and directors. Perhaps even more important, no State checks the names of incorporators, officers, or directors against criminal records and the watch lists that sometimes Federal agencies have. As a result, we have no way of knowing if the beneficial owners are criminals, or they could even be terrorists, for that matter. Many States now have introduced electronic registration procedures that enable a new corporation to be registered on line within 24 hours. States offer this expedited service in exchange for yet an additional fee. In fact, there are two States where an individual can form a corporation within 1 hour of making the request. The promise of quick registration and little oversight has proven to be a very popular revenue generator for some States. But this process is not necessarily in the best interest of protecting our financial system or our national security.

Some States have raised concerns that if their incorporation laws are tightened, corporations will simply register in other States where there are less stringent registration requirements. This bill is to take care of that problem. It is designed to bring some sanity to this whole process. It makes the registration requirement uniform over all 50 States, as well as the District of Columbia. This way corporations will simply not be able to “shop around” for the State with the most relaxed standards and simply play one State against the other. Further, much of the information set forth in this bill is already required by the European Union and many offshore jurisdictions. This bill simply updates our laws to match those of other nations combating the same problems with money laundering, tax evasion, and terrorist financing.

The legislation I am introducing today with Senators LEVIN and MCCASKILL requires that States obtain a list of the beneficial owners of each corporation or limited liability company formed under their laws before the corporation is registered in that particular State. The bill also requires that States ensure required information is updated annually and that States provide the information to civil or criminal law enforcement agencies upon receipt of a subpoena or summons. This also establishes a civil penalty of up to $10,000 and a criminal penalty of up to 3 years in prison for providing false information.

Additionally, the bill would exempt publicly traded companies that are already regulated by the Securities and Exchange Commission. Further, the bill requires non-U.S. beneficial owners to provide certification from an in-State agent that verifies the identity of the beneficial owner.

Finally, this bill requires the Government Accountability Office to complete a study of State beneficial ownership information requirements for in-State partnerships and trusts and gives the States until October 2011 to require beneficial ownership information for the corporations and limited liability companies formed under their laws.

I urge colleagues to cosponsor and support this legislation as we try to bring greater transparency to our financial system.

By Mr. WEBB (for himself, Mr. BROWN, Mr. VITTER, Mr. WICKER, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. NELSON of Nebraska, and Mrs. LINCOLN):

S. 572. A bill to provide for the issuance of a “forever stamp” to honor the sacrifices of the brave men and women of the armed forces who have been awarded the Purple Heart; to the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs.

Mr. WEBB. Madam President, I have introduced a bill that will create a perpetual Purple Heart stamp. I cannot think of any other stamp or any other area for a perpetual stamp that is more deserving than this award which recognizes sacrifice on the battlefield.

The original cosponsors of this legislation are Senators BROWN, VITTER, WICKER, BOXER, LINCOLN, and BEN NELSON of Nebraska. The Purple Heart is the oldest continually authorized U.S. military decoration. It was created as a badge of military merit by George Washington in 1782.

The original Purple Hearts were awarded to three soldiers in the Continental Army who had shown outstanding courage during the Revolutionary War. In 1931, Army Chief of Staff Douglas MacArthur commissioned work on a new design for the Purple Heart to coincide with the then upcoming 200th anniversary of President Washington's birth.

President Hoover's War Department authorized the award for wounds received by Army personnel in action or for meritorious service dating back to World War I. On February 22, 1932, General MacArthur became its first recipient. In December of 1942, the Purple Heart was extended to all branches of service, but the criteria were then strictly limited to those we know today; that is, to be awarded to those who are wounded or killed during direct combat with the enemies of the United States. More than 1.7 million Americans of every race, color, creed and from all 50 States have received the Purple Heart in honor of their sacrifice on our Nation's battlefields.

This is the only U.S. military decoration for which there is no recommendation. It is simply earned through bloodshed for our country.

In 2003, the Postal Service honored recipients of this award by commissioning a first-class Purple Heart stamp in a ceremony at the home of George Washington in Mount Vernon, VA. The image used for this stamp is a photograph of one of the two Purple Hearts received by Marine LTC James Loftus Fowler of Alexandria, VA, which he received in 1968 as a battalion commander near the Ben Hai River in South Vietnam. Since that first issuance in 2003, approximately 1.2 billion first-class Purple Heart stamps have been sold, an average of 200 million a year. At the new first-class rate of 44 cents, which is taking place in May, that is approximately $88 million a year in revenue for the U.S. Government.

This yearly sales rate is equal to or greater than the sales of even the most popular commemorative stamps issued during that period, stamps bearing such American icons as Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall, singer Frank Sinatra, and the classic Disney characters.

In 2007, the Postal Service created the first “forever” stamp, a stamp which, no matter when it was purchased, would be good for first-class postage on the day it was used. The image they chose was an image as old and venerable and quintessentially American as the Purple Heart—the Liberty Bell. According to a Postal Service press release, since its first issuance in April of 2007, more than 6 billion forever Liberty Bell stamps have been sold. This is an order of magnitude greater than any other single stamp sold in the United States, generating revenue of $2 billion.

Clearly, the volume of sales of forever stamps is a win for the Postal Service, which is facing a shortfall in future revenues, and a win in terms of the value delivered to the people who want to use them.

In creating the first Purple Heart, General Washington said:

Let it be known that he who wears the military order of the Purple Heart has given of his blood in defense of his homeland and shall forever be revered by his fellow countrymen.

George Washington intended that the Nation he helped found would forever revere those who wear the Purple Heart as a symbol of the sacrifice they have given in our Nation's defense.

As a recipient of the Purple Heart in Vietnam as a Marine, I believe that making the Purple Heart stamp a forever stamp is the most appropriate way to honor the past and future recipients of our Nation's oldest military decoration.

I hope my colleagues will join me in this legislation.

By Mr. AKAKA (for himself, Mr. VOINOVICH, Mr. CARPER, Mr. LEVIN, Mrs. MCCASKILL, and Mr. TESTER):

S. 574. A bill to enhance citizen access to Government information and services by establishing that Government documents issued to the public must be written clearly, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs.

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Plain Writing Act of 2009. I am pleased that Senators GEORGE VOINOVICH, TOM CARPER, CARL LEVIN, CLAIRE MCCASKILL, and JON TESTER have joined as original cosponsors of this legislation.

Our bill is very similar to H.R. 946, introduced by Representative BRUCE BRALEY last month.

The Plain Writing Act has a simple purpose: it would require the Federal Government to write more clearly. Agencies would be required to write documents that are released to the public in a way that is clear, concise, well-organized, readily understandable.

This bill would extend an initiative that President Bill Clinton and Vice President Al Gore started a decade ago as part of the Reinventing Government initiative. In 1998, President Clinton directed agencies to write in plain language. Although many agencies have made progress in writing more clearly, the requirement never was fully implemented. In recent years, the focus on plain writing has dropped. This legislation will renew that focus.

There are many benefits to plain writing. First, it promotes transparency and accountability. It is very difficult to hold the Federal Government accountable for its actions if only lawyers can understand Government writing. As we face an economic crisis and unprecedented budget deficits, the American people need clear explanations of Government actions.

Plain writing also improves customer service. Individuals and businesses waste time and money, and make unnecessary errors, because Government instructions, forms, and other documents are too complicated. Anyone who has filled out their own tax forms, applications for Federal financial aid or veterans' benefits, Medicare forms, or any number of other overly complicated Federal forms understands the need for plain writing.

Government officials, in turn, spend time and money answering questions and addressing complaints from people frustrated with Government documents they cannot understand. Correcting the errors people make because they do not understand Government documents demands Government officials' time as well. Because of this, plain writing makes Government more efficient and effective.

Numerous organizations have called on Congress to require the Federal Government to write more clearly, including the AARP, Disabled American Veterans, National Small Business Association, Small Business Legislative Council, Women Impacting Public Policy, American Nurses Association, American Library Association, American Association of Law Libraries, and several associations dedicated to promoting better communication. These groups support plain writing because their members complain about their frustration with trying to understand Government documents—or hiring attorneys to decipher them—and the time and money they waste because the Government does not write plainly.

As a former teacher and principal, I understand that even very smart people must be trained to write plainly, so this bill recognizes that Federal Employees will need plain writing training. Each agency will report their plans to train employees in plain writing. Writing in plain, clear, concise, and easily understandable language is a skill that Congress and Federal agencies must foster. As Thomas Jefferson once said, "The most valuable of all talents is that of never using two words when one will do."

Additionally, congressional oversight will ensure that agencies implement the plain language requirements. Agencies will be required to designate a senior official responsible for implementing plain language requirements and to report to Congress how it will ensure compliance with the plain language requirement and on its progress.

To avoid imposing too great a burden on agencies, agencies will not be required to rewrite existing documents. Only new or substantially revised documents will be covered. Similarly, this bill does not cover regulations, so that agencies can focus first on improving their every day communications with the American people. We recognize that it will be more challenging to write plainly when crafting regulations, which often must be technical and complex.

Requiring plain writing is an important step in improving the way the Federal Government communicates with the American people.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be placed in the RECORD, as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 70) congratulating the people of the Republic of Lithuania on the 1000th anniversary of Lithuania and celebrating the rich history of Lithuania.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, today I wish to recognize an important moment for the people of Lithuania. Last month, Lithuania celebrated its 1000 year anniversary.

Along with my distinguished colleagues, Senator VOINOVICH from Ohio and Senator FEINSTEIN from California, I have submitted a commemorative resolution for this occasion.

As the birthplace of my mother, who came to the United States from Lithuania with her parents when she was just 2 years old, Lithuania holds a special place in my heart.

One thousand years sounds like a long time, especially in our relatively young United States. But historians have noted that the name of the area now known as Lithuania first appeared in European records, in the German Annals of Quedlinburg.

Traditions of Lithuanian statehood date back to the early Middle Ages, when Duke Mindaugas united an assortment of Baltic Tribes to defend themselves from attacks by the Teutonic Knights. From these early roots, Lithuania grew to encompass territory stretching from the Baltic Sea to the Black Sea by the end of the 14th century.

This nation, which once was the largest in Europe, has seen extraordinary struggles during the last century. It suffered 50 years of occupation, by both Nazi and Soviet forces.

Throughout that time, the U.S. Congress stood in support of Lithuania and its Baltic neighbors, Estonia and Latvia, and refused to recognize the Soviet occupation. In 2007, the United States and Lithuania celebrated 85 years of continuous diplomatic relations.

Today, Lithuania is a thriving free-market democracy and a strong ally of the United States. As a member of the European Union and NATO, Lithuania contributes to peace and security in Europe. Lithuania also contributes to global stability and peace building through its contributions to missions in Afghanistan, Iraq, Bosnia, Kosovo and Georgia.

When I traveled to Lithuania a few years ago and visited the village of my mother and grandparents, I was welcomed warmly by President Adamkus, who I have known for many years, and the people of Lithuania. I was so proud, not only to see my family's roots, but to see how far Lithuania has come, despite the many difficulties it endured in the last century.

I congratulate President Adamkus, Foreign Minister Usackas, and the people of Lithuania on this historic occasion.

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be agreed to, the preamble be agreed to, the motions to reconsider be laid upon the table, with no intervening action or debate, and any statements related to the resolution be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The resolution (S. Res. 70) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

S. RES. 70

Whereas the name "Lithuania" first appeared in European records in the year 1009, when it was mentioned in the German manuscript "Annals of Quedlinburg";

Whereas Duke Mindaugas united various Baltic tribes and established the state of Lithuania during the period between 1236 and 1263;

Whereas, by the end of the 14th century, Lithuania was the largest country in Europe, encompassing territory from the Baltic Sea to the Black Sea;

Whereas Vilnius University was founded in 1579 and remained the easternmost university in Europe for 200 years;

Whereas the February 16, 1918 Act of Independence of Lithuania led to the establishment of Lithuania as a sovereign and democratic state;

Whereas, under the cover of the Molotov-Ribbentrop Pact, on June 17, 1940, Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania were forcibly incorporated into the Soviet Union in violation of pre-existing peace treaties;

Whereas, during 50 years of Soviet occupation of the Baltic states, Congress strongly, consistently, and on a bipartisan basis refused to legally recognize the incorporation of Latvia, Estonia, and Lithuania by the Soviet Union;

Whereas, on March 11, 1990, the Republic of Lithuania was restored and Lithuania became the first Soviet republic to declare independence;

Whereas on September 2, 1991, the United States Government formally recognized Lithuania as an independent and sovereign nation;

Whereas Lithuania has successfully developed into a free and democratic country, with a free market economy and respect for the rule of law;

Whereas Lithuania is a full and responsible member of the United Nations, the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, the European Union, and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization;

Whereas in 2007, the United States Government and the Government of Lithuania celebrated 85 years of continuous diplomatic relations;

Whereas the United States Government welcomes and appreciates efforts by the Government of Lithuania to maintain international peace and stability in Europe and around the world by contributing to international civilian and military operations in Afghanistan, Iraq, Bosnia, Kosovo, and Georgia; and

Whereas Lithuania is a strong and loyal ally of the United States, and the people of Lithuania share common values with the people of the United States: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) congratulates the people of the Republic of Lithuania on the occasion of the 1000th anniversary of Lithuania;

(2) commends the Government of Lithuania for its success in implementing political and economic reforms, for establishing political, religious, and economic freedom, and for its commitment to human rights; and

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Wednesday, March 11, 2009

The House met at 10 a.m. and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. PASTOR of Arizona).

DESIGNATION OF THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker:

WASHINGTON, DC,
March 11, 2009.

I hereby appoint the Honorable ED PASTOR to act as Speaker pro tempore on this day.

NANCY PELOSI,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, the Reverend Daniel P. Coughlin, offered the following prayer:

The freedom we enjoy and defend seems to be rooted in our realization that we are created in Your divine image and redeemed by Your revealed love.

So, we are bold enough to turn to You and speak to You, Lord God, as children who are most secure in knowing ourselves; yet trusting in Your gracious care.

With our childish problems, in a world we have created for ourselves, we ask and we receive. You offer wisdom and counsel. In our adolescent difficulties, we seek and we find ways that You show us and empower us.

Be unto us attentive, gracious and forgiving on another day; that as Your free children we may come to know the fullness of Your presence and glory now and forever. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Will the gentlewoman from Pennsylvania (Ms. SCHWARTZ) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Ms. SCHWARTZ led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The Chair will entertain up to 10 requests for 1-minute speeches on each side of the aisle.

HEALTH CARE REFORM

(Ms. SCHWARTZ asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. SCHWARTZ. Last week, the White House Forum on Health Reform was a critical step forward ensuring that all Americans have access to high-quality, affordable health care. Particularly important was a growing consensus among all stakeholders that we must reform our health care delivery and financing system to maximize efficiency, improve health care quality and outcomes and contain costs.

President Obama charged us, Members of Congress and all stakeholders, to find a uniquely American solution to this challenge. To contain costs and expand access, we must engage patients in their care and realign our health care system to enhance primary care, to better coordinate care for patients with chronic conditions, to provide for meaningful use of health information technology and to apply clinical best practices, all of which will reduce costs and save lives.

Without these innovations, any effort at expanding health care coverage will be unsustainable. This work will be difficult and complex. But we are compelled to act, both to meet the needs of millions of uninsured and underinsured Americans and for our economic competitiveness.

NUCLEAR WASTE AND DRINKING WATER

(Mr. KIRK asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KIRK. Today's Chicago Tribune includes a report by Michael Hawthorne that the administration has decided not to move nuclear waste from the Great Lakes. This leaves thousands of tons of plutonium and other transuranic poisons in outdated storage facilities next to the drinking water of 30 million Americans and millions of Canadians. What would happen if plutonium leaked into the Great Lakes? It would contaminate 95 percent of America's fresh water for thousands of years.

We know that respected scientists would never recommend permanently storing nuclear waste next to major lakes and rivers. But that is what Senator REID got our President to do. Under this administration, 35 States will have to permanently store plutonium and other poisons on the Long Island Sound, in the Mississippi River basin and throughout the Great Lakes. This policy writes the first chapter of an inevitable environmental tragedy of biblical proportions that will hurt our country for a very, very long time.

HEALTH CARE REFORM

(Mr. ALTMIRE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ALTMIRE. Mr. Speaker, for the first time in many years, this Congress is moving forward with long overdue legislation to reform our Nation's health care system. With 47 million Americans without health insurance and costs rising well above the rate of inflation, health reform is an issue that can no longer be ignored. Health care affects every individual, every family and every business in America. Less than half of all small businesses in this country can afford to offer health insurance to their employees. Tens of millions of insured Americans live in fear of losing their coverage due to skyrocketing health care costs, and families are one accident or illness away from losing everything.

Together we can put an end to the decades of roadblocks that have prevented meaningful health care reform. Let us not let this opportunity pass us by again.

HURTING AMERICANS SEE TOO MUCH GOVERNMENT SPENDING

(Mr. GARRETT of New Jersey asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GARRETT of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, to Speaker NANCY PELOSI, I say American taxpayers, American families, Americans are all hurting. They are getting pink slips. They are seeing job layoffs. They are seeing their wages cut. They are seeing their income go down. And what do they see out of this House in Washington they are seeing spending going through the roof. They are seeing 10 percent increases on top of other 10 percent increases. They are seeing more than one-quarter of the Nation's growth and wealth all being sucked right into this Nation's Capital and spent in this city.

Mr. Speaker, the American people did indeed vote for a change. But this is not what they were hoping for.

H.R. 759 WILL ENSURE A SAFE FOOD SUPPLY

(Mr. STUPAK asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. STUPAK. Mr. Speaker, as chairman of the Energy and Commerce Committee's Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations, I have held nine hearings to examine the safety and security of our Nation's food supply over the past 2 years. A recent peanut butter salmonella outbreak is just the latest in a string of food-borne illnesses that affects 76 million Americans every year. For this reason, I joined with my colleagues, Chairmen DINGELL and PALLONE, to introduce H.R. 759, the Food and Drug Administration Globalization Act of 2009.

H.R. 759 would give the FDA not only the financial resources, but also the regulatory tools to ensure the safety of food we eat and the drugs we take. If this legislation would have been in place, the FDA would have had the authority, as well as the resources, to prevent the current salmonella outbreak from occurring, tools such as resources for increased inspections, access to inspection records, mandatory recall authority and strong penalties that will require testing facilities to send their results to the FDA.

Congress faces an ambitious agenda in the coming months, but more than 600 illnesses and nine deaths linked to the current salmonella outbreak underscore the importance of wasting no time in enacting this legislation.

EARMARK REFORM

(Mr. FLAKE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. FLAKE. Mr. Speaker, in about 1½ hours, President Obama is expected to announce major earmark reforms as he signs an omnibus spending bill with 9,000 earmarks. This gives voice to St. Augustine's lament, give me sobriety—but not yet.

But Mr. Speaker, it is still a good thing. And it is still long overdue. And we still shouldn't have to look to the President to save us from ourselves. This earmark problem is our problem. But gratefully, I believe he will announce, and I hope that he will announce, that he will not sign legislation that will allow no-bid contracts, congressionally directed no-bid contracts, to go into effect. We have seen what that has done to the Congress, the kind of circular fundraising that happens and the campaign contributions that result. And it does not uphold the dignity and decorum of this body.

So I hope we can make major earmark reforms with the President.

MARCH AS RED CROSS MONTH

(Ms. LORETTA SANCHEZ of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. LORETTA SANCHEZ of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to celebrate March as Red Cross Month. Since 1943 we have been celebrating March as Red Cross Month to promote the services provided to the public by the Red Cross. The Red Cross has been at the forefront of helping individuals and families prevent, prepare for and respond to large and small-scale disasters for more than 127 years.

Over the last year, more than 5 million people throughout the United States took advantage of educational opportunities from the Red Cross for CPR training, first aid and lifeguard training classes. And in Orange County, California, the local Red Cross chapter places great emphasis on community training. On April 18, the American Red Cross in Orange County will be hosting the fifth annual CPR day at, of course, Angel Stadium in my City of Anaheim, which will train over 1,500 people in adult and child CPR and first aid.

Once again, I want to thank the American Red Cross for making our communities safer and for providing needed resources to communities that are affected by floods, by fires, earthquakes, mudslides, hurricanes and other natural disasters.

THE SCOTT GARDNER ACT

(Mrs. MYRICK asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. MYRICK. I recently reintroduced the Scott Gardner Act, which would make it illegal and grounds for mandatory detention and deportation if an illegal alien is caught driving drunk.

Scott Gardner was a beloved father, teacher and husband in my district. And he was tragically killed by an illegal alien driving drunk who remained in our country despite the fact that he had previous DWI convictions. It would aid in the enforcement of our immigration laws by requiring the Federal, State and local governments to all share and collect information during the course of their normal duties. And local law enforcement agencies would have the resources to detain illegal aliens for DWI until they could be transferred to Federal authorities for deportation.

It is a travesty that we in this country allow illegal immigrants to remain here after being found guilty of driving drunk. Some in my district have recently argued that traffic violations are minor offenses. I'm sure Scott Gardner's family and all of the families who have lost loved ones to DWIs would disagree.

STEM-CELL RESEARCH

(Mr. ARCURI asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ARCURI. Mr. Speaker, this week the President took a critical step to boost groundbreaking stem-cell research and restore scientific integrity across government. The President signed an executive order lifting the ban on Federal funding for promising embryonic system cell research. In doing so he affirmed the administration's support of finding cures for diseases like Alzheimer's, Parkinson's, heart disease and diabetes that cause pain and suffering all over the world.

Many thoughtful and decent people are conflicted about or are strongly opposed to this research. The President understands their concern and respects their point of view. That is why the administration will develop and rigorously enforce strict ethical guidelines with zero tolerance for misuse and abuse. This order does not open the door for cloning for human reproduction in any way. We are all opposed to that. Rather, it unleashes and unharnesses the potential of what this country can accomplish to eliminate the ravages of these diseases and the effects they impose upon humanity.

STEM-CELL RESEARCH

(Mr. FLEMING asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. FLEMING. Mr. Speaker, I rise today as a father, a physician and a Congressman to express my deep concern over the administration's decision to allow taxpayer dollars to incentivize the destruction of human embryos.

For the first time in our country's history, the Federal Government is going to encourage the destruction of human embryos. Newer techniques for making embryonic-like cells without destroying any embryos and advances in adult stem-cell umbilical cord blood treatments are showing that the use of embryos for stem-cell research is becoming obsolete.

Over 73 different diseases have been treated, at least experimentally, with adult or cord blood stem cells, including type I diabetes and heart disease.

Because of recent steps by our President, pro-life taxpayers are now footing the bill for the promotion of abortions overseas, doctors are in danger of being forced to perform abortions regardless of moral or religious objections, and now taxpayer funds are going to support the destruction of human embryos in the name of research.

Embryonic stem-cell research provides no guarantee of scientific advancement, but it does guarantee the innocent unborn have lost a critical battle.

STEM-CELL RESEARCH

(Mr. MORAN of Virginia asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, we will never know how many millions of people around the world have suffered debilitating, shorter lives from Alzheimer's, Parkinson's, multiple sclerosis, and a host of other illnesses and diseases as a result of President Bush's decision to severely restrict stem-cell research.

But we do know that human civilization has only progressed when its leaders had the courage to resist religious, political and economic dogma in pursuit of truth and scientific discovery. Science and medical research offers us all an opportunity to reduce human suffering and advance human potential. I believe that is God's will.

President Obama did the right thing in reversing that anti-science presidential directive, but now it is up to the Congress to reverse the existing Congressional restriction on Federal funding of stem-cell research.

D.C. OPPORTUNITY SCHOLARSHIP

(Mr. PITTS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Speaker, the Senate passed the $410 billion omnibus spending bill last night containing some 9,000 special interest earmarks. Sadly, it included a provision that will effectively kill a popular and successful program here in our Nation's Capital that provides a ray of hope for the children it serves.

The D.C. Opportunity Scholarship Program provides low-income families with a voucher they can use to attend the school of their choice. For many students, this provides the opportunity to get out of dangerous and failing public schools into private schools that provide them with a safe environment and a quality education.

This program is under attack by politicians in Congress, many of whom send their own children to private schools. If school choice is good enough for their kids, why not school choice for everyone?

I urge the President, who has chosen private school for his own children, to veto this special interest, pork-laden bill and work with Congress toward meaningful education reform.

TRAGEDY IN ALABAMA

(Mr. BRIGHT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. BRIGHT. Mr. Speaker, as many of you have heard, a tragic shooting occurred yesterday in Geneva and Coffee Counties in Alabama. Without question, this is one of the worst tragedies our State and our Nation has seen in quite some time. My thoughts and prayers are with the families of the victims, and with the entire Wiregrass community in southeast Alabama.

The details are still being confirmed, but I do know that our community owes a debt of gratitude to the local law enforcement officials who bravely put themselves in the line of fire. Without their swift actions and courage, the tragedy could have been even worse than it was yesterday.

I will be returning to my district later today to assist local leaders and law enforcement officials in any way that I can and to be with my constituents as we mourn the loss of friends and neighbors.

I ask that all of my colleagues here in the House and people watching right now from around the country keep the people of southeast Alabama in your thoughts and prayers.

ECONOMIC ENGINE DOESN'T RUN ON PORK

(Mr. BROWN of Georgia asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, hardworking Americans are the economic engine that drives this great Nation. And America's economic engine doesn't run on pork.

Even though we are in a recession, Congress continues to take hard-earned tax dollars and send them toward pork projects like tattoo removal, Mormon crickets, and studying pig manure. In fact, the omnibus bill sent to the White House last night contains nearly 8,000 earmarks, costing taxpayers more than $11 billion.

Monday night I had a telephone town hall with my constituents back home in Georgia. One caller, Mr. John Ahern from Athens, hit the nail on the head with his question on spending: "Why aren't politicians held accountable like families and taxpayers?"

Why indeed? There are Members on both sides of the aisle that are so used to the spending of yesterday that they cannot bear the thought of tightening their belts today. How are we going to justify picking the pockets of taxpayers to literally pay for pig poop?

This bill spends too much, taxes too much, and borrows too much. I urge a veto of the ominous omnibus bill and its 8,000 earmarks. There are John Aherns all over this country who demand accountability in government. A veto would give it to them.

STEM-CELL EXECUTIVE ORDER

(Mr. LANGEVIN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. LANGEVIN. Mr. Speaker, I recently had the distinct honor and privilege of witnessing an historic and defining moment in our Nation's history, one that I believe will fundamentally alter the course of science and medicine in the same manner as did the discovery of the first vaccine or X-ray or other significant scientific and medical discoveries in this country.

On Monday, President Obama signed an executive order lifting the ban on the Federal funding of embryonic stem cell research. As someone who has lived with a spinal cord injury for over 28 years, I have always held onto the hope that one day I might walk again.

But this executive order is not about me or even about spinal cord injuries. It is about the millions of people living with chronic and disabling diseases, illnesses, and conditions for which this research may one day hold the promise of new treatments and cures. It is about responsible investment into sciences and technologies that will ensure our Nation's continued economic competitiveness into the 21st century.

There is still much work to be done, and I look forward to working with my congressional colleagues on this issue to ensure that responsible policies based on sound science are enacted.

This is truly an historic event.

AMERICANS NEED OBJECTIVE REPORTING

(Mr. SMITH of Texas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. SMITH of Texas. Mr. Speaker, recently the New York Times asserted that President Obama enjoyed "remarkably high levels of optimism and confidence" among Americans. The very same day, Gallup released a poll with very similar results as the Times poll, but Gallup characterized the result as "typical of how the last several Presidents have fared at the one-month mark." In other words, not remarkable.

Gallup also found that the number of people who disapproved of the way President Obama is doing his job had doubled in just one month, from 12 percent to 24 percent, and noted that President Obama's disapproval rating was higher than the average of the last six Presidents.

The Times and Gallup had similar polling results, but the Times gave a very biased report and ignored the historical facts.

At least one member of the White House press corps recognizes his colleagues' bias in favor of President Obama.

Jake Tapper, ABC's Senior White House Correspondent, said during a recent interview that some news editors and producers are soft on the President and inclined to "root for him."

Regarding the media's bias, Tapper also said: "Certain networks, newspapers and magazines leaned on the scales a little bit."

It is telling that a man who sees news coverage of the President first-hand on a daily basis would be so forthcoming about the media's pro-Obama bias.

When it comes to the major issues we face, Americans expect the media to be referees, not cheerleaders.

(Mr. MELANCON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. MELANCON. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this time to commend Mr. Robert P. Page, an outstanding citizen and business leader from Houma, Louisiana. He is about to complete his term as president of the National Association of Insurance Agents. Mr. Page has distinguished himself throughout his career as a professional insurance agent, even serving as president of the Professional Insurance Agents of Louisiana, and he has exhibited only the highest standards of honesty, integrity and professionalism.

Despite suffering personal losses as a result of hurricanes Katrina, Rita and Gustav, Mr. Page has provided uninterrupted service to the clients of his insurance agency in Houma, going above and beyond the call of duty to assist his fellow citizens, who also suffered devastating losses as a result of the hurricanes.

Mr. Page is a tireless advocate of developing a national consensus to come up with a better mechanism to deal with natural catastrophes throughout the United States, serving as a founding member of the Professional Insurance Agents Natural Task Force. With his years of hard work and dedication, Mr. Page has earned the respect and admiration of his many colleagues throughout the insurance industry, as well as exemplified the motto of his insurance association, "Local Agents Serving Main Street America."

Therefore, I would like to congratulate and commend Robert P. Page of Houma, Louisiana, upon the successful completion of his term as president of the National Association of Professional Insurance Agents.

STEALTH TAX INCREASE

(Mr. POE of Texas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. POE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, somebody has to pay for this massive wasteful spending by the Federal Government.

So to obtain more revenue, the budget proposal is to cut deductions Americans now receive. The charitable giving deduction will be cut. Thus charities, not government entities, by the way, such as churches, the YMCA and groups such as that that feed the hungry and help in disasters, take care of crime victims, and help the homeless, will be struggling for funds. Now the government will get that money.

The removal of this deduction will discourage gifts by Americans. Americans are the most cheerful contributors in the world to charities, but that may now end.

The home mortgage deduction also is going to be reduced. The effect of reducing this deduction and the charitable-giving deduction will have the effect of a stealth tax increase on all Americans.

Mr. Speaker, it doesn't make any sense to raise taxes on anyone during a recession, especially homeowners and those that give to the needy.

And that's just the way it is.

RECOVERY ACT FIRST STEP IN REFORMING HEALTH CARE

(Mr. WILSON of Ohio asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. WILSON of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I am proud to have supported the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act. It is one of the first steps we look in our journey to strengthen and improve our country's health care system. We can't fix our economy without fixing health care.

The recovery plan will provide $20 billion to speed the adoption of health information technology systems by doctors and hospitals. This will modernize our health care system, reduce medical errors, save billions of dollars and create jobs.

Recently, I visited Holzer Medical Center in my district in Gallipolis, Ohio. Doctors there showed me how health IT helps them to speed medical records from doctor to doctor and cut down on extra medical tests. That saves time and money.

Mr. Speaker, in fact, the Congressional Budget Office estimates that health IT investments will generate up to $40 billion in savings for Medicare and private health insurance companies. Those savings can be passed along to American families.

I look forward to watching continued improvements at hospitals back home, like Holzer. And I look forward to continuing our work to further improve health care.

BLOCK CONGRESSIONAL PAY RAISES

(Mr. BUCHANAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Speaker, Congress needs to lead by example in this time of economic uncertainty. For that reason, I was encouraged when the House decided to give up its pay raise next year. It is important to send the right message to the American people: a message that says Congress is willing to tighten its belt just like American families are doing across the country.

But we need to go even further. That's why I hope the leadership in the House will take up my legislation, H.R. 566, blocking all future congressional pay raises until the Federal budget is balanced.

Millions of hardworking Americans only get a salary increase if they produce positive results. Congress should be no different. With our national debt about to surpass $11 trillion and unemployment in our country surging past 8 percent, we need to hold ourselves to a higher standard. The American people expect and deserve nothing less.

My legislation to block congressional pay raises until we balance the budget offers meaningful reform. I urge Members from both sides of the aisle to support it.

(3) FUNDING.—If the Secretary determines that a project facility inspected and maintained pursuant to the guidelines and criteria set forth in section 9602(a) requires extraordinary operation and maintenance pursuant to paragraph (1), the Secretary may provide Federal funds on a nonreimbursable basis sufficient to cover 35 percent of the cost of the extraordinary operation and maintenance allocable to the transferred works operating entity, which is needed to minimize the risk of imminent harm. The remaining share of the Federal funds advanced by the Secretary for such work shall be repaid under subsection (b).

SEC. 10004. IMPLEMENTATION OF SETTLEMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to implement the terms and conditions of the Settlement in cooperation with the State of California, including the following measures as these measures are prescribed in the Settlement:

(1) Design and construct channel and structural improvements as described in paragraph 11 of the Settlement, provided, however, that the Secretary shall not make or fund any such improvements to facilities or property of the State of California without the approval of the State of California and the State’s agreement in 1 or more memoranda of understanding to participate where appropriate.

(2) Modify Friant Dam operations so as to provide Restoration Flows and Interim Flows.

(3) Acquire water, water rights, or options to acquire water as described in paragraph 13 of the Settlement, provided, however, such acquisitions shall only be made from willing sellers and not through eminent domain.

(4) Implement the terms and conditions of paragraph 16 of the Settlement related to recirculation, recapture, reuse, exchange, or transfer of water released for Restoration Flows or Interim Flows, for the purpose of accomplishing the Water Management Goal of the Settlement, subject to—

(A) applicable provisions of California water law;

(B) the Secretary’s use of Central Valley Project facilities to make Project water (other than water released from Friant Dam pursuant to the Settlement) and water acquired through transfers available to existing south-of-Delta Central Valley Project contractors; and

(C) the Secretary’s performance of the Agreement of November 24, 1986, between the United States of America and the Department of Water Resources of the State of California for the coordinated operation of the Central Valley Project and the State Water Project as authorized by Congress in section 2(d) of the Act of August 26, 1937 (50 Stat. 850, 100 Stat. 3051), including any agreement to resolve conflicts arising from said Agreement.

(5) Develop and implement the Recovered Water Account as specified in paragraph 16(b) of the Settlement, including the pricing and payment crediting provisions described in paragraph 16(b)(3) of the Settlement, provided that all other provisions of Federal reclamation law shall remain applicable.

(b) AGREEMENTS.—

(1) AGREEMENTS WITH THE STATE.—In order to facilitate or expedite implementation of the Settlement, the Secretary is authorized and directed to enter into appropriate agreements, including cost-sharing agreements, with the State of California.

(2) OTHER AGREEMENTS.—The Secretary is authorized to enter into contracts, memoranda of understanding, financial assistance agreements, cost sharing agreements, and other appropriate agreements with State, tribal, and local governmental agencies, and with private parties, including agreements related to construction, improvement, and operation and maintenance of facilities, subject to any terms and conditions that the Secretary deems necessary to achieve the purposes of the Settlement.

(c) ACCEPTANCE AND EXPENDITURE OF NON-FEDERAL FUNDS.—The Secretary is authorized to accept and expend non-Federal funds in order to facilitate implementation of the Settlement.

(d) MITIGATION OF IMPACTS.—Prior to the implementation of decisions or agreements to construct, improve, operate, or maintain facilities that the Secretary determines are needed to implement the Settlement, the Secretary shall identify—

(1) the impacts associated with such actions; and

(2) the measures which shall be implemented to mitigate impacts on adjacent and downstream water users and landowners.

(e) DESIGN AND ENGINEERING STUDIES.—The Secretary is authorized to conduct any design or engineering studies that are necessary to implement the Settlement.

(f) EFFECT ON CONTRACT WATER ALLOCATIONS.—Except as otherwise provided in this section, the implementation of the Settlement and the reintroduction of California Central Valley Spring Run Chinook salmon pursuant to the Settlement and section 10011, shall not result in the involuntary reduction in contract water allocations to Central Valley Project long-term contractors, other than Friant Division long-term contractors.

(g) EFFECT ON EXISTING WATER CONTRACTS.—Except as provided in the Settlement and this part, nothing in this part shall modify or amend the rights and obligations of the parties to any existing water service, repayment, purchase, or exchange contract.

(h) INTERIM FLOWS.—

(1) STUDY REQUIRED.—Prior to releasing any Interim Flows under the Settlement, the Secretary shall prepare an analysis in compliance with the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.), including at a minimum—

(A) an analysis of channel conveyance capacities and potential for levee or groundwater seepage;

(B) a description of the associated seepage monitoring program;

(C) an evaluation of—

(i) possible impacts associated with the release of Interim Flows; and

(ii) mitigation measures for those impacts that are determined to be significant;

(D) a description of the associated flow monitoring program; and

(E) an analysis of the likely Federal costs, if any, of any fish screens, fish bypass facilities, fish salvage facilities, and related operations on the San Joaquin River south of the confluence with the Merced River required under the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1531 et seq.) as a result of the Interim Flows.

(2) CONDITIONS FOR RELEASE.—The Secretary is authorized to release Interim Flows to the extent that such flows would not—

(A) impede or delay completion of the measures specified in Paragraph 11(a) of the Settlement; or

(B) exceed existing downstream channel capacities.

(3) SEEPAGE IMPACTS.—The Secretary shall reduce Interim Flows to the extent necessary to address any material adverse impacts to third parties from groundwater seepage caused by such flows that the Secretary identifies based on the monitoring program of the Secretary.

(4) TEMPORARY FISH BARRIER PROGRAM.—The Secretary, in consultation with the California Department of Fish and Game, shall evaluate the effectiveness of the Hills Ferry barrier in preventing the unintended upstream migration of anadromous fish in the San Joaquin River and any false migratory pathways. If that evaluation determines that any such migration past the barrier is caused by the introduction of the Interim Flows and that the presence of such fish will result in the imposition of additional regulatory actions against third parties, the Secretary is authorized to assist the Department of Fish and Game in making improvements to the barrier. From funding made available in accordance with section 10009, if third parties along the San Joaquin River south of its confluence with the Merced River are required to install fish screens or fish bypass facilities due to the release of Interim Flows in order to comply with the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1531 et seq.), the Secretary shall bear the costs of the installation of such screens or facilities if such costs would be borne by the Federal Government under section 10009(a)(3), except to the extent that such costs are already or are further willingly borne by the State of California or by the third parties.

(i) FUNDING AVAILABILITY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Funds shall be collected in the San Joaquin River Restoration Fund through October 1, 2019, and thereafter, with substantial amounts available through October 1, 2019, pursuant to section 10009 for implementation of the Settlement and parts I and III, including—

(c) DISPOSAL OF PROPERTY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Upon the Secretary's determination that retention of title to property or interests in property acquired pursuant to this part is no longer needed to be held by the United States for the furtherance of the Settlement, the Secretary is authorized to dispose of such property or interest in property on such terms and conditions as the Secretary deems appropriate and in the best interest of the United States, including possible transfer of such property to the State of California.

(2) RIGHT OF FIRST REFUSAL.—In the event the Secretary determines that property acquired pursuant to this part through the exercise of its eminent domain authority is no longer necessary for implementation of the Settlement, the Secretary shall provide a right of first refusal to the property owner from whom the property was initially acquired, or his or her successor in interest, on the same terms and conditions as the property is being offered to other parties.

(3) DISPOSITION OF PROCEEDS.—Proceeds from the disposal by sale or transfer of any such property or interests in such property shall be deposited in the fund established by section 10009(c).

(2) PARTICIPATION IN ENVIRONMENTAL REVIEW PROCESS.—In undertaking the measures authorized by section 10004, and for which environmental review is required, the Secretary may provide funds made available under this part to affected Federal agencies, State agencies, local agencies, and Indian tribes if the Secretary determines that such funds are necessary to allow the Federal agencies, State agencies, local agencies, or Indian tribes to effectively participate in the environmental review process.

(3) LIMITATION.—Funds may be provided under paragraph (2) only to support activities that directly contribute to the implementation of the terms and conditions of the Settlement.

(d) NONREIMBURSABLE FUNDS.—The United States' share of the costs of implementing this part shall be nonreimbursable under Federal reclamation law, provided that nothing in this subsection shall limit or be construed to limit the use of the funds assessed and collected pursuant to sections 3406(c)(1) and 3407(d)(2) of the Reclamation Projects Authorization and Adjustment Act of 1992 (Public Law 102-575; 106 Stat. 4721, 4727), for implementation of the Settlement, nor shall it be construed to limit or modify existing or future Central Valley Project ratesetting policies.

SEC. 10008. NO PRIVATE RIGHT OF ACTION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Nothing in this part confers upon any person or entity not a party to the Settlement a private right of action or claim for relief to interpret or enforce the provisions of this part or the Settlement.

(b) APPLICABLE LAW.—This section shall not alter or curtail any right of action or claim for relief under any other applicable law.

SEC. 10009. APPROPRIATIONS; SETTLEMENT FUND.

(a) IMPLEMENTATION COSTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The costs of implementing the Settlement shall be covered by payments or in-kind contributions made by Friant Division contractors and other non-Federal parties, including the funds provided in subparagraphs (A) through (D) of subsection (c)(1), estimated to total $440,000,000, of which the non-Federal payments are estimated to total $200,000,000 (at October 2006 price levels) and the amount from repaid Central Valley Project capital obligations is estimated to total $240,000,000, the additional Federal appropriation of $250,000,000 authorized pursuant to subsection (b)(1), and such additional funds authorized pursuant to subsection (b)(2); provided however, that the costs of implementing the provisions of section 10004(a)(1) shall be shared by the State of California pursuant to the terms of a memorandum of understanding executed by the State of California and the Parties to the Settlement on September 13, 2006, which includes at least $110,000,000 of State funds.

(2) ADDITIONAL AGREEMENTS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall enter into 1 or more agreements to fund or implement improvements on a project-by-project basis with the State of California.

(B) REQUIREMENTS.—Any agreements entered into under subparagraph (A) shall provide for recognition of either monetary or in-kind contributions toward the State of California's share of the cost of implementing the provisions of section 10004(a)(1).

(3) LIMITATION.—Except as provided in the Settlement, to the extent that costs incurred solely to implement this Settlement would not otherwise have been incurred by any entity or public or local agency or subdivision of the State of California, such costs shall not be borne by any such entity, agency, or subdivision of the State of California, unless such costs are incurred on a voluntary basis.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In addition to the funding provided in subsection (c), there are also authorized to be appropriated not to exceed $250,000,000 (at October 2006 price levels) to implement this part and the Settlement, to be available until expended; provided however, that the Secretary is authorized to spend such additional appropriations only in amounts equal to the amount of funds deposited in the San Joaquin River Restoration Fund (not including payments under subsection (c)(1)(B) and proceeds under subsection (c)(1)(C)), the amount of in-kind contributions, and other non-Federal payments actually committed to the implementation of this part or the Settlement.

(2) USE OF THE CENTRAL VALLEY PROJECT RESTORATION FUND.—The Secretary is authorized to use monies from the Central Valley Project Restoration Fund created under section 3407 of the Reclamation Projects Authorization and Adjustment Act of 1992 (Public Law 102-575; 106 Stat. 4727) for purposes of this part in an amount not to exceed $2,000,000 (October 2006 price levels) in any fiscal year.

(c) FUND.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—There is hereby established within the Treasury of the United States a fund, to be known as the San Joaquin River Restoration Fund, into which the following funds shall be deposited and used solely for the purpose of implementing the Settlement except as otherwise provided in subsections (a) and (b) of section 10203:

(A) All payments received pursuant to section 3406(c)(1) of the Reclamation Projects Authorization and Adjustment Act of 1992 (Public Law 102-575; 106 Stat. 4721).

(B) The construction cost component (not otherwise needed to cover operation and maintenance costs) of payments made by Friant Division, Hidden Unit, and Buchanan Unit long-term contractors pursuant to long-term water service contracts or pursuant to repayment contracts, including repayment contracts executed pursuant to section 10010. The construction cost repayment obligation assigned such contractors under such contracts shall be reduced by the amount paid pursuant to this paragraph and the appropriate share of the existing Federal investment in the Central Valley Project to be recovered by the Secretary pursuant to Public Law 99-546 (100 Stat. 3050) shall be reduced by an equivalent sum.

(C) Proceeds from the sale of water pursuant to the Settlement, or from the sale of property or interests in property as provided in section 10005.

(D) Any non-Federal funds, including State cost-sharing funds, contributed to the United States for implementation of the Settlement, which the Secretary may expend without further appropriation for the purposes for which contributed.

(2) AVAILABILITY.—All funds deposited into the Fund pursuant to subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C) of paragraph (1) are authorized for appropriation to implement the Settlement and this part, in addition to the authorization provided in subsections (a) and (b) of section 10203, except that $88,000,000 of such funds are available for expenditure without further appropriation; provided that after October 1, 2019, all funds in the Fund shall be available for expenditure without further appropriation.

(d) LIMITATION ON CONTRIBUTIONS.—Payments made by long-term contractors who receive water from the Friant Division and Hidden and Buchanan Units of the Central Valley Project pursuant to sections 3406(c)(1) and 3407(d)(2) of the Reclamation Projects Authorization and Adjustment Act of 1992 (Public Law 102-575; 106 Stat. 4721, 4727) and payments made pursuant to paragraph 16(b)(3) of the Settlement and subsection (c)(1)(B) shall be the limitation of such entities' direct financial contribution to the Settlement, subject to the terms and conditions of paragraph 21 of the Settlement.

(e) NO ADDITIONAL EXPENDITURES REQUIRED.—Nothing in this part shall be construed to require a Federal official to expend Federal funds not appropriated by Congress, or to seek the appropriation of additional funds by Congress, for the implementation of the Settlement.

(f) REACH 4B.—

(1) STUDY.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—In accordance with the Settlement and the memorandum of understanding executed pursuant to paragraph 6 of the Settlement, the Secretary shall conduct a study that specifies—

(i) the costs of undertaking any work required under paragraph 11(a)(3) of the Settlement to increase the capacity of reach 4B prior to reinitiation of Restoration Flows;

(ii) the impacts associated with reinitiation of such flows; and

(iii) measures that shall be implemented to mitigate impacts.

(B) DEADLINE.—The study under subparagraph (A) shall be completed prior to restoration of any flows other than Interim Flows.

(2) REPORT.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall file a report with Congress not later than 90 days after issuing a determination, as required by the Settlement, on whether to expand channel conveyance capacity to 4500 cubic feet per second in reach 4B of the San Joaquin River, or use an alternative route for pulse flows, that—

(i) explains whether the Secretary has decided to expand Reach 4B capacity to 4500 cubic feet per second; and

(ii) addresses the following matters:

(I) The basis for the Secretary's determination, whether set out in environmental review documents or otherwise, as to whether the expansion of Reach 4B would be the preferable means to achieve the Restoration Goal as provided in the Settlement, including how different factors were assessed such as comparative biological and habitat benefits, comparative costs, relative availability of State cost-sharing funds, and the comparative benefits and impacts on water temperature, water supply, private property, and local and downstream flood control.

(II) The Secretary's final cost estimate for expanding Reach 4B capacity to 4500 cubic feet per second, or any alternative route selected, as well as the alternative cost estimates provided by the State, by the Restoration Administrator, and by the other parties to the Settlement.

(III) The Secretary's plan for funding the costs of expanding Reach 4B or any alternative route selected, whether by existing Federal funds provided under this subtitle, by non-Federal funds, by future Federal appropriations, or some combination of such sources.

(B) DETERMINATION REQUIRED.—The Secretary shall, to the extent feasible, make the determination in subparagraph (A) prior to undertaking any substantial construction work to increase capacity in reach 4B.

(3) COSTS.—If the Secretary's estimated Federal cost for expanding reach 4B in paragraph (2), in light of the Secretary's funding plan set out in that paragraph, would exceed the remaining Federal funding authorized by this part (including all funds reallocated, all funds dedicated, and all new funds authorized by this part and separate from all commitments of State and other non-Federal funds and in-kind commitments), then before the Secretary commences actual construction work in reach 4B (other than planning, design, feasibility, or other preliminary measures) to expand capacity to 4500 cubic feet per second to implement this Settlement, Congress must have increased the applicable authorization ceiling provided by this part in an amount at least sufficient to cover the higher estimated Federal costs.

SEC. 10010. REPAYMENT CONTRACTS AND ACCELERATION OF REPAYMENT OF CONSTRUCTION COSTS.

(a) CONVERSION OF CONTRACTS.—

(1) The Secretary is authorized and directed to convert, prior to December 31, 2010, all existing long-term contracts with the following Friant Division, Hidden Unit, and Buchanan Unit contractors, entered under subsection (e) of section 9 of the Act of August 4, 1939 (53 Stat. 1196), to contracts under subsection (d) of section 9 of said Act (53 Stat. 1195), under mutually agreeable terms and conditions: Arvin-Edison Water Storage District; Delano-Earlimart Irrigation District; Exeter Irrigation District; Fresno Irrigation District; Ivanhoe Irrigation District; Lindmore Irrigation District; Lindsay-Strathmore Irrigation District; Lower Tule River Irrigation District; Orange Cove Irrigation District; Porterville Irrigation District; Saucelito Irrigation District; Shafter-Wasco Irrigation District; Southern San Joaquin Municipal Utility District; Stone Corral Irrigation District; Tea Pot Dome Water District; Terra Bella Irrigation District; Tulare Irrigation District; Madera Irrigation District; and Chowchilla Water District. Upon request of the contractor, the Secretary is authorized to convert, prior to December 31, 2010, other existing long-term contracts with Friant Division contractors entered under subsection (e) of section 9 of the Act of August 4, 1939 (53 Stat. 1196), to contracts under subsection (d) of section 9 of said Act (53 Stat. 1195), under mutually agreeable terms and conditions.

(2) Upon request of the contractor, the Secretary is further authorized to convert, prior to December 31, 2010, any existing Friant Division long-term contract entered under subsection (c)(2) of section 9 of the Act of August 4, 1939 (53 Stat. 1194), to a contract under subsection (c)(1) of section 9 of said Act, under mutually agreeable terms and conditions.

(3) All such contracts entered into pursuant to paragraph (1) shall—

(A) require the repayment, either in lump sum or by accelerated prepayment, of the remaining amount of construction costs identified in the Central Valley Project Schedule of Irrigation Capital Rates by Contractor 2007 Irrigation Water Rates, dated January 25, 2007, as adjusted to reflect payments not reflected in such schedule, and properly assignable for ultimate return by the contractor, no later than January 31, 2011, or if made in approximately equal annual installments, no later than January 31, 2014; such amount to be discounted by $\frac{1}{2}$ the Treasury Rate. An estimate of the remaining amount of construction costs as of January 31, 2011, as adjusted, shall be provided by the Secretary to each contractor no later than June 30, 2010;

(B) require that, notwithstanding subsection (c)(2), construction costs or other capitalized costs incurred after the effective date of the contract or not reflected in the schedule referenced in subparagraph (A), and properly assignable to such contractor, shall be repaid in not more than 5 years after notification of the allocation if such amount is a result of a collective annual allocation of capital costs to the contractors exercising contract conversions under this subsection of less than $5,000,000. If such amount is $5,000,000 or greater, such cost shall be repaid as provided by applicable Reclamation law, provided that the reference to the amount of $5,000,000 shall not be a precedent in any other context;

(C) provide that power revenues will not be available to aid in repayment of construction costs allocated to irrigation under the contract; and

(D) conform to the Settlement and this part and shall continue so long as the contractor pays applicable charges, consistent with subsection (c)(2) and applicable law.

(4) All such contracts entered into pursuant to paragraph (2) shall—

(A) require the repayment in lump sum of the remaining amount of construction costs identified in the most current version of the Central Valley Project Schedule of Municipal and Industrial Water Rates, as adjusted to reflect payments not reflected in such schedule, and properly assignable for ultimate return by the contractor, no later than January 31, 2014. An estimate of the remaining amount of construction costs as of January 31, 2014, as adjusted, shall be provided by the Secretary to each contractor no later than June 30, 2013;

(B) require that, notwithstanding subsection (c)(2), construction costs or other capitalized costs incurred after the effective date of the contract or not reflected in the schedule referenced in subparagraph (A), and properly assignable to such contractor, shall be repaid in not more than 5 years after notification of the allocation if such amount is a result of a collective annual allocation of capital costs to the contractors exercising contract conversions under this subsection of less than $5,000,000. If such amount is $5,000,000 or greater, such cost shall be repaid as provided by applicable Reclamation law, provided that the reference to the amount of $5,000,000 shall not be a precedent in any other context; and

(C) conform to the Settlement and this part and shall continue so long as the contractor pays applicable charges, consistent with subsection (c)(2) and applicable law.

(b) FINAL ADJUSTMENT.—The amounts paid pursuant to subsection (a) shall be subject to adjustment following a final cost allocation by the Secretary upon completion of the construction of the Central Valley Project. In the event that the final cost allocation indicates that the costs properly assignable to the contractor are greater than what has been paid by the contractor, the contractor shall be obligated to pay the remaining allocated costs. The term of such additional repayment contract shall be no less than 1 year and no more than 10 years, however, mutually agreeable provisions regarding the rate of repayment of such amount may be developed by the parties. In the event that the final cost allocation indicates that the costs properly assignable to the contractor are less than what the contractor has paid, the Secretary is authorized and directed to credit such overpayment as an offset against any outstanding or future obligation of the contractor.

(c) APPLICABILITY OF CERTAIN PROVISIONS.—

(1) Notwithstanding any repayment obligation under subsection (a)(3)(B) or subsection (b), upon a contractor's compliance with and discharge of the obligation of repayment of the construction costs as provided in subsection (a)(3)(A), the provisions of section 213(a) and (b) of the Reclamation Reform Act of 1982 (96 Stat. 1269) shall apply to lands in such district.

(2) Notwithstanding any repayment obligation under paragraph (3)(B) or (4)(B) of subsection (a), or subsection (b), upon a contractor's compliance with and discharge of the obligation of repayment of the construction costs as provided in paragraphs (3)(A) and (4)(A) of subsection (a), the Secretary shall waive the pricing provisions of section 3405(d) of the Reclamation Projects Authorization and Adjustment Act of 1992 (Public Law 102-575) for such contractor, provided that such contractor shall continue to pay applicable operation and maintenance costs and other charges applicable to such repayment contracts pursuant to the then-current rate-setting policy and applicable law.

(3) Provisions of the Settlement applying to Friant Division, Hidden Unit, and Buchanan Unit long-term water service contracts shall also apply to contracts executed pursuant to this section.

(d) REDUCTION OF CHARGE FOR THOSE CONTRACTS CONVERTED PURSUANT TO SUBSECTION (A)(1).—

(1) At the time all payments by the contractor required by subsection (a)(3)(A) have been completed, the Secretary shall reduce the charge mandated in section 10007(1) of this part, from 2020 through 2039, to offset the financing costs as defined in section 10010(d)(3). The reduction shall be calculated at the time all payments by the contractor required by subsection (a)(3)(A) have been completed. The calculation shall remain fixed from 2020 through 2039 and shall be based upon anticipated average annual water deliveries, as mutually agreed upon by the Secretary and the contractor, for the period from 2020 through 2039, and the amounts of such reductions shall be discounted using the Treasury Rate; provided, that such charge shall not be reduced to less than $4.00 per acre foot of project water delivered; provided further, that such reduction shall be implemented annually unless the Secretary determines, based on the availability of other monies, that the charges mandated in section 10007(1) are otherwise needed to cover ongoing federal costs of the Settlement, including any federal operation and maintenance costs of facilities that the Secretary determines are needed to implement the Settlement. If the Secretary determines that such charges are necessary to cover such ongoing federal costs, the Secretary shall, instead of making the reduction in such charges, reduce the contractor's operation and maintenance obligation by an equivalent amount, and such amount shall not be recovered by the United States from any Central Valley Project contractor, provided nothing herein shall affect the obligation of the contractor to make payments pursuant to a transfer agreement with a non-federal operating entity.

(2) If the calculated reduction in paragraph (1), taking into consideration the minimum amount required, does not result in the contractor offsetting its financing costs, the Secretary is authorized and directed to reduce, after October 1, 2019, any outstanding or future obligations of the contractor to the Bureau of Reclamation, other than the charge assessed and collected under section 3407(d) of Public law 102-575, by the amount of such deficiency, with such amount indexed to 2020 using the Treasury Rate and such amount shall not be recovered by the United States from any Central Valley Project contractor, provided nothing herein shall affect the obligation of the contractor to make payments pursuant to a transfer agreement with a non-Federal operating entity.

(3) Financing costs, for the purposes of this subsection, shall be computed as the difference of the net present value of the construction cost identified in subsection (a)(3)(A) using the full Treasury Rate as compared to using one half of the Treasury Rate and applying those rates against a calculated average annual capital repayment through 2030.

(4) Effective in 2040, the charge shall revert to the amount called for in section 10007(1) of this part.

(5) For purposes of this section, "Treasury Rate" shall be defined as the 20 year Constant Maturity Treasury (CMT) rate published by the United States Department of the Treasury as of October 1, 2010.

(e) SATISFACTION OF CERTAIN PROVISIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Upon the first release of Interim Flows or Restoration Flows, pursuant to paragraphs 13 or 15 of the Settlement, any short- or long-term agreement, to which 1 or more long-term Friant Division, Hidden Unit, or Buchanan Unit contractor that converts its contract pursuant to subsection (a) is a party, providing for the transfer or exchange of water not released as Interim Flows or Restoration Flows shall be deemed to satisfy the provisions of subsection 3405(a)(1)(A) and (I) of the Reclamation Projects Authorization and Adjustment Act of 1992 (Public Law 102-575) without the further concurrence of the Secretary as to compliance with said subsections if the contractor provides, not later than 90 days before commencement of any such transfer or exchange for a period in excess of 1 year, and not later than 30 days before commencement of any proposed transfer or exchange with duration of less than 1 year, written notice to the Secretary stating how the proposed transfer or exchange is intended to reduce, avoid, or mitigate impacts to water deliveries caused by the Interim Flows or Restoration Flows or is intended to otherwise facilitate the Water Management Goal, as described in the Settlement. The Secretary shall promptly make such notice publicly available.

(2) DETERMINATION OF REDUCTIONS TO WATER DELIVERIES.—Water transferred or exchanged under an agreement that meets the terms of this subsection shall not be counted as a replacement or an offset for purposes of determining reductions to water deliveries to any Friant Division long-term contractor except as provided in paragraph 16(b) of the Settlement. The Secretary shall, at least annually, make publicly available a compilation of the number of transfer or exchange agreements exercising the provisions of this subsection to reduce, avoid, or mitigate impacts to water deliveries caused by the Interim Flows or Restoration Flows or to facilitate the Water Management Goal, as well as the volume of water transferred or exchanged under such agreements.

(3) STATE LAW.—Nothing in this subsection alters State law or permit conditions, including any applicable geographical restrictions on the place of use of water transferred or exchanged pursuant to this subsection.

(f) CERTAIN REPAYMENT OBLIGATIONS NOT ALTERED.—Implementation of the provisions of this section shall not alter the repayment obligation of any other long-term water service or repayment contractor receiving water from the Central Valley Project, or shift any costs that would otherwise have been properly assignable to the Friant contractors absent this section, including operations and maintenance costs, construction costs, or other capitalized costs incurred after the date of enactment of this Act, to other such contractors.

(g) STATUTORY INTERPRETATION.—Nothing in this part shall be construed to affect the right of any Friant Division, Hidden Unit, or Buchanan Unit long-term contractor to use a particular type of financing to make the payments required in paragraph (3)(A) or (4)(A) of subsection (a).

SEC. 10011. CALIFORNIA CENTRAL VALLEY SPRING RUN CHINOOK SALMON.

(a) FINDING.—Congress finds that the implementation of the Settlement to resolve 18 years of contentious litigation regarding restoration of the San Joaquin River and the reintroduction of the California Central Valley Spring Run Chinook salmon is a unique and unprecedented circumstance that requires clear expressions of Congressional intent regarding how the provisions of the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1531 et seq.) are utilized to achieve the goals of restoration of the San Joaquin River and the successful reintroduction of California Central Valley Spring Run Chinook salmon.

(b) REINTRODUCTION IN THE SAN JOAQUIN RIVER.—California Central Valley Spring Run Chinook salmon shall be reintroduced in the San Joaquin River below Friant Dam pursuant to section 10(j) of the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1539(j)) and the Settlement, provided that the Secretary of Commerce finds that a permit for the reintroduction of California Central Valley Spring Run Chinook salmon may be issued pursuant to section 10(a)(1)(A) of the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1539(a)(1)(A)).

(c) FINAL RULE.—

(1) DEFINITION OF THIRD PARTY.—For the purpose of this subsection, the term “third party” means persons or entities diverting or receiving water pursuant to applicable State and Federal laws and shall include Central Valley Project contractors outside of the Friant Division of the Central Valley Project and the State Water Project.

(2) ISSUANCE.—The Secretary of Commerce shall issue a final rule pursuant to section 4(d) of the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1533(d)) governing the incidental take of reintroduced California Central Valley Spring Run Chinook salmon prior to the reintroduction.

(3) REQUIRED COMPONENTS.—The rule issued under paragraph (2) shall provide that the reintroduction will not impose more than de minimus: water supply reductions, additional storage releases, or bypass flows on unwilling third parties due to such reintroduction.

(4) APPLICABLE LAW.—Nothing in this section—

(A) diminishes the statutory or regulatory protections provided in the Endangered Species Act of 1973 for any species listed pursuant to section 4 of the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1533) other than the reintroduced population of California Central Valley Spring Run Chinook salmon, including protections pursuant to existing biological opinions or new biological opinions issued by the Secretary or Secretary of Commerce; or

(B) precludes the Secretary or Secretary of Commerce from imposing protections under the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C.

1531 et seq.) for other species listed pursuant to section 4 of that Act (16 U.S.C. 1533) because those protections provide incidental benefits to such reintroduced California Central Valley Spring Run Chinook salmon.

(d) REPORT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than December 31, 2024, the Secretary of Commerce shall report to Congress on the progress made on the reintroduction set forth in this section and the Secretary's plans for future implementation of this section.

(2) INCLUSIONS.—The report under paragraph (1) shall include—

(A) an assessment of the major challenges, if any, to successful reintroduction;

(B) an evaluation of the effect, if any, of the reintroduction on the existing population of California Central Valley Spring Run Chinook salmon existing on the Sacramento River or its tributaries; and

(C) an assessment regarding the future of the reintroduction.

(e) FERC PROJECTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—With regard to California Central Valley Spring Run Chinook salmon reintroduced pursuant to the Settlement, the Secretary of Commerce shall exercise its authority under section 18 of the Federal Power Act (16 U.S.C. 811) by reserving its right to file prescriptions in proceedings for projects licensed by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission on the Calaveras, Stanislaus, Tuolumne, Merced, and San Joaquin rivers and otherwise consistent with subsection (c) until after the expiration of the term of the Settlement, December 31, 2025, or the expiration of the designation made pursuant to subsection (b), whichever ends first.

(2) EFFECT OF SUBSECTION.—Nothing in this subsection shall preclude the Secretary of Commerce from imposing prescriptions pursuant to section 18 of the Federal Power Act (16 U.S.C. 811) solely for other anadromous fish species because those prescriptions provide incidental benefits to such reintroduced California Central Valley Spring Run Chinook salmon.

(f) EFFECT OF SECTION.—Nothing in this section is intended or shall be construed—

(1) to modify the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1531 et seq.) or the Federal Power Act (16 U.S.C. 791a et seq.); or

(2) to establish a precedent with respect to any other application of the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1531 et seq.) or the Federal Power Act (16 U.S.C. 791a et seq.).

(B) determines, based on information available at the time, that the local agency has the financial capability and willingness to fund its share of the project's construction and all operation and maintenance costs on an annual basis;

(C) determines that a method acceptable to the Secretary has been developed for quantifying the benefit, in terms of reduction, avoidance, or offset of the water supply impacts expected to be caused by the Interim or Restoration Flows authorized in part I of this subtitle, that will result from the project, and for ensuring appropriate adjustment in the recovered water account pursuant to section 10004(a)(5); and

“(3) To determine the occurrence and amount of any shortage to contracts entered into under this section, the Secretary shall not include as available storage any water stored in a top water bank in Navajo Reservoir established under section 16(a) of the Act of April 11, 1956 (commonly known as the ‘Colorado River Storage Project Act’).

“(f) The Secretary of the Interior shall apportion water under subsections (a), (d), and (e) on an annual volume basis.

(E) seriously impair long-term economic planning and development for all parties to the litigation;

(7) after many years of negotiation, the Tribes, the State, and the upstream water users have entered into a settlement agreement to resolve permanently all water rights of the Tribes in the State; and

“(3) Each participating coastal state shall to the extent practicable ensure that the acquisition of property or easements shall complement working waterfront needs.

“(4) The applicant shall identify the values to be protected by inclusion of the lands in the program, management activities that are planned and the manner in which they may affect the values identified, and any other information from the landowner relevant to administration and management of the land.

“(5) Awards shall be based on demonstrated need for protection and ability to successfully leverage funds among participating entities, including Federal programs, regional organizations, State and other governmental units, landowners, corporations, or private organizations.

“(6) The governor, or the lead agency designated by the governor for coordinating the implementation of this section, where appropriate in consultation with the appropriate local government, shall determine that the application is consistent with the State's or territory's approved coastal zone plan, program, and policies prior to submittal to the Secretary.

“(3) OTHER FEDERAL FUNDS.—Where financial assistance awarded under this section represents only a portion of the total cost of a project, funding from other Federal sources may be applied to the cost of the project. Each portion shall be subject to match requirements under the applicable provision of law.

“(4) SOURCE OF MATCHING COST SHARE.—For purposes of paragraph (2)(A), the non-Federal cost share for a project may be determined by taking into account the following:

“(i) the land meets the criteria set forth in section 2(b) and is acquired in the period beginning 3 years before the date of the submission of the grant application and ending 3 years after the date of the award of the grant;

“(ii) the value of the land or easement is held by a non-governmental organization included in the grant application in perpetuity for conservation purposes of the program; and

“(iii) the land or easement is connected either physically or through a conservation planning process to the land or easement that would be acquired.

“(B) The appraised value of the land or conservation easement at the time of the grant closing will be considered and applied as the non-Federal cost share.

“(C) Costs associated with land acquisition, land management planning, remediation, restoration, and enhancement may be used as non-Federal match if the activities are identified in the plan and expenses are incurred within the period of the grant award, or, for lands described in (A), within the same time limits described therein. “(1) such assurances as the Secretary may require that—

“(A) the title to the property will be held by the grant recipient or another appropriate public agency designated by the recipient in perpetuity;

“(B) the property will be managed in a manner that is consistent with the purposes for which the land entered into the program and shall not convert such property to other uses; and

“(C) if the property or interest in land is sold, exchanged, or divested, funds equal to the current value will be returned to the Secretary in accordance with applicable Federal law for redistribution in the grant process; and

“(2) certification that the property (including any interest in land) will be acquired from a willing seller.

“(j) REQUIREMENT FOR PROPERTY USED FOR NON-FEDERAL MATCH.—If the grant recipient elects to use any land or interest in land held by a non-governmental organization as a non-Federal match under subsection (g), the grant recipient must to the Secretary's satisfaction demonstrate in the grant application that such land or interest will satisfy the same requirements as the lands or interests in lands acquired under the program.

“(k) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

“(1) CONSERVATION EASEMENT.—The term ‘conservation easement’ includes an easement or restriction, recorded deed, or a reserve interest deed where the grantee acquires all rights, title, and interest in a property, that do not conflict with the goals of this section except those rights, title, and interests that may run with the land that are expressly reserved by a grantor and are agreed to at the time of purchase.

“(2) INTEREST IN PROPERTY.—The term ‘interest in property’ includes a conservation easement.”

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL) and the gentleman from Washington (Mr. HASTINGS) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from West Virginia.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on the Senate bill under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, in a speech given in the fall of 1964, as the War in Vietnam intensified, President Lyndon Johnson quoted Scripture from the Book of Matthew which says that the floods came, but the house did not fall because it was founded upon rock.

President Johnson then said the following, "The house of America is founded upon our land, and if we keep that whole, then the storm can rage, but the house will stand forever."

Once again we find ourselves as a Nation seeking shelter from the storm; the storm of two wars, the storm of economic collapse. But like President Johnson, we remain convinced that no matter what adversity we may be facing, if we are faithful stewards of our land, our house will stand forever.

The legislation before us today, S. 22, the Omnibus Public Land Management Act of 2009, will keep America's land whole. The bill contains more than 160 individual measures, including new wilderness designations, new wild and scenic rivers, new hiking trails, heritage areas, water projects, and historic preservation initiatives.

Taken as a whole, this omnibus bill is the most important piece of conservation legislation we will consider this year and perhaps this Congress. Some have argued, and will argue today, no doubt, that the challenges we face mean that we should not spend time considering environmental legislation. They dismiss the package before us as "feel good" legislation. Well, I think the American people could use some feel good legislation right now. They could use legislation that protects our pristine public lands, the clear running streams and rivers, the wide open spaces, and the unique history that make this Nation great.

When the headlines read that banks are failing and companies are folding, they could use some headlines announcing that our national parks are still beautiful, our national battlefields are still sacred, and our rivers are still wild and scenic.

When the headlines read that America's status as an economic superpower is in doubt, they could use some headlines announcing that our status as a conservation superpower has never been stronger.

The package before us is exactly what the American people want, and it is exactly what our public lands need.

In my own case, I'm enormously proud of the fact that included in this package is the Wild Monongahela Act, which will designate more than 37 acres of wilderness in my home State of West Virginia.

It should be noted that we are amending S. 22 today to insert language making it absolutely clear that this bill will not affect existing State authority to regulate hunting, fishing, and trapping on the lands in this package. The amendment also makes clear that nothing in S. 22 will affect these activities. My colleagues should know that this provision was negotiated with the National Rifle Association and has the NRA's full support.

Opponents of this bill fail to grasp the deep and abiding love the American people have for their land. They fail to understand the power of our wide-open spaces and magnificent vistas, the power of those magnificent vistas to inspire our generation and renew our spirit. It's that kind of inspiration and that kind of renewal that are always valuable, but when times are tough, they are priceless.

We should approve S. 22 today, not in spite of the challenges we face but because of them. These storms will pass and the house of America will be standing because we have kept our land whole.

I urge passage of S. 22.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, just to clarify, I have a series here of questions I would like to ask under parliamentary inquiry, and that does not count against my time; is that correct?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman has yet to be recognized for debate. It will not count against his time.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, just to be clear, as we are considering S. 22, has the gentleman from West Virginia made a motion to amend S. 22?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Further parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, is this motion by the Democrat bill manager the only way that this bill may be amended under suspension of the rules?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The motion is permitted to specify whatever text might be proposed for passage by the House. The motion is debatable for 40 minutes and not subject to amendment, not even with unanimous consent.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Further parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, just to clarify, then, under suspension of the rules, no other Member except the Democrat bill manager may offer amendments or text directly to S. 22 to change any other provisions of the bill which have not been considered by the House or which have substantive issues like cutting off recreational opportunities, reducing border security, locking up energy sources, or high costs?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The motion is debatable for 40 minutes and is not subject to amendment, not even by unanimous consent.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Further parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, if S. 22 had been considered under an open rule, would any Member with a germane amendment be able to offer that amendment?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair cannot speculate or respond to hypothetical questions.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. I think I know the answer, but further parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman may ask.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, could the Rules Committee have issued a rule to allow Members from both sides of the aisle to offer amendments to strike objectionable provisions or restore House-passed language which was not included by the Senate?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair cannot speculate or respond to hypothetical questions.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. I suspected that would be your response, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 4 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, I oppose this motion to consider the Senate Omnibus Lands bill by suspending the rules of the House.

Let us be very clear about what's happening on the House floor this morning. For weeks and months, Democrat leaders in the Senate and the House, and outside special interest groups, have repeatedly insisted that the House must pass this massive Senate bill without changing a single word or it will be doomed to Senate purgatory and no further action will be taken. This was the justification given for why every Member of this House should be blocked from offering their ideas and amendments to improve or change this 1,200-page bill. Yet this morning, as I have just confirmed with the Speaker through the parliamentary inquiry, Democrat leaders are using the special suspension process to amend the Senate bill and simultaneously block other Members from offering an amendment.

The Senate's Rubicon of not changing one word has now been crossed. S. 22 has been amended. If we change one part of the bill, then this House deserves the opportunity to consider it in an open and fair manner. Instead, the Democrat leaders are shutting down everyone from offering amendments, including Democrats who have publicly been outspoken about wanting to remove entire provisions from S. 22. I urge these Democrats and all House Members to oppose this bill under suspension and demand a fair and open process of debate.

The suspension process, Mr. Speaker, should be reserved for noncontroversial bills with little or no cost to the taxpayers. Yet, this Senate Omnibus Lands bill costs over $10 billion and consists of over 170 bills folded into a 1,200-page monster piece of legislation. Mr. Speaker, this is an extreme abuse of the process for considering bills under suspension of the rules.

Under suspension of the rules, the House has only 40 minutes to debate the bill. With over 170 bills in this omnibus package, that allows just seven seconds—seven seconds—to debate each bill. And of these 170 plus bills, 100 of them have never been passed by the House. Any notion that this is just a package of bills already passed by the House is absolutely false.

Now, I know that for some Members there may be a page or two in this 1,200-page bill that does something positive for their district. In fact, three separate pieces of legislation, Mr. Speaker, that I authored were attached to this package. But I am more concerned about the other bills that have not been closely examined or been debated by the House.

This massive bill was assembled behind closed doors with the purpose of creating a package that tries to force individual Members to vote for it in order to get their own bill passed despite broad policy differences that will have serious and harmful impacts. Members of the House should consider this bill in its entirety and what it does for our country.

This bill contains 19 provisions to block American-made energy production, locking away hundreds of millions of barrels of oil and trillions of cubic feet of natural gas. Under this bill, our country becomes less secure, and we must rely on foreign imports of energy to fuel our vehicles and run our businesses.

When the Federal Government shuts down energy production in America, we are sending good-paying jobs overseas.

Over 3 million acres of land will be locked up from possible energy production, and new jobs won't be created when Americans desperately need them in these times. With our economy reeling, and thousands of Americans losing jobs every week, this is a poisonous policy that makes it tougher and more expensive to get America's economy back on track.

This bill also bans recreational access to millions of acres of public lands despite proponents' claims that it will do otherwise. Lands that citizens currently use for enjoyment will be barricaded from recreational vehicle use. Riding a bicycle won't even be allowed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. I yield myself an additional 30 seconds.

Mr. Speaker, this bill costs $10 billion at a time when taxpayers and the economy simply can't afford it. Our National Parks Service system can't even keep existing priorities open and in working order.

With the maintenance backlog of $9 billion on existing lands, Congress should not be passing a $10 billion bill to buy more lands to make the problem worse. This bill makes it more difficult for the Border Patrol and other law enforcement agencies to secure the southern border. And this bill makes criminals and potential felons out of children who want to collect fossils on Federal lands.

Mr. Speaker, I could go on much longer, but I only have 20 minutes for debate.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself an additional 15 seconds.

And we are considering a package of over 170 bills, with just seven seconds to debate each bill's cost.

So I urge my colleagues, Mr. Speaker, to oppose passage of this bill under suspension of the rules and insist on the ability to consider under an open process that allows for amendments.

Mr. Speaker, I oppose this motion to consider the Senate Omnibus Lands bill by suspending the rules of the House.

Let us be very clear about what's happening on the House Floor this morning. For weeks and months, Democrat leaders in the Senate and the House, and outside special interest groups, have repeatedly insisted that the House must pass this massive Senate bill without changing a single word or it will be doomed to Senate purgatory and no further action will be taken.

This was the justification given for why every Representative in this House should be blocked from offering their ideas and amendments to improve or change this over 1,200 page bill.

Yet this morning, Democrat Leaders are using the special suspension process to amend the Senate bill and simultaneously block every other Representative from offering an amendment.

The Senate's rubicon of not changing one word has now been crossed. S. 22 has been amended. So then why isn't the House allowed to consider additional amendments except the one approved by Democrat leaders. If we change one part of the bill, then this House deserves the opportunity to consider it in an open and fair manner. Instead, Democrat leaders are shutting down everyone from offering amendments, including Democrats who've been publicly outspoken about wanting to remove entire provisions from S. 22 that they strongly oppose. I urge these Democrats and all House Members to oppose this bill under suspension and demand a fair, open process of debate on this bill in the House.

The suspension process is reserved for noncontroversial bills with little cost to the taxpayer. Indeed, other bills on suspension today include supporting the goals of International Woman's Day, urging the President to designate 2009 as the Year of the Military Family, and supporting the designation of Pi Day. Yet, this Senate Omnibus Lands Bill costs over 10 billion dollars, and consists of over 170 individual bills being amassed into a 1,200 page monster piece of legislation. This is an extreme abuse of the process for considering bills under suspension of House rules.

Under suspension of the rules, the House has only 40 minutes to debate the bill. I've been recognized for 20 of those minutes. With over 170 bills in this Omnibus, that allows just 7 seconds . . . 7 seconds . . . to debate each bill.

And of these 170 plus bills, some 100 of them have never been passed by the House. Any notion that this is just a packaging of bills already passed by the House is absolutely false.

I recognize what I have just spoken about is inside baseball, legislative process arguments, yet it is important for the American public to understand the heavy-fisted manner in which this House is being run. It's also important for all Representatives to understand that this bill has now been amended and that we should have the opportunity to consider other changes to it.

For every Member of the House, there may be a page or two in this 1,200 page bill that does something positive in your district. In fact, three separate pieces of legislation that I authored were attached to this package. However, I am more concerned about the other bills that have not been closely examined or debated by the House. This massive bill was written behind-closed-doors with the purpose of creating a package that tries to force individual Members to vote for it in order to get their own small bill passed despite broad policies that will have a serious and harmful impact. Members of the House should consider this bill in its entirety and what it does to our country.

It contains 19 provisions to block American-made energy production, locking away hundreds of millions of barrels of oil and trillions of cubic feet of natural gas. Under this bill, our country becomes less secure as we must rely on foreign imports of energy to fuel our vehicles and run our businesses. When the federal government shuts down energy production here in America, we're sending good-paying jobs overseas. Over 3 million acres of land will be locked up from possible energy production and new jobs won't be created when Americans desperately need them. With our economy reeling and thousands of Americans losing jobs every week, this is a poisonous policy that makes it tougher and more expensive to get America's economy back on track.

This bill bans recreational access to millions of acres of public lands despite proponents' claims that it will protect vast new land areas for the appreciation of Americans. Lands that citizens currently use for enjoyment will be barricaded from recreational vehicle use. Riding a bicycle won't even be allowed. The harm to American's outdoor enjoyment is so outrageous that even ESPN has covered it.

This bill costs $10 billion at a time when taxpayers and our economy simply can't afford it. Our National Parks System can't even keep existing properties open and in working order. With a maintenance backlog of 9 billion dollars on existing lands, Congress should not be passing a $10 billion bill to buy more land and make the problem worse.

This bill makes it more difficult for the Border Patrol and other law enforcement to secure our southern border by restricting vehicle access onto specific lands. This bill would make criminals and potential felons out of children and others who collect fossils on federal lands.

Mr. Speaker, I could go on much longer, but we have only 20 minutes for debate and we're considering a package of over 170 bills, so we have just 7 seconds to debate each bill's cost and effect upon domestic energy production, American jobs, recreation access to public lands, and border security. I urge my colleagues to oppose passage of this bill under suspension of the rules and insist on the ability to consider it under a fair, open process that allows for amendments.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RAHALL. To respond to the gentleman, over 70 bills in this omnibus land package were considered by our Committee on Natural Resources and passed out of the House of Representatives. Some 20 more were reviewed by our committee during the last session of Congress when the gentleman from Washington was on a leave of absence from our committee.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Arizona, the subcommittee Chair of our National Parks Subcommittee, a gentleman who has been very instrumental in crafting this legislation and does so much for our national parks, Mr. GRIJALVA.

Mr. GRIJALVA. Thank you, Chairman RAHALL.

S. 22 will likely be the most important piece of conservation legislation we consider this year, and perhaps this Congress.

After too many years, during which the condition of our national parks, forests, and wildlife refuges were totally ignored, after too many years where clean and abundant water, clean air, healthy trees and healthy wildlife were not priorities, S. 22 is a long overdue recommitment to the protection and the preservation of our natural and cultural resources that make this Nation truly great.

Contrary to stated cost estimates, CBO has stated this package is budget neutral. And according to just about every environmental, outdoor recreation, sportsmen's and historic preservation group, it's the best thing they've seen in a long, long time.

I am particularly proud of the inclusion of my legislation, the National Landscape Conservation System within the Bureau of Land Management. NLCS was created administratively a decade ago. It covers approximately 26 million acres—about 10 percent of the land administered by the Bureau of Land Management—including National Scenic and Historic Trails, national conservation areas, national monuments, wilderness areas, wild and Scenic Rivers, and wilderness study areas managed by BLM. These individual units make up the National Landscape Conservation System. They are unique and ruggedly beautiful areas with truly nationally significant resources.

Mr. Speaker, the opponents of this bill seem to be concerned that it will somehow change or alter current management of these lands. This is simply not true, and it's obvious if you read the text of the legislation.

After almost a decade of success, it's time for Congress to put its stamp of approval on this system by formally authorizing NLCS. That authorization, combined with the important wilderness, wild and scenic river trails, and other designations in this package will begin the process of restoring the American people's faith in our ability to serve as good stewards of the incredible natural and cultural resources which make this Nation blessed.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I yield for the purpose of making a unanimous consent request to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SMITH).

Mr. SMITH of Texas. Mr. Speaker, first of all, I thank the ranking member and gentleman from Washington for yielding, and I ask unanimous consent to have my statement made as a part of the RECORD as well as an exchange of letters between Chairman CONYERS and Chairman RAHALL.

This Public Land bill includes a provision that falls squarely within the jurisdiction of the House Judiciary Committee. Subtitle D of title six of the bill imposes both civil fines and criminal penalties for the excavation and removal of fossils and other archeological items from federal lands.

It also includes provisions relating to forfeiture and judicial review and enforcement of administrative fines—all within the purview of the Judiciary Committee.

Unfortunately, the Judiciary Committee was not given an opportunity to review or amend this language before consideration of S. 22 on the House floor today.

This provision incorporates the Paleontological Resources Preservation Act, which was introduced in the 110th Congress. Judiciary Chairman CONYERS and I raised questions about this language in the last Congress. Staff from the House Resources Committee worked with our staff to try to address these concerns.

Subtitle D employs several approaches to regulate the removal of fossils from federal lands, including criminal penalties. Certainly, the removal or destruction of fossils is inappropriate and should be deterred. But in its haste to solve this problem, the Senate concluded that a term of imprisonment is the answer.

Subtitle D makes it a felony punishable by up to five years in prison to remove fossils from federal lands.

Even more troubling is that this crime could apply to a person who unintentionally removes a fossil or artifact from federal land; that is, who has no knowledge that the item may be a fossil or artifact. So someone could pick up what they thought was an interesting pebble and face five years in prison. I hope no Member thinks that is appropriate.

These and other issues demonstrate the importance of proper deliberation and review of criminal statutes by the Judiciary Committee before bills reach the House floor.

Chairman CONYERS and Chairman RAHALL have committed to working with me on bipartisan legislation to promptly address the various defects in the criminal penalty language, and I appreciate their support. It is our hope that this legislation will move quickly through the committee process and be considered on the House floor under suspension of the rules.

We must ensure that any criminal penalties imposed for the removal of fossils or artifacts from federal lands are directed at actual criminals and do not include the unintentional acts of law-abiding citizens who visit our national parks and forests each year.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY,
Washington, DC, February 5, 2009.

Hon. NICK RAHALL,
Chairman, Committee on Natural Resources,
House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN RAHALL: I am writing regarding S. 22, the Omnibus Public Land Management Act of 2009, which has been received in the House after passing the Senate.

Subtitle D of title VI of that bill is a measure based on H.R. 554 from the 110th Congress, the Paleontological Resources Preservation Act, containing significant provisions within the Rule X jurisdiction of the Judiciary Committee, including criminal penalties, judicial review and enforcement of administrative fines, use of civil and criminal fines, and forfeiture. The Judiciary Committee received an extended referral of H.R. 554 in the 110th Congress, and our two committees had extensive discussions about refining the bill in important respects.

While I understand and support the decision, in light of the difficulty in passing S. 22 in the Senate, to attempt to pass it in the House without amendment to ensure it reaches the President, I regret that we will be unable to make appropriate refinements to the provisions in the Judiciary Committee's jurisdiction before the bill becomes law. I appreciate your willingness to work with me to make these refinements as soon as practicable in subsequent legislation.

I would appreciate your including this letter in the Congressional Record during consideration of the bill on the House floor. Thank you for your attention to this matter, and for the cooperative relationship between our two committees.

Sincerely,

JOHN CONYERS, JR.,
Chairman.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
COMMITTEE ON NATURAL RESOURCES,
Washington, DC, February 5, 2009.

Hon. JOHN CONYERS,
Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: Thank you for your letter concerning the paleontological resource provisions of Subtitle D of Title VI of S. 22 that fall within the jurisdiction of the Committee on the Judiciary. I appreciate your understanding of the need to consider S. 22 in the House without amendment so as to ensure its enactment in a timely manner. I recognize the interest of your committee in these specific provisions and will work with you to make any necessary and appropriate refinements in subsequent legislation.

This letter, as well as your letter, will be entered into the Congressional Record during consideration of S. 22 on the House floor. Thank you for the cooperative spirit in which you have worked regarding this matter and others between our respective committees.

With warm regards, I am

Sincerely,

NICK J. RAHALL II,
Chairman, Committee on Natural Resource.

MR. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. NUNES).

MR. NUNES. Mr. Speaker, this bill contains a provision called the San Joaquin River Settlement. It's a poison pill that targets my constituents. If you vote for this bill today, you vote to end agriculture in the San Joaquin Valley. This bill simply dries up 300,000 acres of farm ground. We already have 16 percent unemployment in my district. This bill ensures 20 percent.

I thought this Congress wanted to create jobs. Do radical environmentalists really possess the power to force Congress to choose dead fish over living communities? How could this possibly be in the best interest of our country during these economic times? Spending $21 million per fish to recover a Mystic Salmon run is completely irresponsible. Citizens Against Government Waste and the National Taxpayers Union have labeled this "The Billion Dollar Fish Fry."

Mr. Speaker, if you like tumbleweeds, dry dirt, bankrupt farmers, communities without water, and people without jobs, you're going to love this bill. If you believe that the most basic rule of government is to provide water to the people, you must vote "no." It's hard to imagine a more flawed approach than the one this Congress has taken today. Greed, dishonesty, and the vain hope of relief from lawsuits seem to be the primary motivation for passage of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to vote "no" on this disastrous piece of legislation.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. ALTMIRE).

Mr. BAIRD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. Speaker, the prior gentleman described greed, dishonesty, and some other thing as a motivation for the bill. Would the Speaker please remind the gentleman that questioning motivation is not acceptable?

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will remind all Members to address the Chair and refrain from improper personal remarks.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. ALTMIRE), who has been very instrumental in crafting additional language in this bill.

Mr. ALTMIRE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of my amendment to the public lands bill S. 22. I commend my colleagues in both the House and the Senate for their efforts to advance the over 150 largely noncontroversial bills that are included in the underlying legislation.

This bill preserves key components of America's natural heritage for generations to come. However, as passed by the Senate, this bill did not do enough to protect the rights of our Nation's sportsmen. For this reason I worked to include in this bill language to rectify that oversight. I am pleased that the House has added my amendment to the public lands bill we're considering today because unless Congress includes the specific protections my amendment adds to this bill, efforts to regulate or limit hunting, fishing, or trapping could potentially move forward in the future.

Last year I offered an amendment to protect the rights of sportsmen on nearly 27 million acres of public lands within the National Landscape Conservation System. It passed the House 416-5 and is maintained within Title II of today's bill. Today we simply extend those same protections to two other sections of the bill: rivers and trails in title V and heritage areas in title VIII. This ensures that nothing in these sections of the bill shall regulate hunting, fishing, and trapping or limit their access to these public lands.

My amendment is straightforward and simple. It's supported by the NRA, and with its inclusion, I urge my colleagues, especially supporters of the second amendment, to vote in favor of this public lands bill today.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. CULBERSON).

Mr. CULBERSON. Mr. Speaker, here again on this House floor a 1,294-page bill has been dropped onto the American people with no committee hearing, not even a Rules Committee hearing, spending $10 billion.

* * *

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the gentleman's words be taken down.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the words.

Mr. CULBERSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. CULBERSON. Mr. Speaker, it is important, however, that this House of Representatives represent the people and do so in a way that does not demonstrate contempt for the opinion of the people. A 1,294-page bill, Mr. Speaker, has been dropped on the floor without regard for committee hearings, without regard for transparency, without regard to the promise that this leadership made to be the most transparent, open, and accountable Congress in the history of the United States, spending $10 billion that our children do not have. That is a complete violation of all the promises made by this leadership to the people.

And look at the bill that they're passing. This piece of legislation will make a criminal out of every tourist traveling to the western United States who makes the mistake of picking up a rock and throwing it in their trunk. Grandma and Grandpa are going to be thrown in jail. And read from the bill if you don't believe me. If you don't have a permit, if you're not a qualified paleontologist, and you pick up a rock and throw it in the car, if you alter a rock on federally owned land in most of the western States and throw it in the car, it is 5 years in prison, Page 526 of the bill, 5 years in prison for putting a rock in your trunk. You will have the vehicle confiscated.

Turn to Page 531: "All vehicles and equipment shall be subject to civil forfeiture." So ladies and gentlemen of the Congress, if you vote for this bill, you're voting to subject your constituents to be thrown in jail. Grandma and Grandpa with the grandkids traveling in the western States, if they pick up a rock and throw it in the car, 5 years in jail, thousands of dollars in fines, and the Winnebago is going to be confiscated. This is dead wrong.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I think previous colloquies or language at least put into this debate by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SMITH) made it very clear that it is not the intent of the sponsors of this legislation to see innocent civilians collecting fossils on public lands go to jail. That's not the intent, and it's been made very clear both in the legislation and already in this debate thus far.

Mr. Speaker, I yield for the purpose of making a unanimous consent to the distinguished gentleman of our Energy and Minerals Subcommittee, the gentleman from California (Mr. COSTA).

Mr. COSTA. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of two important pieces of legislation that I have sponsored and that are now included in the natural resources bill that we have received from the Senate, S. 22.

SAN JOAQUIN RIVER RESTORATION SETTLEMENT ACT

The first, the San Joaquin River Restoration Settlement Act, will bring to a close 18 years of litigation between the Natural Resources Defense Council, the Friant Water Users Authority, the U.S. Department of the Interior and others. Representatives CARDOZA, MCNERNEY and RADANOVICH joined me as co-sponsors of this legislation. This bill is similar to the one that we introduced in the waning days of the 109th Congress, and reintroduced at the beginning of the 110th Congress as H.R. 24. The bill approves, authorizes and helps fund an historic Settlement on the San Joaquin River in California.

However, the bill we are introducing today does reflect a few significant changes resulting from discussions among the numerous Settling Parties and various "Third Parties" in the San Joaquin Valley of California. During the past year the parties to the settlement and these affected third parties, such as the San Joaquin River Exchange Contractors, have agreed to certain changes to the legislation to make the measure PAYGO neutral and to enhance implementation of the settlement's "Water Management Goal" to reduce or avoid adverse water supply impacts to Friant Division long-term water contractors. The legislation that we are voting on today incorporates these changes, which are supported by the State of California and major water agencies on the San Joaquin River and its tributaries. The Bush Administration also supported this legislation.

This bill will approve a settlement that seeks to restore California's second longest river, the San Joaquin, while maintaining a stable water supply for the farmers who have made the San Joaquin Valley the richest agricultural area in the world.

The Settlement has two co-equal goals: to restore and maintain fish populations in the San Joaquin River, including a self-sustaining salmon fishery, and to avoid or reduce adverse water supply impacts to long-term Friant water contractors. Consistent with the terms of the Settlement, we expect that both of these goals will be pursued with equal diligence by the federal agencies.

The bill also authorizes $1 million for the California Water Institute at California State University, Fresno, for the creation of an Integrated Regional Water Management Plan for the Central Valley. The plan will serve as a guide for those in the study area to use to address and solve long-term water needs in a sustainable and equitable manner.

This legislation is crucial. Without this consensus resolution, the parties will continue the fight, resulting in a court-imposed judgment. It is widely recognized that an outcome imposed by a court is likely to be worse for everyone on all counts: more costly, riskier for the farmers, and less beneficial for the environment.

The Settlement provides a framework that the affected interests can accept. As a result, this legislation has enjoyed the strong support of the Bush Administration, California Governor Schwarzenegger's Administration, the environmental and fishing communities and numerous California farmers and water districts, including the Friant Water Users Authority and its member districts that have been part of the litigation.

When the Federal Court approved the Settlement in late October, 2006, Secretary of the Interior Dirk Kempthorne praised the Settlement for launching "one of the largest environmental restoration projects in California's history." The Secretary further observed that "This Settlement closes a long chapter of conflict and uncertainty in California's San Joaquin Valley . . . and open[s] a new chapter of environmental restoration and water supply certainty for the farmers and their communities."

I share the former Secretary's support for this agreement, and it is my honor to join with Representatives CARDOZA, MCNERNEY and RADANOVICH, as well as Senators FEINSTEIN and BOXER who have previously introduced and supported this legislation to authorize and help fund the San Joaquin River Restoration Settlement.

For almost two years we have worked with the parties to the settlement, affected third party agencies and the State of California to ensure that the legislation complies with congressional PAYGO rules.

In November of 2007, the House Natural Resources Committee favorably reported a revised version of the bill (H.R. 4074) that included amendments conditionally agreed to by the parties that allow most Friant Division contractors to accelerate repayment of their construction cost obligation to the Treasury. In May of 2008, the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee favorably reported the Senate companion measure (S. 27) with provisions that further refined the accelerated repayment concept and addressed third party concerns about its implementation. These changes, included in the bill we introduce today, both increase the amount of up-front funding available for the settlement and decrease the bill's PAYGO "score" by $88 million, according to the Congressional Budget Office. In exchange for agreeing to early repayment of their construction obligation, Friant water agencies will be able to convert their 25-year water service contracts to permanent repayment contracts, so-called "9D contracts" under federal Reclamation Law.

I note that the Bureau of Reclamation and the Friant Water Users Authority on behalf of its members have had very specific discussions on how the repayment amounts will be calculated in accordance with this legislation, memorialized in a letter dated February 20, 2009, from Mr. Donald Glaser, Regional Director of the Bureau of Reclamation for the Mid-Pacific Region. I request that Mr. Glaser's letter be inserted in the RECORD.

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, BUREAU OF RECLAMATION,
Sacramento, CA, February 20, 2009.

Mr. RONALD JACOBSMA,
General Manager, Friant Water Users Authority,
Lindsay, CA.

Subject: Financing Provisions of the San Joaquin River Restoration Settlement Act.

DEAR MR. JACOBSMA: As you are aware, amendments were made early in 2008 to the proposed San Joaquin River Restoration Settlement Act (Act) in an effort to reduce the "PAYGO" score of the Act. One of the amendments made in the Act would authorize and direct the Secretary of the Interior to convert certain Friant Division, Hidden Unit, and Buchanan Unit irrigation contractors' water service contracts to water repayment contracts, subject to certain provisions. The Act was recently passed by the Senate as Title X, Subtitle A, Part 1, of S. 22, and we expect the House of Representatives to consider it shortly. As you know, staff from the Bureau of Reclamation and the Friant Water Users Authority have had technical discussions concerning the financing provisions of the bill. This letter and enclosures set forth our understanding of how the financing provisions will be implemented if the conversion sections of the Act, found in Section 10010, are in their current form upon enactment, if those provisions of the bill are modified before enactment, we will of course need to reevaluate whether the information in this letter and enclosures is still accurate.

Enclosed is a summary of each of the financing provisions in Section 10010 related to the contract conversion and our understanding of how they would be implemented by Reclamation (Enclosure 1). Also, enclosed are two specific examples to demonstrate how the financial calculations for this conversion and related funding would work given a number of specific assumptions (Enclosure 2). Enclosure 2 consists of a description of the assumptions used and a spreadsheet for each of the examples.

If there are any problems with the information provided in the enclosures, please contact Jason Phillips as soon as possible to discuss and resolve.

Sincerely,

DONALD R. GLASER,
Regional Director.

These new contracts will be administered as repayment contracts consistent with federal Reclamation Law, including the Acts of August 4, 1939 (ch. 418, 53 Stat. 1187) and July 2, 1956 (ch. 492, 70 Stat. 483). The later Act, among other things, provides in part that the contractors shall have a first right ". . . to a stated share or quantity of the project's available water supply . . . and a permanent right to such share or quantity upon completion of payment. . . ." It is my understanding that, except as specifically provided in this legislation, the operative provisions of such repayment contracts will be substantially similar to the existing water service contracts.

The bill also provides in Section 10010(c)(1) that, consistent with Section 213(a) of the Reclamation Reform Act of 1982, the ownership and full-cost pricing provisions of federal Reclamation Law no longer will apply to the individual Friant Contractors upon repayment of their capital obligations. A question has arisen as to whether these Reclamation Law limitations would apply to water delivered under such a repayment contract after full repayment of capital, where a Friant contractor also had a contract for another supply under a water service contract, such as the Cross Valley Canal contract. It is my understanding that the Department of the Interior and Friant contractors concur that in such a situation, the acre-limitation and full-cost pricing provisions would not apply to water delivered from Central Valley Project facilities for which the capital costs had been fully paid, but would apply to water delivered from Project facilities for which the capital costs had not been repaid, such as water from the Cross Valley Canal contracts.

The Senate Committee amendments also included new provisions to enhance the water management efforts of affected Friant water districts. These provisions are contained in Part III of Title X, Subpart A, of the legislation before the House today. These changes were developed by the parties to the settlement at my request and the request of Mr. CARDOZA and Mr. RADANOVICH to ensure that the Friant districts have the best opportunity to mitigate water supply impacts resulting from the Settlement.

Specifically, the legislation now includes new authority to provide improvements to Friant Division facilities, including restoring capacity in canals, reverse flow pump-back facilities, and financial assistance for local water banking and groundwater recharge projects, all for the purpose of reducing or avoiding impacts on Friant Division contractors resulting from additional River flows called for by the Settlement and this Legislation.

In addition, with respect to Part III authorizing financial assistance for local projects for water banking and groundwater storage, recovery and conveyance, the bill authorizes the Bureau of Reclamation to share up to 50 percent of the cost of such projects. It is my understanding that in administering other cost-sharing programs, the Bureau typically provides the maximum cost sharing authorized unless the applicant requests less.

Near the end of the 110th Congress, parties to the Settlement and affected third parties came to agreement on additional provisions that would greatly facilitate passage of the bill by making it fully PAYGO-neutral.

The legislation we are introducing today includes substantial funding, including direct spending on settlement implementation during the first ten year period of $88 million gained by early repayment of Friant's construction obligation, and substantial additional funding authorized for annual appropriation until 2019, after which it then becomes available for direct spending again. This additional funding is generated by continuing payments from Friant water users and will become directly available to continue implementing the settlement by 2019 if it has not already been appropriated for that purpose before then.

In 2006, California voters showed their support for the settlement by approving Propositions 84 and 1E, which will help pay for the Settlement, with the State of California now committing at least $200 million toward the Settlement costs during the next 10 years. When State-committed funding, direct spending authorized by the bill, and highly reliable funding from water users are added together, there is at least $380–390 million available for implementing the Settlement over the next 10 years, with additional dollars possible from additional federal appropriations.

It is my understanding that Senator FEINSTEIN intends to work during the 111th Congress to find a suitable offset that will allow restoration of all of the direct spending envisioned by the settlement without waiting until 2019, and I will do whatever I can to aid in those efforts.

Today's legislation continues to include substantial protections for other water districts in California who were not party to the original settlement negotiations. These other water contractors will be able to avoid all but the smallest water impacts as a result of the settlement, except on a voluntary basis.

The bill we are introducing today contains several new provisions to strengthen these third-party protections in light of the changes made to address PAYGO. These include safeguards to ensure that the San Joaquin River Exchange Contractors and other third parties will not face increased costs or regulatory burdens as a result of the PAYGO changes.

This agreement would not have been possible without the participation of a remarkably broad group of agencies, stakeholders and legislators, reaching far beyond the settling parties. The Department of the Interior, the State of California, the Friant Water Users Authority, the Natural Resources Defense Council on behalf of 13 other environmental organizations and countless other stakeholders came together and spent countless hours with legislators in Washington to ensure that we found a solution that the large majority of those affected could support.

I urge my colleagues in the House to approve this legislation and provide the Administration the authorization it needs to fully carry out the restoration, water management and other actions called for under the settlement.

SEQUOIA AND KINGS CANYON NATIONAL PARKS WILDERNESS

I also rise today in support of the Sequoia and Kings Canyon National Parks Wilderness designation.

This provision adds about 85,000 acres of wilderness in the Sequoia and Kings Canyon National Parks in California. About 45,000 acres of the wilderness created by this bill will be incorporated into the currently existing Sequoia-Kings Canyon Wilderness area. The other 40,000 acres will comprise a new wilderness area, which will be named after former Congressman John Krebs.

John Krebs served two-terms in Congress, from 1975 to 1979, representing California's San Joaquin Valley and the central Sierra Nevada mountains that include Sequoia and Kings Canyon National Parks. He was born in Berlin in 1926 and immigrated to the United States in 1946. He graduated from the University of California and later US's Hasting College of Law. He had lived in Fresno, California since 1958 and prior to being elected to Congress was active in local government, including serving a term on the Fresno County Board of Supervisors.

I had the great privilege of working in John Krebs first congressional campaign and joining him during his first term in Washington. It was through his efforts that Congress first provided federal wilderness designation for the Mineral King area.

The wilderness areas designated by this Act include some spectacular areas within the Sequoia and Kings Canyon National Parks. The Redwood Canyon area contains Redwood Mountain Grove, the largest stand of Giant Sequoia within the parks. The Redwood Canyon area also includes over 75 known caves, including the longest cave in California with over 21 miles of surveyed passage.

This bill is obviously very important to me—both for preserving these natural areas for future generations, as well as for honoring my former boss—and I urge my House colleagues to approve S. 22 so this measure can become law.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentlewoman from California, our subcommittee Chair of our Water and Power Subcommittee, Mrs. GRACE NAPOLITANO.

Mrs. NAPOLITANO. Mr. Speaker, allow me to speak in support of Senate bill 22, the Omnibus Public Land Management Act of 2009, within which are 30 separate authorizations for the Bureau of Reclamation and the United States Geological Survey.

The 30 bills include and highlight the changing Western water environment. The bill authorizes conservation, water-use efficiencies, water recycling projects, addresses aging infrastructure issues, and allows for the feasibility study of many much-needed water projects.

Our Subcommittee on Water and Power heard most of these bills. Some were Senate bills, and were approved by unanimously by both sides. Seven California title XVI water recycling authorizations and two groundwater recharge authorizations are included in this bill. When completed, these projects will produce 500,000 acre-feet of reclaimed reuse water and added storage capacity. There are many areas of drought in the western States, including in my home State of California, which is now facing its third unprecedented drought year. Title XVI projects would allow for communities to expand their local water resources and lessen their reliance on unreliable imported water supplies.

Finally, this legislation will ratify two tribal water right settlements in Nevada and New Mexico and set a funding mechanism for many other settlements across the West. Most importantly, S. 22 will resolve many years of litigation and bring "peace in the valley" through a sustainable water supply for tribal and nontribal communities.

I might add this was on a bipartisan basis out of my committee at all times.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. BROWN), a member of the committee.

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. John Locke, the great political philosopher, stated that "the preservation of property is the reason for which men enter into society" and that "no government hath the right to take their property, or any part of it, without their own consent, for this would be in effect to leave them no property at all."

Our Nation is facing an economic crisis. Yet Democrats are forcing this Chamber to rush through the omnibus, or should I say ominous, lands bill today that will increase government spending by as much as $10 billion and permanently lock up tens of millions of acres of the people's land.

The Federal Government already owns over 650 million acres of land that it can't take care of. The National Park Service alone faces a backlog of $9 million worth of projects that need to be funded. If S. 22 were to pass, there will be more wilderness acres in the United States than the total amount of developed land. It is a huge attack on people's rights and especially property rights.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman an additional 15 seconds.

Mr. BROUN of Georgia. It is not the role of the Federal Government to hoard massive amounts of land, and I urge my colleagues to vote "no" on S. 22.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California, Mr. MIKE THOMPSON.

Mr. THOMPSON of California. I thank the chairman for all the good work he's done on this bill and ask that we enter into a colloquy on this bill on the Trinity River.

Mr. Chairman, as you know, the Trinity River is the largest contributory to the Klamath River and is key to helping restore salmon and steelhead stocks along the entire Pacific coast. The Federal Government has a responsibility to the Hoopa Valley Indian Tribe and to the sport and commercial fishers to restore the fisheries of this great and important river. I respectfully request the chairman's cooperation in working with the new administration and the Appropriations Committee to help secure the adequate funding needed to restore the Trinity River to ameliorate any lost costs associated with the implementation of the San Joaquin River Settlement that is within this bill.

Mr. RAHALL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMPSON of California. Yes.

Mr. RAHALL. I am mindful and remain committed to progress in implementing and funding the December 19, 2000, Trinity River restoration record of decision. Restoring the fishery resources of the Trinity River is important for the Hoopa Valley Indian Tribe, commercial and recreational fishing families along the coasts of California and Oregon. I agree to work with the gentleman from California in this regard.

Mr. THOMPSON of California. Thank you very much.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 5 minutes to a very valuable member of the Natural Resources Committee, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. BISHOP).

Mr. BISHOP of Utah. Mr. Speaker, when I was teaching government, I taught my kids that a suspension was one of those noncontroversial bills for which it could be brought to the floor with a limited amount of debate and no opportunity for amendments.

We have, today, a suspension that is over 177 different measures, over half of which have never been discussed in either a House or the floor committee meeting till this morning. Twenty-three were never discussed in any committee hearing over in the Senate. When the true costs are extrapolated out over the time of the authorization, it will be close to $8 billion to $10 billion. And 37 times the description of provisions in this bill were called controversial, but that's okay, this is a suspension.

It doesn't matter that this bill has been criticized by the American Motorcyclists Association for taking millions of acres of land out of use for millions of people who want to use recreation, or been criticized by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. Even ESPN criticized this particular bill. That's okay, though, this is still a suspension.

We have been told that there is a $9 billion backlog in needs in the national parks. In the stimulus bill, apparently $2 billion was put in there to meet the needs of the national parks, and now we exacerbate the problem with another 8 to $10 billion in this particular bill.

This is the visitors' center in the Dinosaur National Monument in Utah. This is a brilliant place to go. They have been able to take away part of the mountains so a kid can go in there and actually see within the mountainside the fossils that are still there and see what scientists say is the beginning and be able to put them together. Unfortunately, no one has been able to access this building for the last 10 years because we don't have enough money to fix this building, which has been condemned.

Rather than fixing these types of buildings, within the bowels of this bill is a $34 million earmark to create a new national park in Paterson, New Jersey, which will protect such natural wonders as a condominium, a butterfly garden and a microbrewery. This is a park that was not requested by the National Park Service or not recommended by the National Park Service. Nonetheless, we are putting $34 million into that while these structures that we currently have in our national park system go vacant. That's okay. This is still a supplemental.

We will spend $110 million on heritage areas. Eleven lucky heritage areas will get Federal money to assist them in economic development and tourism development. If you don't happen to live in one of those lucky eleven areas, you will be losing tourists and losing economic development and having the wonderful opportunity to have your taxes pay for that approach.

In rough economic times like we have, this is brilliant policy by us. That's okay, it's still a suspension. Falls River in Massachusetts will have the lower Taunton declared a wild and scenic river.

The Wild and Scenic River Act was there to protect areas from development. By law or statute, you cannot have anything other than a needful building within a mile of the bank of a wild and scenic river.

Now, the last time that we were here, I went off, probably in excess, about showing ugly pictures in Falls River, Massachusetts. I shouldn't have done it. It's actually a very pretty community. The sponsors of the bill actually came back and showed pretty pictures of Falls River, Massachusetts.

The point is, it doesn't matter whether there are ugly pictures or pretty pictures, doesn't matter whether you think it's a cynical effort to stop production of some port or whether you believe the spin that this is for economic development. Regardless of whether you take any of those stands, all of those are not the purpose of a wild and scenic river.

This is Falls River, Massachusetts. These are not needful buildings within a half-mile of the bank. Regardless of how you look at that particular issue, it violates the spirit and the letter of the Wild and Scenic River Act. And it violates more than that, because it simply says the rule of law can be put apart that any time a majority comes on this floor and decides to vote for an issue that can now replace the standard of which we decide to deal with.

We have a problem with the great obstacles to our border control and border security. Within the bowels of this bill is another bill that will make it more difficult for border security, even on bicycles, to try and patrol Federal lands. Those are problems within this structure, and we are told that it's still a suspension.

We have about 12 Members, I counted, on the floor, engaging in this debate. Soon there will be 400 more coming through these doors without having heard the discussion, without having heard the debate and thinking this is nothing more than a suspension. We do need regular order.

Now, I want it very clear not only do I not own monkeys, but Mr. RAHALL is not to blame for this. Chairman RAHALL has done a perfect job on the House. Even in the bad bills he has brought forward, he at least went through regular order. This is a by-product of the Senate. This is a product of the Senate, and the Senate should be ashamed to try and compile 177 different bills into one omnibus package. And we should be ashamed of actually debating it as a suspension.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, unlike the omnibus lands packages of the past by Republican Congresses that were jammed down our throats at the last minute, this bill has been around for well over a year in our committee. To have the bill described as being jammed down their throats at this point, the gentleman from Utah has been in quite a few battles with this bill, so he must know a lot about it.

I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California, the distinguished chairman of our Education and Labor Committee, Mr. GEORGE MILLER.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. I thank the gentleman for yielding and for bringing this legislation to the floor. I particularly want to strongly support those items for title 16 of the Reclamation Act for water recycling and reuse. The projects in this bill are very good projects that are not in my district. They are all over the State in the southwest that have been authorized, but it's most important, as we enter again the third year of this drought, with continued stress put on all of the water systems throughout the West and the Southwest, that we get into recycling and reuse, this will allow communities to take control of their water resources to be more efficient in the use of them. It allows us to develop, just in this legislation alone, that these projects go forward and there is money in the stimulus for this. There was money in the appropriations bill for this.

We are seeing a savings of about half a million to a million acre feet of water in the West. That's real water. It's valuable water, and we have the ability to reuse it.

I want to thank the gentleman for this legislation and the subcommittee Chair, Mrs. NAPOLITANO, a champion of water recycling and reuse. And I would be remiss if I didn't mention the fact that this bill also protects the beautiful Passaic Falls in Paterson, New Jersey.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, how much time on both sides remains?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Washington has 5½ minutes and the gentleman from West Virginia has 7¾ minutes.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentlelady from Wyoming (Mrs. LUMMIS), a new member of the committee.

Mrs. LUMMIS. Mr. Speaker, this is a very important issue to me.

I rise to oppose Senate 22, the Omnibus Public Land Management Act in the suspension, but my decision to oppose this was not an easy one, because two of the individual bills in this omnibus measure were introduced in honor of a dear friend of mine, one of the truest Western statesmen to have ever served in the United States Congress. I speak, of course, of the late Senator Craig Thomas, who was also a Member of this body, a tireless advocate and protector of those values that continue to shape Wyoming and its people.

Wyoming is a State blessed with unparalleled natural resources, from spectacular mountain ranges and wide open plains to the vast mineral deposits that lie beneath them. In Wyoming, we find balance regarding how those very resources are managed. The bill we are considering today fails in achieving that balance.

While our economy reels and the Federal deficit reaches record highs, this bill places an additional $10 billion burden on the taxpayers in Wyoming and across the Nation. These are not dollars being spent to ease economic woes or create jobs, these are dollars being spent in large part to restrict access to our public lands, to limit responsible energy production in the West and to codify the vague and ill-conceived National Landscape Conservation System.

Supporters of this 1,200-page massive omnibus package will tell you that most of the bills it is comprised of are largely noncontroversial. In some cases they are correct, but in many cases they are not.

Nearly 100 of the bills wrapped into this measure were never considered by the full House, let alone by those of us who were freshmen. Absolutely no amendments are allowed to be offered today.

As such, I am afforded no opportunity to work with the people of my State to address the specific local concerns regarding the Wyoming portion of this package.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentlewoman has expired.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. I yield the gentlelady an additional 15 seconds.

Mrs. LUMMIS. In today's vote we are asked to choose all or nothing. I know, Mr. Speaker, the House can do better. Our public lands deserve better.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to a very valued new member of our committee, Mr. MARTIN HEINRICH, the gentleman from New Mexico.

Mr. HEINRICH. Mr. Speaker, as a New Mexican, I rise today in strong support of this public lands package. This bill represents years of work by local citizens, sportsmen, and conservationists from around the Nation.

I know this firsthand. For years before I was elected to this body, I worked with sportsmen and conservationists to add the Sabinoso Wilderness to the National Wilderness Preservation System.

It was 3 years ago this month that then-Congressman and now Senator TOM UDALL, myself and the staff of the

New Mexico BLM office spent a long day exploring this beautiful and rugged area on horseback. The Sabinoso is a stunning piece of New Mexico, characterized by high mesas, deep canyons and abundant wildlife.

In New Mexico alone, this package will designate the Sabinoso Wilderness, protect one of the most unique and beautiful cave systems in the world and protect an area rich with dinosaur tracks. In addition, it authorizes critical investments in water infrastructure and efficiency for the pueblos of the Rio Grande Valley.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I think we are kind of out of balance here.

I will reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Connecticut, Mr. CHRIS MURPHY.

Mr. MURPHY of Connecticut. I thank the chairman for his work on this bill, and let me give yet another example of the good work that has been put into this bill.

For years there have been hundreds of volunteers and land conservationists from throughout Connecticut, New Hampshire and Massachusetts who put their time into preserving and upkeeping the Triple M Trail, the Metacombet Monadnock Mattabesett Trail. For years they have asked for a Federal partnership to work along with them to preserve this incredibly important resource for the more than 2 million people throughout the northeast who live within 10 miles of what we refer to as the Triple M Trail.

This 220-mile trail goes from southern New Hampshire's southern border all the way down to Long Island Sound and provides limitless opportunities for hikers and bikers and nature enthusiasts throughout the Northeast. This legislation, giving Federal designation to this trail, is going to provide, I think, a very important lasting partnership between the Federal Government, private landowners and local conservation groups to preserve this for generations to come, and I urge passage of this legislation.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, could I inquire of my friend from West Virginia how many speakers he has.

Mr. RAHALL. If the gentleman will yield, I have four speakers, and it is my intention to conclude the debate.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. I will reserve my time.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Washington, Mr. BRIAN BAIRD.

Mr. BAIRD. Title XII of S. 22 contains four important ocean bills, including the Federal Ocean Acidification Research and Monitoring Act. For those who are unfamiliar with it, what this bill deals with is one of the grave threats of carbon buildup in the atmosphere and in the oceans.

Briefly, 25 percent of the carbon that is emitted is dissolved in the ocean. That makes the water more acidic, more acidic water creates difficulties for shellfish acquiring the minerals they need, and that applies to everything from phytoplankton to oysters, crabs, et cetera. It is a grave threat to the Nation and to the environment of the planet, and this bill is a major step forward in addressing this critical need.

I applaud this bill not only for this portion of the ocean element, but three other critical pieces of legislation to better understand our ocean, and urge its passage.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Virginia, Mr. TOM PERRIELLO.

Mr. PERRIELLO. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Omnibus Public Land Management Act, as amended by the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

As an Eagle Scout, the outdoor experiences I enjoyed helped shape my character and my commitment to public service. All future generations should have the same opportunity to enjoy our natural heritage that I had growing up in the shadow of the Blue Ridge Mountains.

As amended, this act protects our outdoors and also our freedoms. Sportsmen are some of our strongest conservationists, and their ability to enjoy our natural heritage must be preserved. I am happy that language has been added to ensure that no provision will be used to limit access to public lands for hunting and fishing.

I hope this Chamber will continue to do all in its power to defend the freedom of our sportsmen and all Americans, be it their right to access public lands or their individual right to bear arms. Theodore Roosevelt once said, "The farther one gets into the wilderness, the greater is the attraction of its lonely freedom."

The experience of the outdoors leads sportsmen, scouts, seniors, outdoorsmen and all Americans to understand the true meaning of freedom.

□ 1115

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. I will reserve.

Mr. RAHALL. How much time does the gentleman from Washington have, and what are his intentions to use it?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Washington has 3¼ minutes.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. And I have two speakers, including me.

Mr. RAHALL. I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, can I inquire of my friend how many speakers he has left?

Mr. RAHALL. Two.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Including you?

Mr. RAHALL. Not including me.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Why don't I reserve my time, and we'll be even.

Mr. RAHALL. All right. Then I will yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Virginia, Mr. GERALD CONNOLLY.

Mr. CONNOLLY of Virginia. I want to thank the distinguished chairman for his work on this very important bill. I also want to recognize my distinguished colleague, RICK BOUCHER of Virginia, for his extraordinary leadership on the Virginia Ridge and Valley Act, which is part of the Omnibus Public Land Management Act.

Virginia Ridge and Valley will permanently protect 43,000 acres of Jefferson National Forest as Wilderness, and it will also protect an additional 12,000 acres by creating two new National Scenic Areas.

These Wilderness and National Scenic Areas protect old-growth forests in the headwaters of some of the most ecologically sensitive rivers in Virginia, the Clinch and the Holston.

I congratulate the work of the committee; the distinguished chairman; and my colleague, Mr. RICK BOUCHER, and I urge passage of the legislation.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to a new member of the Natural Resources Committee, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. CHAFFETZ).

Mr. CHAFFETZ. Thank you. More than 160 titles are wrapped into more than 1,200 pages in this bill. Seventy-five of these titles in the House and 23 in the Senate have never been considered, introduced, or debated. We need openness, transparency, and debate on all bills, and this lands bill falls far short.

This bill takes roughly 8 trillion cubic feet of natural gas and 300 million barrels of oil out of production in Wyoming. At a time when we must strive for energy independence, and people need jobs, this is not a time to further lock up our resources.

This bill is also filled with pork: $3.5 million to celebrate the anniversary of St. Augustine, Florida; $250,000 dollars to decide—just to decide—how to designate Alexander Hamilton's boyhood home.

From making a child a Federal criminal for picking up a fossil, to locking up our public lands, to a lack of proper debate, I urge my colleagues to join me in voting "no" on this bill.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to a distinguished Member and a valued member of our Committee on Natural Resources, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. HOLT).

Mr. HOLT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman, and I commend him for his good work on this legislation, which would preserve important pieces of America's natural, cultural, and historical resources for future generations. Others have spoken today about valuable parts of this bill. I'd like to address that. In New Jersey, this bill would preserve our heritage as one of the leaders of the Industrial Revolution by creating the Paterson Great Falls National Historic Park and the Edison National Historic Park.

Paterson Great Falls will protect and preserve a striking natural resource, the Great Falls, along with cultural and historical sites that tell the stories of our Founders, America's economic rise, and the African American experience. Edison National Historic Park will ensure that future generations have an opportunity to visit the home and laboratory of one of New Jersey's most celebrated and influential citizens and one of America's most prominent inventors, Thomas Edison.

I'd like to commend my colleagues from New Jersey, Representatives PASCRELL and PAYNE, for their hard work on these issues, and I'd also like to commend Representative HINCHEY for his work on the Washington Rochambeau Trail in this bill. The trail will help link many of the sites in New Jersey's Crossroads of the American Revolution. These sites are of great importance to the residents of central New Jersey, and I urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Once again, Mr. Speaker, I understand that I am ready to close on my side. If the gentleman from West Virginia is prepared to close after I speak, I will go ahead.

Mr. RAHALL. I am prepared to close.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. I yield myself the balance of my time, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I just want to make a point. There's some reference here to the NRA and what their position is on this bill. I just want to say that there was a letter passed to all Members that NRA has no position on this bill. They are neutral.

Mr. Speaker, because under suspension of the rules Members cannot offer amendments directly to S. 22, so, Mr. Speaker, may I ask the gentleman from West Virginia to yield for the purpose of an amendment to his motion to strike the provisions of S. 22 which can criminalize rock-collecting on Federal lands?

Mr. RAHALL. Simple, simple answer. No.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, let me try another one. There are several issues here. May I ask the gentleman from West Virginia to yield to me for the purpose of an amendment to his motion to guarantee that S. 22 will not prohibit or delay energy development on millions of acres of Federal lands affected by this bill?

Mr. RAHALL. That is not the case. The answer is no.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. The gentleman won't yield. Mr. Speaker, I will try one more time.

May I ask the gentleman from West Virginia to yield to me for the purpose of an amendment to his motion to guarantee that S. 22 will not prohibit recreational access for all Americans to the millions of acres of Federal lands affected by this bill?

Mr. RAHALL. The question is not in order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, how much time do I have left?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman has 1¼ minutes.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I just want to point out that this is an extraordinary process. Suspension of the rules for bills are generally for noncontroversial issues. This is a $10 billion authorization bill, and it was amended. It was amended. But nobody else, including those that I referenced here earlier, had an opportunity to come to the floor and offer their amendment in their way to try to perfect this bill.

So, I am urging my colleagues to vote "no" on this bill. When it's defeated under suspension of the rules, the majority can take this back to Rules, have an open rule so we can debate this process, I think, in a very reasonable way.

Because, keep in mind, Mr. Speaker, we were told, "No amendments on this bill or the Senate will take it down to their purgatory." That didn't happen. So, with that, Mr. Speaker, I yield back my time and urge a "no" vote.

Mr. RAHALL. How much time, Mr. Speaker?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Two minutes.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, much has been said about the cost of this legislation. I think it's important to note that CBO estimates that enacting S. 22 would have no effect on revenues and no net effect on direct spending over the 2009 to 2018 period, which is the time period relevant to enforcing the pay-as-you-go rules under the current budget resolution. So, this legislation is PAYGO-compliant. PAYGO rules do apply here; something the Republicans never followed when they were in power.

This is an authorization process and, as most Members know, there's a difference between authorization and appropriation. If Members oppose certain projects in this bill, then the case is to take this to the Appropriations Committee, where those concerns can be properly aired.

The bill contains numerous provisions related to non-Federal matching funds in order to maximize public benefit while minimizing Federal expenditures, an important point that has not yet been made in the pending legislation.

So, as I conclude, Mr. Speaker, let me say, as I said in the beginning, this bill is important, especially in today's troubled economic times. We find more and more families where both breadwinners have to find jobs in order to make ends meet. That means that quality time spent at home is rare, and the quantity of time in which families can spend together is even more rare today. Whenever there is time found together, it must be quality time, and that quality time can be found in our National Parks and our public lands and our heritage areas and our historically preserved areas, in our open spaces.

And that's what this legislation is about. It's a family values issue. Providing hardworking American families today time to spend quality time and quantity time is rare; to spend quality time together in our open spaces, recognizing the vast heritage and important heritage and proud heritage of this great land that we call America. That is what this legislation is all about, and I urge my colleagues to vote "yes."

Mr. STUPAK. Mr. Speaker, I am troubled by the manner in which this bill, S. 22, the Omnibus Public Lands Act, was brought to the House floor with no opportunity to amend and little input from members of this chamber.

We are all aware of the challenges in moving legislation, particularly this legislation, through the Senate. But that does not mean we should defer to the judgment of 99 Senators and let the voices of the 435 members of the House and their constituents go unheard.

There are a lot of good things in this bill. For example, I am pleased S. 22 includes stand alone legislation I have introduced, H.R. 488, to decrease the matching funds requirement and authorize additional appropriations for Keweenaw National Historical Park in Michigan. Another provision in the bill would support the North Country National Scenic Trail, which snakes more than a thousand miles across my state.

Despite the inclusion of these provisions, this could be a stronger bill with input from the House. There is no better example of this than the one amendment that was allowed, that offered by Mr. ALTMIRE. His amendment protects access to public lands for recreational activities otherwise allowed by law or regulation, including hunting, fishing and trapping and clarifies states' authority to manage fish and wildlife populations.

I have drafted an amendment, which due to the way this bill was brought to the floor I was unable to offer, to strip a provision designating 11,739 acres at Pictured Rocks National Lakeshore as the Beaver Basin Wilderness Area. The proposed wilderness designation is located entirely in my congressional district and lacks the support of the local city and county governments. This issue deserved debate and consideration by the House before pushing through this public lands bill.

Quickly adding S. 22 to the suspension calendar and effectively blocking input and changes is not appropriate regular order. Ultimately, the good things in this bill outweigh my frustrations over the process so I will support final passage. But I urge you, Mr. Speaker, to restore regular order to the House floor.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask my colleagues to join me today to pass S. 22, the Omnibus Public Land Management Act. This bill is a compilation of over 160 bills intended to protect millions of acres of wilderness and miles of national wild and scenic rivers. It will also establish three new national park units, four new national trails and more. The Lifetime Innovations of Thomas Edison (LITE) Act, which is part of the omnibus legislation, honors the life and accomplishments of New Jersey's own Thomas Edison.

The Lifetime Innovations of Thomas Edison Act (LITE) Act is a testament to Edison whose impact is still being felt today. Congress, in 1928, honored Edison with the Congressional Gold Medal for the "development and application of inventions that have revolutionized civilization in the last century." In 1997, Life magazine named Edison "Man of the Millennium" in recognition of his inventions that have transformed modern society, including the incandescent light bulb, the motion picture camera, and the phonograph. The LITE Act will preserve the intellectual and physical accomplishments of Thomas Edison by commemorating his lifetime achievements; re-designating the Edison National Historic Site, located in West Orange, NJ, my Congressional district, as a National Historic Park; and authorizing appropriations to support the site.

The Edison site is actually comprised of two separate sites—Edison's home of 45 years (known as Glenmont) and his laboratory complex. The Edison site houses over five million pages of documents, over 400,000 artifacts, approximately 35,000 sound recordings, and over 10,000 books from Edison's personal library. Like this priceless collection of documents and artifacts, Edison's laboratory complex and home are also historical treasures. With buildings dating back to 1887, the laboratory complex was one of America's first research and development facilities, and is where Edison earned over half of his 1,093 patents. Moreover, Mr. Edison's gravesite is located on the grounds of his beloved Glenmont, a twenty-nine room home built in 1880 that contains original furnishings and other family items.

The LITE Act is critical to efforts to protect the Thomas Edison National Historic Site. The Edison site has enormous historical significance for America and for the world, and is badly in need of restoration. The need for major infrastructure improvements at the Edison site has been documented as early as 1972. Additionally, the site was listed, in 1992, by the National Trust for Historic Preservation as one of the nation's most "endangered historic places." The laboratory complex is currently closed to the public because of an extensive restoration effort. It is estimated that the first phase of the restoration effort will conclude this April and that the laboratory complex will open for public preview some time this summer. Renovations at Glenmont have been completed and the site is open to the public and fully functioning. Plans also exist for a second phase of the restoration project. Currently, National Park Service (NPS) staff are housed in historic buildings under less than ideal circumstances. The second phase will focus on getting NPS staff out of the historic buildings and into office space that better supports their critical mission of preserving Edison's historical legacy.

When the Edison site was fully operational, approximately 95,000 people visited the site each year. It is estimated that the number of visitors will nearly triple when the first phase of the restoration project is completed. The LITE Act would ensure this commitment by re-designating the Edison site as a "national historical park" (consistent with National Park Service guidelines) and authorizing appropriations for restoration work. These measures will preserve Thomas Edison's historical legacy, enhance the educational experience of visitors to the site, and hopefully, encourage more private funding for restoration projects.

Although private benefactors—most notably the Edison Preservation Foundation—have generously donated significant resources to restore the site, the federal government's long-term commitment to the site is critical to its longevity and educational mission. This legislation recognizes Thomas Edison's numerous contributions to American society and preserves the Edison National Historic Site as a leading educational, scientific and cultural center.

S. 22, the Omnibus Public Land Management Act of 2009 is a sweeping piece of legislation that will conserve millions of acres of America's splendor for future generations. The Lifetime Innovations of Thomas Edison Act is a small component of the bill but will provide great educational and entertainment opportunities for the people of New Jersey and others who will visit this historic gem. I respectfully urge my colleagues to support this important legislation.

Mrs. CAPPS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to express my support for S. 22, the Omnibus Public Land Management Act of 2009.

I want to thank Chairman RAHALL for his leadership during the previous Congress to move this important legislation forward. While we were unable to vote on this package last year, it is time that we pass these bills.

This legislation is a bipartisan package of more than 160 individual bills, and incorporates a wide range of public lands, water resources, and ocean and coastal protection measures that impact various regions of our Nation. All of the bills included in the package have been thoroughly reviewed and approved by the House or favorably reported by the Senate committee of jurisdiction during the 110th Congress.

Today, I wish to highlight four bills in the omnibus package that I sponsored during the 111th Congress.

First, the Coastal and Estuarine Land Conservation Program Act.

This legislation codifies and strengthens an existing NOAA program—the Coastal and Estuarine Land Conservation Program or CELCP—that awards grants to coastal states to protect environmentally sensitive lands.

As someone who represents over 200 miles of California's coastline, I'm well aware of the pressures of urbanization and pollution along our nation's coasts. These activities threaten to impair our watersheds, impact wildlife habitat and cause damage to the fragile coastal ecology.

Coastal land protection partnership programs, like CELCP, can help our Nation meet these growing challenges.

For example, in my congressional district I've worked collaboratively with environmental groups, willing sellers, and the State to conserve lands and waters around Morro Bay, on the Gaviota Coast, and near the Piedras Blancas Light Station.

These projects have offered numerous benefits to local communities by preserving water quality, natural areas for wildlife and birds, and outdoor recreation opportunities—thereby protecting for the future the very things we love about the coasts.

Although the program has been in existence for six years, it has yet to be formally authorized. This legislation seeks to do just that. It expands the federal/state partnership program explicitly for conservation of coastal lands.

Under this program, coastal states can compete for matching funds to acquire land or easements to protect coastal areas that have considerable conservation, recreation, ecological, historical or aesthetic values threatened by development or conversion.

It will not only improve the quality of coastal areas and the marine life they support, but also sustain surrounding communities and their way of life.

I would also like to acknowledge the work of former Congressman Jim Saxton. Mr. Saxton introduced this legislation in the 109th and 110th Congresses. His longstanding commitment to passage of this legislation will ensure the protection of the important coastal habitat and provide for increased recreational opportunities throughout his home state of New Jersey.

The Omnibus Public Land Management Act also includes my Integrated Coastal and Ocean Observation System Act.

This legislation seeks to establish a national ocean and coastal observing, monitoring, and forecasting system to gather real-time data on the marine environment, to refine and enhance predictive capabilities, and to provide other benefits, such as improved fisheries management and safer navigation.

To safeguard our coastal communities and nation, we must invest in the integration and enhancement of our coastal and ocean observing systems.

The devastation caused by tsunamis, hurricanes, and other coastal storms demonstrates the critical need for better observation and warning systems to provide timely detection, assessment and warnings to millions of people living in coastal regions around the world.

The U.S. Commission on Ocean Policy, the Pew Oceans Commission, and many government ocean advisory groups have called for the establishment of a national integrated coastal and ocean observing system as the answer to this challenge.

Specifically, the National Integrated Coastal and Ocean Observing System Act would formally authorize the President to develop and operate a genuine national coastal and ocean observing system to measure, track, explain, and predict events related to climate change, natural climate variability, and interactions between the oceans and atmosphere, including the Great Lakes; promote basic and applied science research; and institutionalize coordinated public outreach, education, and training.

Importantly, this system will build on recent advances in technology and data management to fully integrate and enhance the nation's existing regional observing assets, like the Southern and Central and Northern California Ocean Observing Systems, which operate off California's coastline. These systems have proven invaluable in understanding and managing our ocean and coastal resources.

I would also like to commend our former colleague from Maine, Congressman Tom Allen, for championing this legislation in the 110th Congress. Congressman Allen worked tirelessly to enact this important legislation in the last session, and he deserves a tremendous amount of credit when this measure is signed into law.

S. 22 also includes my City of Oxnard Water Recycling and Desalination Act.

This bill authorizes a proposed regional water resources project—the Groundwater Recover Enhancement and Treatment or GREAT Program—located in my congressional district.

Many communities today are faced with the difficult task of providing reliable and safe water to their customers. The City of Oxnard is no exception.

Oxnard is one of California's fastest growing cities and is facing an ever-growing crisis: it's running out of affordable water.

The water needs for the city's agricultural and industrial base, together with its growing population, have exceeded its local water resources. As a result, over 50 percent of its water has to be imported from outside sources. However, through a series of local, state and federal restrictions the amount of imported water available to the city is shrinking, while the cost of that water is rising.

Recognizing these challenges, Oxnard developed the GREAT Program to address its long-term water needs.

The GREAT Program elements include a new regional groundwater desalination facility to serve potable water customers in Oxnard and adjacent communities; a recycled water system to serve agricultural water users and provide added protection against seawater intrusion and saltwater contamination; and a wetlands restoration and enhancement component that efficiently reuses the brine discharges from both the groundwater desalination and recycled water treatment facilities.

Implementation of the GREAT Program will provide many significant regional benefits.

First, the new desalination project will serve ratepayers in Oxnard and adjacent communities, guaranteeing sufficient water supplies for the area.

Second, Oxnard's current water infrastructure delivers approximately 30 million gallons of treated wastewater per day to an ocean outfall. The GREAT Program will utilize the resource currently wasted to the ocean and treat it so that it can be reused by the agricultural water users in the area.

During the non-growing season, it will inject the resource into the ground to serve as a barrier against seawater intrusion and saltwater contamination. To alleviate severely depressed groundwater levels, this component also pumps groundwater into the aquifer to enhance groundwater recharge.

Finally, the brine produced as a by-product of the desalination and recycling plants will provide a year-round supply of nutrient-rich water to the existing wetlands at Ormond Beach.

I commend Oxnard for finding innovative and effective ways of extending water supplies in the West. In my view, the City of Oxnard Water Recycling and Desalination Act supports one such creative solution.

It will reduce the consumption of groundwater for agricultural and industrial purposes, cut imported water delivery requirements, and improve local reliability of high quality water deliveries.

Finally, the package includes my Goleta Water Distribution System Conveyance Act.

This bill authorizes the title transfer of a federally owned water distribution system in my congressional district from the Bureau of Reclamation to the Goleta Water District.

The purpose of the legislation is to simplify the operation and maintenance of the District's water distribution system and eliminate unnecessary paperwork and consultation between the District and the Bureau.

The Goleta Water District has operated and maintained the facilities proposed for transfer since the 1950s. They have worked through all requirements of the Bureau's title transfer process, including public meetings, fulfillment of their repayment obligations, completion of an environmental assessment, and compliance with all other applicable laws.

The only step remaining to complete the process is an act of Congress enabling the Secretary of the Interior to transfer title.

It is important to note that the proposed transfer would apply only to lands and facilities associated with the District and would not affect the District's existing water service contract with the Santa Barbara County Water Agency, nor the Federal government receipts from water deliveries under the contract.

In addition, the proposed transfer does not envision any new physical modification or expansion of the service infrastructure.

I'm pleased the Bureau supported my legislation, which will allow the Bureau to focus its limited resources where they are needed most.

In my view, this is an example of local problem-solving at its best. I commend the staff of the water district and the Bureau for their efforts to reach this agreement. I know that they have been working on this for several years now.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, all of these bills could not have been accomplished without the strong support and hard work and dedication of the House Leadership and Chairman RAHALL, and I thank them for successfully moving these priorities in my congressional district.

I urge all of my colleagues to support the Omnibus Public Land Management Act of 2009.

Mr. MINNICK. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of the Public Lands Management Act.

Teddy Roosevelt once spoke of his fondness for the out of doors when he said, "there are no words that can tell the hidden spirit of the wilderness, that can reveal its mystery, its melancholy, and its charm."

This legislation contains a protection for a number of America's public lands and in particular, for a treasured place back in my home of Idaho called the Owyhee Canyonlands.

Last summer, I had the privilege of spending a week floating the river which created the area this bill will protect. We saw redband trout in the pristine rapids, camped along the lush river banks, climbed up the rocky canyon walls to see bighorn sheep, and stood at the top looking at a rich desert plateau of sage grouse, antelope and bald eagles.

When passed, this bill will permanently protect as wilderness 517,000 beautiful acres in the southwestern corner of my home state's landscape and would provide wild and scenic status to nearly 315 miles of rivers. It will also guarantee that the ranching families who have protected this land for generations will continue on, with their grazing rights protected.

None of that would be possible without the hard work of my friend and colleague in the Senate, MIKE CRAPO, who fostered a collaborative process of ranchers, public officials, community leaders and conservationists to preserve our cherished Owyhees.

Many of these provisions in this bill have been waiting on Congressional action for years and are supported by Members from across the political spectrum. I urge you to join us today in supporting this historic legislation.

Mr. ISSA. Mr. Speaker within the gigantic omnibus lands bill that is on the floor today are two authorizations for water projects that will greatly benefit my Congressional District and much of Southern California. I did not ask that the Santa Margarita Conjunctive Use Project and the Elsinore Valley Municipal Water District Wildomar Service Area Recycled Water Distribution Facilities and Alberhill Wastewater Treatment and Reclamation Facility Projects be rolled into this 1,200, plus-page bill. Each of these projects had enough merit to pass the House on their own and could have just as easily passed the Senate. They are worthy projects that will help to address the water shortage that Southern California continues to experience.

The first authorization, for the Santa Margarita Conjunctive Use Project, directs the Bureau of Reclamation to construct a project for the benefit of the Fallbrook Public Utilities District and the United States Marine Corps base at Camp Pendleton consisting of enhanced recharge in the groundwater basins using natural and enhanced river flows. All of the project rights-of-way are already held. A feasibility study and joint EIS/EIR is under preparation by the Bureau of Reclamation.

The project sets aside and preserves valuable riparian and upland habitats of the last free flowing river in California, using a portion of the 1,300 acres originally purchased for a dam and reservoir. It would improve and partially privatize the water supply to USMC Base Camp Pendleton, which will receive better quality water in quantities sufficient to meet water needs up to its ultimate planned utilization.

This legislation also provides a final resolution to litigation that began over forty years ago. In 1966, the U.S. District Court directed the Department of the Interior to provide a "physical solution" to the division of water of the Santa Margarita River as set forth in a stipulated judgment. Previous legislative efforts to authorize a two dam project on the river were not successful. The conjunctive use project utilizes advances in water treatment technology, making it possible to comply with the court's directive at less than half the cost of the two dam project and without environmental degradation.

Finally, this project provides a safe, drought and earthquake proof water supply of as much as 18,000 acre feet of water per year, enough for 35,000 families, for Camp Pendleton and Fallbrook. The project yield will be split with 60% for Camp Pendleton and 40% for Fallbrook.

This is a good project and deserves to be authorized.

The second authorization, the Elsinore Valley Municipal Water District Wildomar Service Area Recycled Water Distribution Facilities and Alberhill Wastewater Treatment and Reclamation Facility Projects, Amends the Reclamation Wastewater and Groundwater Study and Facilities Act to authorize the Secretary of the Interior, in cooperation with the Elsinore Valley Municipal Water District, California, to participate in the design, planning, and construction of permanent facilities needed to establish recycled water distribution and wastewater treatment and reclamation facilities that will be used to treat wastewater and provide recycled water in the water district.

This project is needed to provide additional water resources for agricultural and residential areas in Riverside County. In the wake of additional water limitations from the Colorado River and the Sacramento Delta this authorization creates an additional local water resource that gives the district better options.

Ms. DELAURO. Mr. Speaker, we have an obligation to our communities and to generations that follow, to preserve our nation's scenic beauty, wildlife, and outdoor recreation. The Grand Canyon, Yellowstone, Acadia, and the Blue Ridge Mountains are just a few of our country's natural treasures admired around the world. Yet there are many more, so critical to our natural heritage and to our basic well-being.

The Omnibus Public Land Management Act of 2009 (S-22) will save many of those other special places and sustain America's unique greatness as a nation of unparalleled natural treasures. One of the many important achievements of this package of 160 public lands bills is Congressional designation of 86 Wild & Scenic rivers in Arizona, California, Idaho, Massachusetts, Oregon, Utah, Vermont, and Wyoming. From our own experience in Connecticut we know the special value of a Wild & Scenic river designation.

Take for example our Eightmile River Wild and Scenic River designation signed into law last May, championed by my colleague JOE COURTNEY. An unprecedented level of protection has now been produced for one of New England's outstanding river systems, and Wild & Scenic designation was the catalyst for getting it done. In CT like New England we are many separate towns with our own identities and agendas. Getting towns to work together on regional issues is very tough. But the Wild & Scenic process brought the watershed towns together and they worked hard for several years. With the support of the designation process, they scientifically identified the river system's outstanding resource values such as its high "Water Quality" and diversity of "Unique Species." They built community awareness of the river's importance and community involvement in the Wild and Scenic process. The commitment to protect the river was widespread among citizens and made official through overwhelming town votes for designation. Today, thousands of acres have been conserved and a long term management plan for the entire Watershed developed and adopted. Now, through its Wild and Scenic designation, the Eightmile has a federal partner and special federal protection. It is a model of communities taking strong action together to realize a common vision. It is also a model of how small amounts of federal funding can help inspire local action and leverage substantial non-federal resources.

I am so pleased to see Congress taking action through the Omnibus Public Land Management Act of 2009 to realize our common desire to keep America the beautiful. As Wild and Scenic designation is a great asset for our state, this bill will help create many more invaluable assets for our entire country.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I submit for inclusion in the RECORD the following exchange of letters between the Judiciary and Natural Resources Committees regarding a certain jurisdictional aspect of S. 22.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY,
Washington, DC, February 5, 2009.

Hon. NICK RAHALL,
Chairman, Committee on Natural Resources,
House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN RAHALL: I am writing regarding S. 22, the Omnibus Public Land Management Act of 2009, which has been received in the House after passing the Senate.

Subtitle D of title VI of that bill is a measure based on H.R. 554 from the 110th Congress, the Paleontological Resources Preservation Act, containing significant provisions within the Rule X jurisdiction of the Judiciary Committee, including criminal penalties, judicial review and enforcement of administrative fines, use of civil and criminal fines, and forfeiture. The Judiciary Committee received an extended referral of H.R. 554 in the 110th Congress, and our two committees had extensive discussions about refining the bill in important respects.

While I understand and support the decision, in light of the difficulty in passing S. 22 in the Senate, to attempt to pass it in the House without amendment to ensure it reaches the President, I regret that we will be unable to make appropriate refinements to the provisions in the Judiciary Committee's jurisdiction before the bill becomes law. I appreciate your willingness to work with me to make these refinements as soon as practicable in subsequent legislation.

I would appreciate your including this letter in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD during consideration of the bill on the House floor. Thank you for your attention to this matter, and for the cooperative relationship between our two committees.

Sincerely,

JOHN CONYERS, Jr.,
Chairman.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
COMMITTEE ON NATURAL RESOURCES,
Washington, DC, February 5, 2009.

Hon. JOHN CONYERS,
Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary, Rayburn HOB, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: Thank you for your letter concerning the paleontological resource provisions of Subtitle D of Title VI of S. 22 that fall within the jurisdiction of the Committee on the Judiciary. I appreciate your understanding of the need to consider S. 22 in the House without amendment so as to ensure its enactment in a timely manner.

I recognize the interest of your committee in these specific provisions and will work with you to make any necessary and appropriate refinements in subsequent legislation.

This letter, as well as your letter, will be entered into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD during consideration of S. 22 on the House floor. Thank you for the cooperative spirit in which you have worked regarding this matter and others between our respective committees.

With warm regards, I am

Sincerely,

NICK J. RAHALL, II,
Chairman.

Mr. LANGEVIN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of S. 22, the Omnibus Public Land Management Act of 2009. Not only does this measure combine 71 bills already passed by the House of Representatives that improve forest health, facilitate better land management and protect water resources; it contains a bill that is long overdue for the President's signature—The Christopher and Dana Reeve Paralysis Act.

In the beginning of the 108th Congress, I joined a number of my colleagues in announcing the introduction of this critical piece of legislation. On that spring day in 2003, we were joined by Christopher Reeve. Each of us who had the privilege of working with Chris knows that his voice was strong and his perseverance was limitless. He worked tirelessly to raise awareness of spinal cord injuries and bring science closer to a cure. I would like to take this opportunity to recall what he said to us on that day six years ago:

"I am honored and humbled to have my name associated with such a powerful piece of legislation. The passage of this bill will send an unprecedented message—the issues of research, rehabilitation and quality of life are paramount to improving the lives of those living with disabilities."

These words ring true today—and I know that the spirit and force behind them are more powerful than ever as we prepare to pass a bill that will truly make a difference in the advancement of paralysis research. This legislation will authorize funding for the National Institutes of Health (NIH) to expand and coordinate NIH activities on paralysis research to prevent redundancies and accelerate discovery of better treatments and cures. It will also establish a grant program in the Department of Health and Human Services for activities related to paralysis, including establishing registries and disseminating information.

Mr. Speaker, as a lawmaker eager to preserve our public lands, as well as find new treatments and cures for paralysis, I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of S. 22 and support its final passage.

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, I will vote today for S. 22 because I have been an advocate of initiatives like many that are authorized in this package that protect our nation's historical, cultural, and scenic heritage. Several provisions in this bill will specifically help to preserve areas in my district and throughout the state of Virginia.

I have cosponsored and voted for the Civil War Battlefield Preservation Act, which is included in this package and provides grants to assist with the purchase of important Civil War sites that have not yet been protected. This program has helped preserve many sites in my district, rich in Civil War heritage. Most recently, the purchase of the site of the Battle of Third Winchester is contingent on receiving grant funding from this program.

Other initiatives that will preserve important sites in Virginia that are included in this package are the Virginia Ridge and Valley Act, the Northern Neck National Heritage Area Study Act and the Washington-Rochambeau Revolutionary Route National Historic Trail Designation Act.

While I agree in general with the intent of programs included in this package, I also have concerns regarding some of its provisions. There is language included in the bill that would prohibit natural resource development on about 1.2 million acres in Wyoming. According to the Bureau of Land Management, this provision would permanently take 8.8 trillion cubic feet of natural gas and 300 million barrels of oil out of production. I believe that it is irresponsible to put restrictions on domestic energy production. Environmentally friendly domestic energy production should be considered as part of a comprehensive energy plan to help stabilize the cost of gasoline and reduce U.S. dependence on foreign oil.

I also maintain that long-term, permanent energy policy must be developed through clean, alternative and renewable energy resources to fuel our cars and light our homes and businesses. Solar power, wind power, clean coal technology, nuclear power, the hydrogen economy, new energy transmission technology, hybrid vehicle development, biofuels—every option must be on the table for investment and development to secure our nation's energy needs for the 21st century. But we cannot close the door to domestic energy production.

Mr. BRADY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, as chairman of the Committee on House Administration, I urge passage of S. 22, which contains three important projects to advance the mission of the Smithsonian Institution.

This legislation would authorize the design and construction of laboratory and support space for the Mathias Laboratory at the Smithsonian Environmental Research Center (SERC) in Edgewater, Maryland; authorize construction of laboratory space to accommodate the terrestrial research program at the Smithsonian Tropical Research Institute (STRI) in Gamboa, Panama; and authorize construction of a greenhouse facility at its museum support facility in Suitland, Maryland, to maintain the horticultural operations of, and preserve the orchid collection held in trust by, the Smithsonian. The diverse nature of these projects is a good example of the unique role that the Smithsonian plays in advancing our knowledge of the natural world.

The Committee on House Administration and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure reported legislation last year approving Smithsonian construction projects, which subsequently passed the House without controversy. This omnibus legislation, S. 22, is the clearest and quickest way to ensure enactment of these important initiatives.

Mr. RAHALL. I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr.

RAHALL) that the House suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill, S. 22, as amended.

The question was taken.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds being in the affirmative, the yeas have it.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

SUPPORTING DESIGNATION OF PI DAY

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the resolution (H. Res. 224) supporting the designation of Pi Day, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the resolution.

The text of the resolution is as follows:

H. RES. 224

Whereas the Greek letter (Pi) is the symbol for the ratio of the circumference of a circle to its diameter;

Whereas the ratio Pi is an irrational number, which will continue infinitely without repeating, and has been calculated to over one trillion digits;

Whereas Pi is a recurring constant that has been studied throughout history and is central in mathematics as well as science and engineering;

Whereas mathematics and science are a critical part of our children's education, and children who perform better in math and science have higher graduation and college attendance rates;

Whereas aptitude in mathematics, science, and engineering is essential for a knowledge-based society;

Whereas, according to the 2007 Trends in International Mathematics and Science Study (TIMSS) survey done by the National Center for Education Statistics, American children in the 4th and 8th grade were outperformed by students in other countries including Taiwan, Singapore, Russia, England, South Korea, Latvia, and Japan;

Whereas since 1995 the United States has shown only minimal improvement in math and science test scores;

Whereas by the 8th grade, American males outperform females on the science portion of the TIMSS survey, especially in Biology, Physics, and Earth Science, and the lowest American scores in math and science are found in minority and impoverished school districts;

Whereas America needs to reinforce mathematics and science education for all students in order to better prepare our children for the future and in order to compete in a 21st Century economy;

Whereas the National Science Foundation has been driving innovation in math and science education at all levels from elementary through graduate education since its creation 59 years ago;

Whereas mathematics and science can be a fun and interesting part of a child's education, and learning about Pi can be an engaging way to teach children about geometry and attract them to study science and mathematics; and

Whereas Pi can be approximated as 3.14, and thus March 14, 2009, is an appropriate day for "National Pi Day": Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the House of Representatives—

(1) supports the designation of a "Pi Day" and its celebration around the world;

(2) recognizes the continuing importance of National Science Foundation's math and science education programs; and

(3) encourages schools and educators to observe the day with appropriate activities that teach students about Pi and engage them about the study of mathematics.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. DAVIS) and the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. BROWN) each will control 20 minutes.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days to revise and extend their remarks and to include extraneous material on House Resolution 224, the resolution now under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 224, supporting the designation of Pi Day. This Saturday is March 14. The Greek letter pi—the symbol for the ratio of the circumference of a circle to its diameter—is rounded to 3.14.

I'd like to take this opportunity to encourage our Nation's students of all ages, schools, and teachers, to observe Pi Day with fun math and science activities and events.

This is a lighthearted event with serious goals. Math and science underpin our Nation's economic competitiveness and national security. By engaging in fun math and science activities from a young age, we are setting our students on a path towards science and math literacy, and opening the door to rewards and promising careers.

Research has shown that most students who are not comfortable with math and science by junior high remain intimidated or uninterested throughout their education careers.

On Pi Day, we want students to have fun with math and science. Second-graders could calculate the area of a pizza pie at a Pi Day pizza party. Sixth graders could learn about Newton's Laws of Motion from a game of bocce ball. Tenth-graders could learn about the hyperbolic functions by shooting Nerf rockets in the park.

I leave the specifics to the schools, but my advice is to go and have some fun. Let the students see firsthand how math and science is fun and relevant. Let them see that it does apply to them. Let them discover that they really do like math and they really do like science.

This is a lighthearted event, but the underlying problems we have in America are serious. The President of the United States stood in this room a few weeks ago and told us that "the countries that out-teach us today will out-compete us tomorrow."

According to the 2007 Trends in International Mathematics and Science, a survey done by the National Center for Education Statistics, American children in the fourth and eighth grades were outperformed by students in other countries, including Taiwan, Singapore, Russia, England, South Korea, Latvia, and Japan. Other students have been making improvements since the 1995 TIMSS, but they still are not achieving their potential. It doesn't matter to them as individuals but, boy, does it matter to our Nation as a whole.

The 2005 National Academics Report, "Rising Above the Gathering Storm," looked at our economic competitiveness and showed us a blank and bleak future—a stagnating U.S. economy, an ill-equipped educational system, and the U.S. losing its place as a scientific world leader.

The recommendations contained in the "Rising Above the Gathering Storm" report were meant to pull us off the path we were on. They were signed into law in 2007 as part of the America COMPETES Act, and fell basically into three categories: Investments in basic research; innovation as the path toward reducing our dependence on foreign oil; and improving science, technology, engineering, and math education.

Our students' education, especially in science and math, will be a key component of our national economic competitiveness. We need to ensure not only that the Nation produces the top scientists, mathematicians, and engineers, but that every student is prepared for the high-paying technical jobs of the 21st century. We need the engineers that will invent the next new things; we need the manufacturers to design it, and an educated workforce to produce it. We cannot, and would not want to, compete globally on wages alone. We need to operate at a much higher level in this country.

Given the current economic crisis, our economic competitiveness is more important than ever before. We have been trying to create jobs immediately, which we need to do, absolutely; but we also need to look down the road. If we do not take action to strengthen our Nation's economic competitiveness now, including improving science and math education, we could create jobs now, only to lose them in the future to foreign competition.

We need to make sure that our children are prepared, and a strong foundation in math and science education is an essential part of that preparation. One of the best ways we can prepare our students is by encouraging their interest in math and science. So I am asking our Nation's students and teachers, for all of our sake, to go out and have fun around Pi Day.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BROUN of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of House Resolution 224. Improving math and science curriculum in our schools is great and admirable, as well as an absolute necessity, for our undertaking as Nation, and it is one that is long overdue. While our students have continued to improve in these fields over the course of the past few years, America is still being outperformed by students in many other countries.

This is not a problem that can be simply fixed by this resolution. Nonetheless, every step must be taken with an aim to addressing this shortcoming in our school systems, and this resolution is undoubtedly a part of that. So I appreciate and thank Chairman GORDON and Ranking Member HALL for bringing this important piece of legislation to the floor in the hopes of drawing even more attention to an area of critical need in our Nation's education system.

For our children and grandchildren to be able to compete in a global world, we must refocus on math and science and inspire our children in these fields at an early age, and House Resolution 224 helps us to do just that. Therefore, I support this resolution and the goals and ideals that it means to attain, and I urge my colleagues to do the same.

I want to congratulate my dear friend from Tennessee (Mr. DAVIS) on his remarkable opening remarks, and I want to associate myself with those remarks.

Math and science are absolutely critical for us to be able to compete in a global economy, to be able to compete against nations all over this world. We are lacking in math and science; we are lacking in the subjects that are so critically important to this Nation for us to have our children be able to compete in that global economy.

As a physician, I believe in science, of course. But it is much more than that. We have seen a degradation of the quality of education of our children. No Child Left Behind has been an absolute disaster. In fact, I have talked to educator after educator for the last several years since I have been here in Congress or running for Congress, and I have not found one who likes No Child Left Behind, because teachers are having to teach to the test, having to teach to these national standards, which have led the teachers away from actually teaching kids how to think, how to calculate, how to utilize the scientific method to investigate new things. This resolution helps to place a focus upon that, to help us to bring forth science as being a critical issue for our Nation. And it is a critical issue.

I would like to see No Child Left Behind go away. I would like to see us stop teaching in schools things that are not as important and things that should be taught at home in intact families. So we need to rebuild families and encourage families to do that, instead of continuing this huge leap to a welfare state, a huge leap towards bigger government, a huge leap towards removing responsibility for the individuals and building a bigger government, a bigger socialistic society.

We need to empower teachers, we need to empower educators at all levels to teach math and science, English and history. We need to have English as the official language of America. We need to have the basic tenets of education, reading, writing, arithmetic, science, history, English, be absolutely the important focus of education in America today. This bill focuses on one part of that that we need to bring forth, and I gladly support this House resolution.

I thank my colleague from Tennessee for his remarks, and I do associate myself with those remarks. They were great. With that, I encourage every Member of this body to support this resolution.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Obviously, the gentleman from Georgia is a good friend and a neighbor. Each of us recognizes the need to train the young minds who will be the entrepreneurs, the inventors, those who will be bringing to the table new inventions that will help America's economy not only be competitive, but America's economy be the one that achieves and perhaps even brings this world out of what we see today as an economic recession.

Years ago, in the 1970s, we established legislation on the national level that brought to rural areas in my congressional district and the gentleman from Georgia's congressional district special education, where we literally focused on young minds that were maybe not as capable of reaching the higher achievements, or they may not ever reach college. But some of the instructions that we gave them, some of the special attention we gave through special education has actually presented some of those individuals the opportunity where some have attended college. But it has also given them an opportunity to be competitive in our economy and to be a part of our society. We must do the same thing for the best and brightest as well. It is my hope that, as we engage in K-12, that we continue to focus on science, math, and technology, and to challenge the bright young minds that we have not been challenging in the past.

We have been fortunate in this country through our higher educational system, which is, in my opinion and as scored by many throughout the world, the best higher educational system in the world. It is a merit-based system. In many of the countries throughout the world, their K-12 is also merit-based, and we have been getting some of those best and brightest from some of the K-12 educational systems to come to our colleges and retain them here in our economy, and they have been a part of America's economic growth.

We are losing those students today. We cannot depend on other countries' best and brightest. We have got to be sure that we train our best and brightest. And by challenging our teachers, our school systems, and youngsters to become involved in this fun day could maybe encourage them to realize they can be competitive and become the entrepreneurs and inventors of the future for America.

It is my privilege to manage the bill today, and certainly to manage it with my good friend from Georgia (Mr. BROUN).

I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. DAVIS) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the resolution, H. Res. 224.

The question was taken.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds being in the affirmative, the ayes have it.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays. The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

RECOGNIZING SUCCESS OF MARS EXPLORATION ROVERS

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the resolution (H. Res. 67) recognizing and commending the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), the Jet Propulsion Laboratory (JPL), and Cornell University for the success of the Mars Exploration Rovers, Spirit and Opportunity, on the 5th anniversary of the Rovers' successful landing.

The Clerk read the title of the resolution.

The text of the resolution is as follows:

H. RES. 67

Whereas the Mars Exploration Rovers Spirit and Opportunity successfully landed on Mars on January 3, 2004, and January 24, 2004, respectively, on missions to search for evidence indicating that Mars once held conditions hospitable to life;

Whereas NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory (JPL), managed by the California Institute of Technology (Caltech), designed and built the Rovers, Spirit and Opportunity;

Whereas Cornell University led the development of advanced scientific instruments carried by the 2 Rovers, and continues to play a leading role in the operation of the 2 Rovers and the processing and analysis of the images and other data sent back to Earth;

Whereas the Rovers relayed over a quarter million images taken from the surface of Mars;

Whereas studies conducted by the Rovers have indicated that early Mars was characterized by impacts, explosive volcanoes, and subsurface water;

Whereas each Rover has discovered geological evidence of ancient Martian environments where habitable conditions may have existed;

Whereas the Rovers have explored over 21 kilometers of Martian terrain, climbed Martian hills, descended deep into large craters, survived dust storms, and endured 3 cold, dark Martian winters; and

Whereas Spirit and Opportunity will have passed 5 years of successful operation on the surface of Mars on January 3, 2009, and January 24, 2009, respectively, far exceeding the original 90-Martian day mission requirement by a factor of 20, and are continuing their missions of surface exploration and scientific discovery: Now therefore be it

Resolved, That the House of Representatives—

(1) commends the engineers, scientists, and technicians of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory and Cornell University for their successful execution and continued operation of the Mars Exploration Rovers, Spirit and Opportunity; and

(2) recognizes the success and significant scientific contributions of NASA's Mars Exploration Rovers.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. DAVIS) and the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. BROUN) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Tennessee.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days to revise and extend their remarks and to include extraneous material on H. Res. 67, the resolution now under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

A little over 5 years ago, the NASA rovers named Spirit and Opportunity landed on the surface of Mars. These rovers originally had a 90-day mission to survey the surface of the red planet and send back scientific information.

By all measures, both rovers were incredibly successful during their original 90-day missions. Both rovers were able to maneuver around the surface of Mars, and they sent back scores of captivating images. The information they sent back has helped us to better understand the past and present geology of our planetary neighbor, and provided indication that water once flowed on the surface of Mars.

The little rovers proved to be so robust that their original 90-day mission was extended, and extended, and extended again. Ultimately, the mission was extended six times. That is a tribute to our scientific knowledge in this country. Both rovers continue to function and are roving the surface of Mars as I speak.

Without a doubt, these rovers have been wildly successful. Besides being impressive fetes of science and engineering, they have inspired countless children of our country with their amazing images of the red planet. This truly represents the best of what our national space program is about, and provides a reminder of why we should continue to support the work of NASA.

I want to thank the sponsor of this resolution, Mr. DREIER, for introducing House Resolution 67, and I encourage my colleagues to support its passage.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BROUN of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of House Resolution 67. This resolution recognizes and commends NASA, the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, and Cornell University for the success of the Mars exploration rovers, Spirit and Opportunity.

□ 1145

By almost any measure, the Mars exploration rovers have been an extraordinary success. These rovers, named Spirit and Opportunity, were originally intended to perform a 90-day mission on the hostile surface of Mars. Spirit was the first rover to land on the Mars surface on January 3, 2004. Spirit was joined on the Martian surface by Opportunity 3 weeks later on January 24, 2004. From the very early phases of the mission, these rovers have exceeded even the wildest expectations of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory team that designed and built them.

Originally intended to perform a 90-day mission to search for evidence of water and other conditions that could have supported life on the harsh surface of the red planet, they have now exceeded that goal by over 1,800 days. Along the way they rewrote our knowledge of the Martian environment by discovering and verifying geological evidence of ancient Martian environments where hospitable conditions may have existed.

While on Mars, these rovers have explored over 21 kilometers of Martian terrain, survived dust storms, mechanical difficulties, and endured three cold, dark Martian winters. The advanced scientific instruments deployed in conjunction with Cornell University have relayed over a quarter million images, including evidence of explosive volcanoes and subsurface water.

At a time when Americans could use some good news, it is fortunate that we can recognize and commend the men and women of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the Jet Propulsion Laboratory and Cornell University for their outstanding success in designing, developing, launching and operating the Mars Exploration Rovers.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this resolution.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield as much time as he may consume to the gentleman from California (Mr. SCHIFF).

Mr. SCHIFF. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, colleagues, 5 years ago in January, 2004, I had the privilege of being in the control room at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory when Spirit, the first of two identical Mars rovers, landed in Gusev Crater. It was an amazing experience to watch the dozens of engineers, controllers and scientists who had worked so hard and for so long on the rover project to see its initial success. I'm proud to have many of them as my constituents, and I'm honored to share JPL with my colleague, DAVID DREIER, and have joined him in this resolution honoring 5 years of surface operations by Spirit and its twin, Opportunity.

Spirit and Opportunity landed on Mars to begin what was planned as a 3-month mission to evaluate whether conditions would have at one time been suitable for life on the red planet. Under the leadership of Dr. Charles Elachi and Principal Investigator Steve Squyres of Cornell University, JPL employees worked around the clock to make the most of what was planned as a limited duration mission.

Equipped with cameras, spectrometers and grinders, America's robotic explorers have now been hard at work for more than 5 years and are still going strong. The rovers' incredible durability is a testament to the quality of their design, the care with which their operations are managed and a scientific bonanza for scientists here and around the world.

The rovers' discovery of evidence of past water on Mars was 2004's top scientific "Breakthrough of the Year" according to the journal Science. The rovers have also uncovered evidence of Mars' violent volcanic past and have transmitted more than 36 gigabytes of data back to Earth.

Despite a gimpy wheel, Spirit has spent most of the past year exploring an area dubbed Home Plate, which is rich in silica, another telltale sign of water. Opportunity has had shoulder troubles, but has covered a lot of ground in the last 5 years. The rover spent almost 2 years exploring Victoria Crater and has now begun a long drive to its next major destination, a much larger crater called Endeavour. At more than 14 miles in diameter, Endeavour is more than 20 times larger than Victoria.

People around the world have been captivated by the stunning photographs of the Martian surface and the planet's ruddy sky. In the first 2 months after Spirit and Opportunity landed on Mars, JPL's rover Web site registered almost 9 billion hits. Since then we have watched the seasons change on Mars and have marveled at the changing terrain as the rovers have moved about the surface.

NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory, managed by the California Institute of Technology, designed, built and controls the rovers. JPL has been the pioneer of our exploration of the solar system from the beginning of our space program and is one of the crown jewels of American science. Explorer I, America's first satellite, was a JPL project. At the time it was launched, the United States had fallen behind the Soviets in the space race, and several other attempts of getting an "American Sputnik" into orbit had ended in fiery explosions on the launch pad. Not only did Explorer I salvage our pride, but the tiny satellite discovered the Van Allen radiation belts that circle the Earth.

Since then, JPL probes have explored most of our solar system—from the Ranger series that paved the way for the Apollo moon landings, to Voyager's grand tour of the outer planets in the 1970s and 1980s, to last spring's landing on Mars by the Mars Phoenix—and have also surveyed the cosmos as well as our own planet.

In 2 years NASA will launch an even larger rover, the Mars Science Laboratory, which will build on the work being done today by Spirit and Opportunity. With a little luck, the rovers will still be working—still expanding our understanding of Mars and, more importantly, of ourselves.

I urge all my colleagues to support the resolution.

Mr. BROUN of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I would like to yield to my good friend whom I respect tremendously, Mr. DREIER from California, as much time as he may consume.

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, let me say how much I appreciate the hard work and the very thoughtful remarks by my very good friend. Mr. BROUN, Mr. DAVIS and Mr. SCHIFF have all outlined some of the very great challenges that have been faced with this amazing Spirit and Opportunity program.

I, like my friend, Mr. SCHIFF, was 5 years ago there when this program began. And I will never forget when Dr. Charles Elachi, the director of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory about whom Mr. SCHIFF was just speaking, leaned to me and said, "David, you know, I know this is scheduled to have a life span of 90 days, 3 months." He said, "I suspect that it might just go a little longer than that." And here we are today marking the fifth anniversary of Spirit and Opportunity, named by two young students who came together. They had a contest to name them. And these very bright and thoughtful kids came forward and said they wanted to name them Spirit and Opportunity. And they have gone through an amazing 5 years, as Mr. BROUN said so well, wind storms and all kinds of cold and great adversity, and yet they are still chugging along providing very important information back to us. Mr. SCHIFF talked about the days ahead, and now Opportunity is headed to that new massive crater Endeavour. And so we are going to continue to get more and more interesting information. These three gentlemen, Mr. Speaker, have just talked about what Spirit and Opportunity have gone through.

I would like to take a moment to look at the context around which this whole issue is being considered, and that is the devastating economic times that we are facing right here in the United States of America. Obviously, first and foremost on our minds is getting our economy back on track, ensuring that people who are suffering greatly with foreclosures and job losses, and even worse in some instances, are able to have those needs addressed. And many of us have been working to try and put into place a strong, bold, dynamic and robust economic growth program that, interestingly enough, is modeled after the program that was put into place by the man who called for us to put a man on the Moon by the end of the decade in the 1960s. That, of course, was John F. Kennedy. And we are continuing to try and work for those kinds of growth policies.

Now the reason I say that, Mr. Speaker, is that there are so many who would argue that, as we look at sort of the amorphous space program out there, why in the world are we investing resources on that when we have so many pressing challenges right here at home? And there are a couple of points that I think need to be made. First, when we were celebrating the landing of another great JPL program, the Phoenix, one of the great scientists got up and talked about the fact that throughout world history, every single developed nation has, in fact, regardless of what challenges they faced, always looked at the imponderable. They have always made risk to pursue the unknown. And I'm reminded, of course, that it was the great Queen Isabella who sold her jewels so that Christopher Columbus might have the opportunity to discover America. And so risk-taking is something even during adverse times we need to continue to pursue. And we can't ignore that, because we are the United States of America, the greatest nation the world has ever known. And that is why this is very important.

Second, we need to also realize, Mr. Speaker, that there are very important gains that we as a society and as a world are able to glean from this very important work, whether it is in medical imaging, and I know Dr. BROUN understands that, whether it is in dealing with environmental protection, whether it is dealing with cellular technology or global positioning systems, there are a wide range of things that have emanated from programs like Spirit and Opportunity that have dramatically improved the standard of living and quality of life of people here in the United States and around the world.

And so it is in that context that I join in celebrating the work of our friends in the Jet Propulsion Laboratory and CalTech and all involved in this very important NASA research and effort that is going on. I thank both my friends for their hard work in their committee and for coming forward and allowing Mr. SCHIFF and me to consider this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to rise in support of this resolution which I authored with my California colleague, Mr. SCHIFF, to recognize the five-year anniversary of the landing of the Mars Exploration Rovers, Spirit and Opportunity. I also commend the individuals that contributed to the success of the missions. In particular, the great minds at the La Canada Flintridge-based Jet Propulsion Laboratory (JPL), who designed and built the rovers, and whom I have the distinct honor to represent. JPL is managed by the California Institute of Technology (Caltech), and very ably led by JPL's outstanding director, Dr. Charles Elachi.

Mr. Speaker, as you may recall, during the summer of 2003, NASA launched its Mars Exploration Rovers from Cape Canaveral Air Force Station in Florida. The rovers were an exciting addition to NASA's Mars Exploration Program, and their mission was to explore the surface of Mars for three months in search of clues to give scientists a peek into the planet's past. Specifically, the rovers were to determine whether Mars had ever contained environments with quantities of water sufficient to support life.

After traveling more than a quarter million miles, Spirit and Opportunity successfully landed on Mars's surface on January 3, 2004 and January 24, 2004, respectively. Within their primary three-month mission time frame, the rovers successfully uncovered geological evidence indicating that a body of water once flowed through certain regions, and that early Mars was characterized by impacts from meteors, explosive volcanoes and subsurface water.

In an amazing display of endurance, Spirit and Opportunity managed to maintain their operational status far beyond the three months that were expected, and continue to operate to this day, five years later. The rovers explored more than 21 kilometers of Mars's terrain, climbed hills, descended deep into large craters, survived dust storms and endured three brutal Martian winters. Their amazing missions continue to yield valuable information about the history of Mars and are symbolic of America's pioneering spirit.

Mr. Speaker, while oftentimes the parts that are developed for our space missions are sent off never to be seen again, it is important to realize that the technology stays here at home where it continues to make important contributions to our lives. For example, NASA-sponsored work at facilities like JPL has resulted in the development of critical technologies that have been commercially applied in fields as far ranging as medical imaging, transportation, cellular telecommunications, supercomputing and environmental protection. In addition, these projects inspire our youth to pursue education in the STEM fields—science, technology, engineering and mathematics. And they provide well-paid, highly technical jobs for innovators and entrepreneurs throughout our country. In fact, the success of the Mars rovers is due to the contributions of many, including workers from all across the country—from Composite Optics in San Diego, California to BAE Systems in Manassas, Virginia.

The footprints of NASA's many successes have been made as far away as our moon, the planet Mars and beyond. But its most important impact is here at home. The work being done at JPL and other facilities is spurring the innovations that create jobs and make our lives better. And it is inspiring new generations of innovators who will pursue the careers that will continue to keep the United States at the forefront of technological advancement.

Mr. Speaker, I commend the men and women whose tireless work has made the Mars rovers' expeditions such a tremendous success, and I urge my colleagues to vote in support of this resolution.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. I yield myself as much time as I may consume.

As heard earlier on this floor, we talked about other nations throughout the world who seem to be achieving higher academic standards than we are here in this country in the classroom. But as we start observing many of these countries, none of those are putting in play and putting into reality the science that we are doing in this country.

The rovers, Spirit and Opportunity, that landed on Mars were an American project, not one of the other nations that we talked about. So as we discuss from time to time areas where we must recognize we may have failures, but our educational system is also providing, and has provided, bright young minds with the challenges that has brought forward the research, the development, the space exploration that is going on today in this country.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BROUN of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I thank my colleague from Tennessee and my colleague from California. We are, as Republicans and Democrats, coming and talking about something that is extremely important, and that is science exploration of Mars and what Spirit and Opportunity have done there. We talked on the previous bill about math and science and how important it is that we go forward with these types of projects. And it absolutely is critical for the future of our Nation that we do so.

The other things that are critical for our Nation that we need to explore is how to stimulate our economy. And the best way to stimulate our economy is by stimulating small business. Small business is hurting today. It is hurting terribly. The American middle class and the workers of America are hurting terribly.

We have proposals brought forth to this floor in bill after bill that markedly increase the size of the Federal Government. This is what I call the steamroll of socialism being shoved down the throats of the American people.

We have to find solutions to this economic problem we have in America. And building a bigger government, building a more socialistic government, is not going to create jobs. It is not going to bring about the things that we need to get us out of this economic downturn.

I hope that as we work together on this bill, and as we did with the previous bill, that we can work together, Democrats and Republicans alike, can come and find some commonsense economic solutions for America, commonsense solutions that will stimulate the real economic engine of America, and that is small business.

Small businesses create most of the jobs in America today. We have proposals that are going to take away jobs from small business because it is going to put a heavier regulatory burden on that small business. It is going to put a heavier tax burden on small businesses. We have seen proposals in the budget that will increase taxes on what is described as the wealthiest in America.

But most of those tax increases will affect small businesses, and it is going to rob jobs, rob jobs that are critical for the economic well-being of America.

Small business is the economic engine that pulls along the train of economic prosperity in America, and we need to stoke the fires of that train so it has the ability to create jobs, to bring us out of this economic downturn.

What I see over and over again are policies that are being suggested that are going to rob small business of those critical assets that they need. They are going to rob the American people of the jobs that we need.

Government does not make one single nickel, not one single penny. All it does is it takes away from the private sector. We have policies that are taking away from the private sector and increasing a bigger and bigger government to tell us how to live our lives. It is robbing the private sector of necessary funds that are absolutely critical to get us out of this economic downturn.

We cannot continue down this road toward a socialistic society with socialized medicine that is going to destroy the quality of health care. It is going to be extremely costly. It has been said very often around here that if you think health care is expensive today, wait until it is free. It is going to destroy the innovation that is absolutely critical.

So as we commend NASA, the Jet Propulsion Laboratory and Cornell University on this outstanding scientific accomplishment that they brought forward with Spirit and Opportunity, we need to look beyond that and we need to look in a bipartisan way. We have got to stop what I think is an idiocy of destroying small business and creating a bigger socialistic government.

We have seen bill after bill that spend too much, tax too much, borrow too much. Our children and grandchildren are going to live at a standard that is much less than we have today if we don't just stop this, and I am struggling for a word here, but one where we are bringing forth policies that are absolutely adverse to what this country was founded upon. We stand at a crossroads, and it is a crossroads that will lead one direction towards socialism and total government control, and another direction which leads toward freedom, entrepreneurship, innovation and economic security.

So I call upon my colleagues on the Democratic side, let's work together. Let's work together to find policies that make sense. Let's work together to find commonsense market-based solutions that will stimulate small business, that won't hurt our children and grandchildren like bill after bill that is being proposed and a budget that is being proposed. We have to stop this direction, this steamroll of socialism that is being driven by NANCY PELOSI and HARRY REID. It is a steamroller of socialism that is being shoved down the throats of the American people, and it is going to strangle the American economy. It is going to kill the American public economically.

So as we applaud these scientific endeavors, I call upon my Democratic colleagues to work with us in a bipartisan way so we can find economic solutions that are so drastically needed, so that we can find the solutions that America needs.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I have observed over the last 8 years probably the largest increase in spending in the history of this country except perhaps the 8 years of Lyndon Johnson. And all that spending was directed toward some of the same exact spending that is occurring today under this new administration and under this new majority in Congress.

Yet I hear described under the old administration good government, with the exact same expenditures, becoming socialism. I suggest that we all become bipartisan and start reading from the same dictionary.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. DAVIS) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the resolution, H. Res. 67.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (during the vote). There are 2 minutes remaining in this vote.

□ 1252

So (two-thirds being in the affirmative) the rules were suspended and the concurrent resolution was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

YEAR OF THE MILITARY FAMILY

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 64) urging the President to designate 2009 as the "Year of the Military Family".

The Clerk read the title of the concurrent resolution.

The text of the concurrent resolution is as follows:

H. CON. RES. 64

Whereas there are more than 1.8 million family members of regular component members of the Armed Forces and an additional 1.1 million family members of reserve component members;

Whereas slightly more than half of all members of the regular and reserve components are married, and just over 40 percent of military spouses are 30 years or younger and 60 percent of military spouses are under 36 years of age;

Whereas there are nearly 1.2 million children between the ages of birth and 23 years who are dependents of regular component members, and there are over 713,000 children between such ages who are dependents of reserve component members;

Whereas the largest group of minor children of regular component members consist of children between the ages of birth and 5 years, while the largest group of minor children of reserve component members consist of children between the ages of 6 and 14 years;

Whereas the needs, resources, and challenges confronting a military family, particularly when a member of the family has been deployed, vastly differ between younger age children and children who are older;

Whereas the United States recognizes that military families are also serving their country, and the United States must ensure that all the needs of military dependent children are being met, for children of members of both the regular and reserve components;

Whereas military families often face unique challenges and difficulties that are inherent to military life, including long separations from loved ones, the repetitive demands of frequent deployments, and frequent uprooting of community ties resulting from moves to bases across the country and overseas;

Whereas thousands of military family members have taken on volunteer responsibilities to assist units and members of the Armed Forces who have been deployed by supporting family readiness groups, helping military spouses meet the demands of a single parent during a deployment, or providing a shoulder to cry on or the comfort of understanding;

Whereas military families provide members of the Armed Forces with the strength and emotional support that is needed from the home front for members preparing to deploy, who are deployed, or who are returning from deployment;

Whereas some military families have given the ultimate sacrifice in the loss of a principal family member in defense of the United States; and

Whereas 2009 would be an appropriate year to designate as the "Year of the Military Family": Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That Congress—

(1) expresses its deepest appreciation to the families of members of the Armed Forces who serve, or have served, in defense of the United States;

(2) recognizes the contributions that military families make, and encourages the people of the United States to share their appreciation for the sacrifices military families give on behalf of the United States; and

(3) urges the President—

(A) to designate a "Year of the Military Family"; and

(B) to encourage the people of the United States and the Department of Defense to observe the "Year of Military Family" with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON) and the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. LAMBORN) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Missouri.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I might consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of House Concurrent Resolution 64, which I introduced, along with my ranking member, JOHN MCHUGH, and the majority of my colleagues on the Armed Services Committee.

House Concurrent Resolution 64 calls for the President to designate 2009 as the "Year of the Military Family."

For over 7 years, our Nation has been in sustained conflict. Our servicemembers are facing multiple deployments, but they are not the only ones who are shouldering the burden of the war. Nearly 2 million of our military families have also shared in that burden.

While I am proud of Americans across this great Nation who have volunteered or contributed funds and supplies to support our deployed and injured troops, those who have been on the forefront of those efforts are the military families. Over the last several years, military families have faced months of separation, some as long as 18 to 20 months. With over 1 million children between the ages of birth and 23 years of age who have parents in uniform, there have been many missed birthdays, graduations, holidays, and a child's first words and other major life accomplishments that are all too common as troops continue to experience back-to-back deployments.

Military families endure such hardship and sacrifices so their servicemember can proudly continue to serve the Nation. Military families often provide moral support, as well as comfort, to each other, especially during these difficult times. However, many families, especially those in the Reserves and Guard, do not have that luxury. Often these families must face these hardships alone, far from support programs and far from facilities that are located on military bases.

The President and Mrs. Obama have stated that military families will be a top priority for this administration. I applaud the President and Mrs. Obama for their commitment to their military families.

Mr. Speaker, I urge the President to continue this commitment and recognize the sacrifices of military family members who have given support to their servicemember and this nation, and declare this to be the "Year of the Military Family."

I urge my colleagues to join me in support of this important resolution.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LAMBORN. Mr. Speaker, I rise also in support of House Concurrent Resolution 64, which urges the President to designate 2009 as the "Year of the Military Family," and I thank the chairman of the Armed Services Committee, Representative SKELTON, for offering it.

Mr. Speaker, I am honored to pay tribute today to the force behind the force—the military family. It has long been known that the military services recruit individuals but retain families. This has never been more true nor more critical than it is today. The support our troops receive from their loving families—mothers, fathers, sisters, brothers, spouses and children—is intangible, and it is nothing less than a powerful force multiplier.

Dedicating a year to honor the service and sacrifice of our military families is the least we can do to say thank you and to call attention to this sometimes forgotten resource. Today, Mr. Speaker, millions of Americans have one or more family members serving in the Armed Forces. These incredible families attempt to lead normal lives while their loved ones stand in harm's way, fulfilling our Nation's oath to serve and protect.

But they do not just wait. They also serve. Military spouses spend countless hours volunteering in family readiness programs and wounded warrior networks, all while managing to be two parents at once. Military children, numbering almost 2 million in our country, attempt to be like other children while trying their hardest not to let sadness and worry overcome them.

Mr. Speaker, the strength of the military family is astonishing. As we celebrate military families, let us not forget the sacrifice of parents. Military parents give their sons and daughters to the Nation and pray ceaselessly for their safe return. They look forward to every letter and every phone call, while fearing the ringing of the phone and the doorbell at the same time.

Military children, Mr. Speaker, are a very different breed of young adult. They do not always have hometowns, but they do have a heightened sense of family, both in the traditional sense and in the special characteristics of the military community. Their home is where the military chooses to send them, and their family becomes all who surround them.

They do not hesitate to support their family when their father or mother walks out the door for 6 months, 8 months, or even more often now, a year. In most cases they are Mom or Dad's biggest fans. Many times the oldest child takes over as second in charge while serving as a rock for the youngest.

Even at a young age, military children know what the words "ultimate sacrifice" means, and these words are in the back of their minds every day that goes by. Military families have an uncanny resilience. They are some of the strongest citizens in this country, and I am privileged to recognize them not only today, but every day.

I have many such dedicated families in my strongly military district, the Fifth District of Colorado.

□ 1300

I urge my colleagues to support this very important resolution because without the support of our military families, our Armed Forces would not be the incredible power that they are today.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SKELTON. I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California (Mr. BECERRA).

Mr. BECERRA. I thank the chairman for yielding and, more importantly, I thank him for this resolution, which tries to not only recognize the men and women who are in uniform, but certainly the men and women and children and parents of our soldiers in uniform who day to day have to go through the same experiences that our troops abroad and in our military stations throughout must go through as well.

There are some 3 million Americans today who represent the family members of our brave soldiers. I am pleased to say that I count myself among those family members. And I believe it is something that not only should be done in 2009 to urge the President to designate this year as the Year of the Military Family but, quite honestly, this is something we should do every year.

I think it is of the utmost importance. And we applaud the First Lady of the United States, Michelle Obama, for the role that she has decided to play in elevating the stature of our families who are here or throughout the world and have a family member serving today on behalf of this country.

It is something that I think sometimes we take for granted. But this is an occasion today where, on the floor of the most democratic body in the history of this world, we can say to all those who serve in uniform, not just from our country, but throughout, that we do think about you, we do respect what you do and, more importantly, we realize that you have family that day to day must go through the same experiences you do.

So, Mr. Chairman, I think it is something we should do, as I said, all the time. I think every Member in this body would agree that we have to think about our servicemembers and their families every day. And it doesn't hurt to periodically do it in a more official way by actually having a resolution which urges the President to declare this year the Year of the Military Family.

With that, I thank you very much for not just your service, but your insight and your wisdom in trying to always make sure that we elevate our men and women in uniform and their families to the highest levels we can.

Mr. LAMBORN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to a new member of the Armed Services Committee, but she's already starting to make a strong contribution, the gentlelady from Oklahoma (Ms. FALLIN).

Ms. FALLIN. I am here today to support this resolution also, and to support the naming of 2009 as the Year of the Military Family. For years now, we have been sending our sons and our daughters overseas to fight terror and also fight for our freedom. Our military men and women have sacrificed, missing birthdays, anniversaries, holidays, and endured many hardships, and we are honored on this floor in this Chamber to frequently pay tribute to those men and women.

Too often, however, we forget the families, the loved ones behind our military men and women—our mothers, our fathers, our children, our siblings, husbands and wives of our troops. Their sacrifice is also worthy of our greatest respect. These are the unsung heroes of the War on Terror, the loved ones who watch our troops go into battle, and are ready to greet them when they arrive back home.

We now have 1.8 million family members of active duty military personnel, and just over 1 million family members of reservists. Of every two soldiers who are deployed, one leaves behind a wife or a husband who will wait for months, and sometimes even years, before they see their spouse again.

Nearly 2 million children have fathers or mothers who are in the military, and these children, undoubtedly, feel great pride in having a mother or father serve their country, but they also feel a great burden of growing up with one parent who often is far from home and missing those important times.

Without the support and sacrifice of these brave men, women, and their children, our Armed Services could not function, so much so that it is just safe to say thank you to our military families for their service and for protecting our country and for making the tremendous sacrifices with their families.

So, Mr. Speaker, for all these reasons, I would like to join my colleagues in also congratulating the 2009 members of the military families, and to say that this is your year. 2009 is the Year of the Military Family. So let us join in and respect those families and honor them today in this Chamber.

Mr. SKELTON. I yield such time as he may consume to a cosponsor of this legislation, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. MORAN.)

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. I am honored to have a moment to speak on this resolution, and deeply grateful to Chairman SKELTON for introducing it and advancing it.

You know, they say that an army travels on its stomach. In other words, the physical well-being of an army has to be taken into consideration. They have to be well fed, they have to be cared for.

The way you win wars though, comes from the heart and mind of our soldiers, sailors, and airmen. And the way that you motivate them is to assure them that this country is providing for their families. That is what they care about more than anything else.

When they go to war, when they choose to serve this country in the Armed Services, their principal motivation, really, is their family. They are doing this to provide security to their children, to their parents, to their loved ones. And that is what this resolution is all about, recognizing the indispensable role that military families play.

We have lost more than 2,000 parents of young children in Iraq. But hundreds of thousands have known that when they say goodbye to their daddy or mommy, they may not see them again. And they have to live with that reality.

They comfort each other, families get to know each other, provide a support network. But it's absolutely essential that we, as a Nation, understand that we are putting these families on the front line. That they are prepared to pay the ultimate sacrifice, that they are fully prepared to do whatever it takes to ensure that we have soldiers, sailors, airmen and women who will go to war, will risk their lives, knowing that they have the support of their families at home.

Now, we have tried to put more money into the veterans' bill to improve health care, particularly the type of health care that we have found a particular compelling need for—permanent brain injury, post-traumatic stress disorder, mental illnesses—that have increased dramatically in the last few years, particularly with IEDs and the violence that they cause in Iraq and Afghanistan. But when they come home, if we don't adequately treat them, the price is paid by the family.

It's the family that has to deal with sometimes uncontrollable violent urges, where the veteran of combat finds it difficult to control themselves, to make that transition to the society in which they need to take on the role of husband, wife, or parent.

All of these challenges are even greater than they have ever been before. And that is why this Congress, this Nation, needs to take every opportunity to focus on the needs of these families who show real patriotism and real loyalty to the principles and ideals and values of this Nation, and are willing to sacrifice whatever it takes to uphold those principles, ideals, and values, even the risk of loss of a loved one.

So, with that, Mr. Chairman, again, I thank you for introducing, for promoting this resolution and, most importantly, I thank you for being conscious of what this resolution is all about every single day throughout the year in the legislation that the Armed Services Committee and your colleagues in the Congress pass. It has to be a priority.

So, I know this will pass unanimously, and I appreciate the fact that it's offered on the floor today.

Mr. LAMBORN. At this point, I yield 4 minutes to someone who's made a strong contribution to the military—until January, he served for many years on the Armed Services Committee—the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. GINGREY).

Mr. GINGREY of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding. I rise today in support of H. Con. Res. 64, urging the President to designate 2009 as the Year of the Military Family. It's going to be difficult to follow the gentleman from Virginia, Mr. MORAN, what he said out of compassion and love for the military families, but I will humbly try to do so.

Certainly, I would like to say a special thanks to Chairman SKELTON, Ranking Member JOHN MCHUGH, as well as to the members and the staff of the House Armed Services Committee, for the tireless effort in support of our soldiers, sailors, airmen, and marines who are bravely defending us at home and abroad.

Mr. Speaker, today we rightfully take time to recognize the families of those brave men and women who have dedicated their lives to the service of our Nation. I stand here and I am thinking about so many families—moms and dads, brothers and sisters—of fallen soldiers in my State of Georgia, and of my district, the 11th Congressional in northwest Georgia. I am not trying to mention all of them, but they are definitely in my mind and in my heart.

For it is not just the members of the military who serve our country, but also their family members, who sacrifice so much in support of these heroes who, day in and day out, protect our freedom.

Mr. Speaker, the families of those who serve our country on the front lines deserve the admiration and appreciation of each and every citizen. These family members often watch their loved ones travel to faraway lands in support of a cause and an ideal so much greater than any one individual.

Indeed, the democracy on display here today with our presence in this Chamber is testament to the courage and valor of our Armed Forces. The support given to our servicemen and women by their loved ones is irreplaceable, as it's a foundation for the bravery inherent in those who labor steadfastly in the defense of liberty.

Any of us who have watched videos and movies about the Civil War and read some of those letters to home that the infantrymen would write, maybe right before a battle and they give their lives to their country, it is indeed moving.

So, let us now honor and say a gracious thank you to each and every military family, every member of those families, for the encouragement, love, and kindness they exhibit in supporting their precious loved ones as they serve a Nation that will forever be free because of their sacrifice. It is to the family members that we now say thank you.

Mr. Speaker, we are proud of all of our servicemen and women and are eternally grateful for their efforts in the Global War on Terror. Let us not forget the ones who have provided the closest circle of support for them wherever they may serve around the globe. I urge all my colleagues, of course, to support this.

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California (Mr. BERMAN).

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time to join the others in making a particular statement on behalf of the sacrifice of military families.

We pay great attention, and should, to the sacrifices of our young servicemen and servicewomen who risk their lives in service of their country. We sometimes don't pay as much attention to people who make a tremendous sacrifice by virtue of seeing their loved ones, their spouses, their parents, their children in many cases, going off to military service, particularly in the context of recent times, dealing with the repeated deployments, the disruptions, the movement, the constant concern about the welfare of the loved one. And it is quite appropriate and long overdue that we actually designate this year, 2009, as the year of the military families. I strongly support this resolution.

Mr. LAMBORN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman for offering this resolution.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SKELTON. Most of us Members of Congress have had the opportunity to witness military units as they are ready to deploy. We have also seen military units as they have returned, or individual members of our service returning, and watch their families greet them with happiness and with tears. It is difficult to put ourselves in their places, but the best we can do is to show our appreciation, and that our thoughts and our prayers are with them as well as their loved ones who are serving. Mr. Speaker, I urge all of my colleagues to support this resolution.

Mrs. DAVIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of urging the President to designate 2009 as the "Year of the Military Family."

Our military's ability to perform its mission abroad is directly related to the strength of our families at home.

Without families willing to sign up for military life alongside their soldier, sailor, airman or marine, we would not have the tremendous all-volunteer force we have today.

Our military has been at war for nearly eight years against persistent and determined enemies thousands of miles away. And in many ways, so have our military families.

With loved ones deployed to theatres of combat, our families have lived with the enormous uncertainty brought by every ring of the phone and every knock on the door.

For far too many, that unexpected phone call or visitor announced the tragic loss of a spouse or parent.

For thousands more, injuries sustained in battle require a spouse or child to take on the responsibility of caretaker.

I am continually amazed at their resilience and ability to continue with their lives under such difficult circumstances.

Every family signed up knowing the requirements of duty.

However, regular assignments to theatres of war will challenge even the strongest families.

Like many of my colleagues, I hear the frustration and sense the pain that frequent, dangerous and unpredictable deployments are having on military communities.

We know that these deployments are often measured not by weeks or months, but by anniversaries, birthdays and important life moments.

Describing the length of her husband's deployment, one of my constituents told me how her husband "missed his older son's graduation from college, and his youngest son's graduation from High School." Her frustration was clear.

As Chairman SKELTON mentioned earlier, over a million children have not had a mom or dad or both home for life's important events.

We have tried to take steps to lessen the strain on our families, but high operational tempo and policies like stop-loss still have a significant impact.

As a Navy wife recently told me, "We are resigned to the necessity of deployment."

Mr. Speaker, our first commander in chief, President Washington, said, "The willingness with which our young people are likely to serve in any war, no matter how justified, shall be directly proportional to how they perceive veterans of early wars were treated and appreciated by our nation."

Today, President Washington's statement should probably read, "The willingness with which our 'families are likely to serve in any war, no matter how justified, shall be directly proportional to how they perceive families of early wars were treated and appreciated by our nation.'"

That is why the Military Personnel Subcommittee will hold a hearing later this year focusing on military families and topics that are unique to military life.

... But it will take more than a series of hearings to address the very real concerns felt by families and men and women in uniform.

Just as we must ensure that service members have the equipment they need in the field, so too must we guarantee that families have the support they need at home.

I urge President Obama to honor the commitment of those who "serve" behind our men and women in uniform and designate 2009 the Year of the Military Family.

I hope all my colleagues will support this resolution.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H. Con. Res. 64, "Urging the President to designate 2009 as the 'Year of the Military Family'." I want to thank my colleague Congressman IKE SKELTON of Missouri for introducing this resolution.

No group of Americans has stood stronger and braver for our nation than those who have served in the Armed Forces. From the bitter cold winter at Valley Forge to the boiling hot Iraqi terrain, our soldiers have courageously answered when called upon, gone where ordered, and defended our nation with honor. Their noble service reminds us of our mission as a nation—to build a future worthy of their courage and your sacrifice. We celebrate, honor and remember these courageous and faithful men and women.

While the nation's attention has been wholly focused on the economic crisis, Americans continue to die in wars across the globe, from Iraq to Afghanistan and beyond. The war in Iraq no longer makes headlines, but for military families it remains a daily reality, and I urge my colleagues to recognize the challenges that the families of these brave soldiers face and support this resolution in their honor.

When American troops are the ones fighting abroad, it is our military families who must also suffer. They wait every day and night hoping to hear from their loved ones, praying that they are not put in harm's way, that they may come home soon. Too many families have not been so lucky, finding out the news of a loved one's death is not only emotionally traumatizing it can have long term effects for the family that may never be repaired.

We must all stand as champions for our men and women fighting abroad. These soldiers who bravely reported for duty, they are our sons and our daughters, they are our fathers and mothers, they are our husbands and wives, they are our fellow Americans.

There are over 26,550,000 veterans in the United States. In the 18th Congressional district of Texas alone there are more than 38,000 veterans and they make up almost ten percent of this district's civilian population over the age of 18.

We remember and honor the sacrifices of our forces and their families. And we renew our national promise to fulfill our sacred obligations to those who have worn this nation's uniform. Our veterans and their families ask for nothing more. Let us fight the good fight.

Mr. HEINRICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in full support of making 2009 the Year of the Military Family.

It is an honor to support this measure and to express my heartfelt appreciation, and that of our entire congressional district, for the families of our men and women who serve in the military.

For so many New Mexican families, military service has been in our blood for generations.

Our state has often had the highest rate of military volunteerism in the country and the 1st congressional district is home to countless veterans, not to mention the large number of proud service members stationed at Kirtland Air Force Base.

Yet we know all too well that with each individual who generously gives their service to their country through our military, there is a significant impact on those closest to them.

Each time a service member leaves home, they leave behind caring husbands and wives, loving sons and daughters, worried parents and whole communities that remain concerned for their safety.

There is no question that these affected families are also serving our country—by courageously enduring long separations from loved ones and the demands of deployments abroad.

So today, I proudly honor the commitment, sacrifice, courage and steadfast support that have been provided by our country's military families, allowing our service members to serve and I ask my colleagues to support this resolution.

Mr. SKELTON. I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution, H. Con. Res. 64.

The question was taken.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds being in the affirmative, the yeas have it.

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

CALLING FOR RETURN OF SEAN GOLDMAN

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the resolution (H. Res. 125) calling on the central authority of Brazil to immediately discharge all its duties under the Hague Convention by facilitating and supporting Federal judicial proceedings as a matter of extreme urgency to obtain the return of Sean Goldman to his father, David Goldman, for immediate return to the United States, as amended.

The Clerk read the title of the resolution.

The text of the resolution is as follows:

H. RES. 125

Whereas David Goldman has been trying unsuccessfully since June 17, 2004, to secure the return of his son Sean to the United States where Sean maintained his habitual residence until his mother, Bruna Bianchi Ribeiro Goldman, removed Sean to Brazil;

Whereas on August 26, 2004, the Superior Court of New Jersey awarded custody to Mr. Goldman, ordered Mrs. Goldman and her parents to immediately return Sean to the United States, and indicated to Mrs. Goldman and her parents that their continued behavior constituted parental kidnapping under United States law;

Whereas on September 3, 2004, Mr. Goldman filed an application for the immediate return of Sean to the United States under the 1980 Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction (the "Hague Convention") to which both the United States and Brazil are party and which entered into force between Brazil and the United States on December 1, 2003;

Whereas on August 22, 2008, Mrs. Goldman passed away in Brazil leaving Sean without a mother and separated from his biological father in the United States;

Whereas Mr. João Paulo Lins e Silva, whom Mrs. Goldman married in Brazil, has petitioned the Brazilian courts for custody rights over Sean Goldman and to replace Mr. Goldman's name with his own name on a new birth certificate to be issued to Sean, despite the fact that Mr. Goldman, not Mr. Lins e Silva, is Sean's biological father;

Whereas furthermore, the United States and Brazil have expressed their desire, through the Hague Convention, "to protect children internationally from the harmful effects of their wrongful removal or retention and to establish procedures to ensure their prompt return to the State of their habitual residence";

Whereas according to the Department of State, there are 51 cases involving 65 children who were habitual residents of the United States and who were removed to Brazil by a parent and have not been returned to the United States as required under the Hague Convention;

Whereas according to the Department of State's April 2008 Report on Compliance with the Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction, "parental child abduction jeopardizes the child and has substantial long-term consequences for both the child and the left-behind parent";

Whereas the Department of State's Office of Children's Issues, while not always notified of international child abductions, is currently handling approximately 1,900 open cases of parental abduction to other countries involving more than 2,800 children abducted from the United States;

Whereas in fiscal year 2007, the United States Central Authority responded to cases involving 821 children abducted from the United States to countries with which the United States partners under the Hague Convention, but during that same time period only 217 children were returned from Hague Convention partner countries to the United States;

Whereas according to the Department of State, Honduras has not acted in compliance with the terms it agreed to as a party to the Hague Convention, and Brazil, Bulgaria, Chile, Ecuador, Germany, Greece, Mexico, Poland, and Venezuela have demonstrated patterns of noncompliance based on their Central Authority performance, judicial performance, or law enforcement performance of the obligations of the Hague Convention;

Whereas according to the Department of State, in fiscal year 2008, the United States Central Authority counted 306 cases of parental abductions involving 455 children taken from the United States to other countries that are not partners with the United States under the Hague Convention, currently including 101 children in Japan, 67 children in India, and 37 children in Russia;

Whereas three-year-old Melissa Braden is among the children who have been wrongfully abducted to Japan, a United States ally which does not recognize intra-familial child abduction as a crime, and though its family laws do not discriminate by nationality, Japanese courts give no recognition to the parental rights of the non-Japanese parent, fail to enforce United States court orders relating to child custody or visitation, and place no effective obligation on the Japanese parent to allow parental visits for their child;

Whereas Melissa was taken from Los Angeles, California to Japan on March 16, 2006, when she was 11-months-old, despite a California court's prior order forbidding Melissa's removal to Japan and granting joint custody to her father Patrick Braden;

Whereas despite his extensive efforts, Mr. Braden and his daughter have not seen each other since her abduction;

Whereas according to the Department of State, abducted children are at risk of serious emotional and psychological problems and have been found to experience anxiety, eating problems, nightmares, mood swings, sleep disturbances, aggressive behavior, resentment, guilt and fearfulness, and as adults may struggle with identity issues, their own personal relationships and parenting; and

Whereas left-behind parents may encounter substantial psychological, emotional, and financial problems and many may not have the financial resources to pursue civil or criminal remedies for the return of their children in foreign courts or political systems: Now, therefore, be it:

Resolved, That—

(1) the House of Representatives—

(A) calls on Brazil to, in accordance with its obligations under the Hague Convention and with extreme urgency, bring about the return of Sean Goldman to his father, David Goldman, in the United States;

(B) urges all countries determined by the Department of State to have issues of non-compliance with the Hague Convention to fulfill their obligation under international law to take all appropriate measures to secure within their respective territories the implementation of the Hague Convention and to use the most expeditious procedures available; and

(C) calls on all other nations to join the Hague Convention and to establish procedures to promptly and equitably address the tragedy of child abductions, given the increase of transnational marriages and births, the number of international child abduction cases and the serious consequences to children of not expeditiously resolving these cases; and

(2) it is the sense of the House of Representatives that the United States should—

(A) review its diplomatic procedures and the operations available to United States citizens through its central authority under the Hague Convention to ensure that effective assistance is provided to Mr. Goldman and other United States citizens in obtaining the expeditious return of their children from Brazil and other countries that have entered into the reciprocal obligations with the United States under the Hague Convention;

(B) take other appropriate measures to ensure that Hague Convention partners return abducted children to the United States in compliance with the Hague Convention's provisions;

(C) diplomatically urge other nations to become parties to the Hague Convention and establish systems to effectively discharge their reciprocal responsibilities under the Convention; and

(D) continue to work aggressively for the return of children abducted from the United States to other nations and for visitation rights for their left-behind parents when return is not yet achieved.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from California (Mr. BERMAN) and the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on the resolution under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. BERMAN. I rise in support of the resolution, and yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the 1980 Hague Convention on the civil aspects of international child abduction is the principal international framework for tackling an increasingly difficult problem. The resolution before us urges all countries that the State Department determines are noncompliant with the Hague Convention to fulfill their obligations and faithfully implement the treaty. It also calls on other nations who have not yet joined the Hague Convention to do so.

The resolution highlights two emblematic cases and specifically calls for their prompt resolution. One is in a country that is a party to the Hague Convention, Brazil; the other in a country that is not, Japan. The facts of each case are equally heartbreaking.

David Goldman has been trying, since 2004, to get his son, Sean, back to the United States from Brazil. When Sean's mother took Sean to Brazil, the Superior Court of New Jersey awarded custody to Mr. Goldman, ordered Mrs. Goldman and her parents to immediately return Sean to the United States, and said that their continued behavior constituted parental kidnapping under United States law. Mrs. Goldman subsequently passed away in Brazil, leaving Sean without a mother and separated from his biological father in the United States. Mrs. Goldman's husband in Brazil petitioned for custody over Sean, and the issue has now been tied up in Brazilian courts for years.

The resolution also mentions a case with Japan, a United States ally which does not recognize intrafamilial child abduction as a crime.

Melissa Braden was taken from Los Angeles, California to Japan, in 2006, when she was just 11 months old, despite a 2006 restraining order that forbade Melissa's removal to Japan and an order granting joint custody to her father, Patrick Braden.

Despite his efforts, Mr. Braden and his daughter have not seen each other since her abduction. As in other cases, Japanese courts have not recognized his U.S. custody order and have not helped him gain visitation with his daughter.

While many American parents never see their children again when they are taken to Japan, I am hopeful that the Japanese government will take steps to respond to these cases by joining the Hague Convention. It is encouraging that the Japanese Ministry of Foreign Affairs is examining the Hague Convention, and I urge them to join as a party as soon as possible so that children like Melissa Braden can grow up knowing both of their parents.

The problem is, of course, much more widespread than these two cases. In 2008, the United States responded to cases involving 1,159 children abducted from the United States to countries with which the United States partners under the Hague Convention. In 2008, the United States saw 306 cases involving 455 children taken from the United States to other countries that are not Hague Convention partners.

I support this resolution because it shines a spotlight on a problem that needs immediate attention, a problem that will likely get worse in coming years in light of the growing number of transnational births and marriages. I urge my colleagues to support the resolution offered by the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH) and the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. HOLT).

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I might consume.

Mr. Speaker, imagine that you are a child of only 4 years old, and your best friend, your father, is your primary caregiver. You live with your parents by a lake in a quiet neighborhood in New Jersey, and your days are filled with boating, swimming, sports, and other fun with your dad. Then suddenly, one day your mother takes you on a jet; you move to a foreign country; and for 4½ years you live with the confusion, pain, and anxiety of not understanding why your dad is not there with or for you. The little contact you have with Dad are a few phone calls, routinely interrupted when the phone is taken from you and abruptly ended while your father is trying to tell you how much he loves and misses you.

That is what happened to Sean Goldman, an American citizen born and living in the United States for the first four years of his life, until June 2004, when his mother took him to her native country of Brazil. Almost as soon as she arrived in Rio de Janeiro, she advised Sean's father, David Goldman, that she was permanently staying in Brazil, the marriage was over, and that she was not going to allow Sean to return home to New Jersey; and Sean has not seen his real home since.

Stunned, shell-shocked, and utterly heartbroken, David Goldman has refused to quit or fade away. His love for his son is too strong. He has been working tirelessly every day during the last 4½ years, using every legal means available to bring Sean home.

On paper, the laws are with him. Child abduction and the retention of a kidnapped child are serious crimes. The courts of New Jersey, the place of Sean's habitual residence, granted David full custody, as Chairman BERMAN pointed out a moment ago, as far back as August 2004. On the international front, David has had every reason to believe that justice would be swift and sure because, unlike some countries, Brazil is a party to an international convention and in a bilateral partnership with the United States, which obligates Brazil to return children, even those abducted by a parent, to the place of habitual residence, in this case New Jersey.

To David Goldman's shock and dismay, however, that has not happened. Even after Sean's mother died unexpectedly in August of 2008, the people unlawfully holding Sean in Brazil, especially a man who is not Sean's father, have refused to allow Sean's return home to New Jersey or, until last month, even to see his father.

Last month, I traveled to Brazil with David Goldman on what was his eighth trip to try to see his son and advance the legal and diplomatic process of returning Sean home to the United States. This trip was different, however, and we sincerely hope a turning point.

First and foremost, he got to visit with his son, and we met with several key Brazilian officials in President Lula's government, including Ambassador Oto Agripino Maia at the Ministry of External Affairs and others, in the judicial system Minister Ellen Gracie Northfleet, the former chief justice and current member of the Supreme Court. We were encouraged by their apparent understanding of Brazil's solemn obligation as a signatory to the Hague Convention to return Sean to the United States.

In subsequent meetings here in the U.S. with Brazilian Ambassador Antonio Patrioto and the Brazilian Ambassador to the Organization of American States, Osmar Chofi, we were again assured that the Lula government believes that Sean Goldman should be in the United States and with his father. Still, deeds, not just encouraging words, are what matter most, and Sean remains unlawfully held in Brazil.

When in Brazil last month, I had the extraordinary privilege of joining David and Sean in their first meeting in 4½ years. Now almost 9, Sean Goldman was delighted to see his dad. The love between them was strong and was obvious from the very first moment. In the first moments of their meeting, I did see the pain on Sean as he asked his father why he hadn't visited him in 4½ years. David told him that he has traveled to Rio several times to try to be with him. But in order to mitigate Sean's pain because of the abduction, David blamed only the courts, not the abductors, for the separation, a sign of class and I think a sign of David's sensitivity.

This is a picture to my left here that I took while I was in Brazil, a picture of a dad with his son after shooting baskets and playing a game of "around the world." Sean, a remarkable young man who needs to work on his set shot, was completely at ease and eager to get reacquainted with his dad. I took this picture about 1 hour after their first reunion after 4½ years. The joy on both of their faces, as I think all can see, is compelling. There were hugs and there were kisses, and you can see that there was a great bond between this dad and his son.

Mr. Speaker, the kidnapping of Sean Goldman and his continued 4½ year unlawful retention in Rio must be resolved immediately and irrevocably. A father, who deeply loves his son, wants desperately to care for him and spend precious time with him and has had his nationally and internationally recognized parental rights, and his son has had his rights as well, violated with shocking impunity.

David Goldman should not be blocked from raising his own son. And a child who recently lost his mom belongs with his dad.

The Government of Brazil, Mr. Speaker, has failed to live up to its legal obligations under international law to return Sean to his biological father. The Government of Brazil has an obligation they must fulfill and without further delay. The resolution before us today expresses the House of Representatives' profound concern and calls on Brazil to, in accordance with its international obligations and with "extreme urgency" bring about the return of Sean Goldman with his dad, David Goldman, in the United States. Justice delayed, Mr. Speaker, is justice denied. And Sean's place is with his dad.

Mr. Speaker, on the bigger picture, international child abductions by parents are not rare. The U.S. Department of State reports that it is currently handling approximately 1,900 cases involving more than 2,800 children abducted from the United States to other countries. And those numbers do not include children whose parents, for whatever reason, do not report the abductions to the U.S. Department of State.

In recognition of the gravity of this problem and the traumatic consequences that child abductions can have both on the child and the parent who is left behind, the Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction was reached in 1980. The purpose of the Hague Convention is to provide an expeditious method to return an abducted child to the child's habitual residence so that custody determinations can be made in that jurisdiction. According to the terms of the Convention, such return is to take place within 6 weeks—not over 4½ years—after proceedings under the Convention are commenced.

The United States, Mr. Speaker, ratified the Hague Convention in 1988.

Brazil acceded to the Hague Convention in 1999 and the Hague Convention was entered into force between Brazil and the U.S. in 2003, a year before Sean was abducted. In accordance with the Hague Convention, David Goldman on September 3, 2004, filed, in a timely fashion, an application for the immediate return of his son. Brazil, sadly, has failed to deliver.

I would point out on a positive note that within a week of our return home to the United States, the Brazilian courts did take what we consider to be a major step in the right direction for David and Sean. The decision was to move the case from the local courts, which were erroneously bogged down in making a custody determination, to the Federal court capable and responsible for making decisions in accordance with obligations under the Hague Convention. Pursuant to an amended application filed under the Convention after the death of Sean's mother and in accordance with the "expeditious return" provisions of the Hague Convention, Brazil's only legitimate and legal option now, as it has been, is to effectuate Sean's return. And it must be done now.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, this weekend, Brazilian President Lula will visit the United States and visit one-on-one with President Obama. The White House meeting should include a serious discussion about Brazil's—and this is the State Department term—pattern of noncompliance with the Hague Convention and Brazil's obligation to immediately fulfill this obligation in the case of Sean Goldman and many other cases like it, including one that Mr. POE will bring up momentarily.

I'm happy to say that over 50 Members of the House, including my friend and colleague, Mr. HOLT, have cosponsored this resolution. Over 43,000 people from 154 nations have signed a petition urging Brazil to do the right thing and expeditiously return Sean to the United States. So many people, Mr. Speaker, have joined in and helped David in his fight for his son and deserve our appreciation and respect.

His extraordinarily talented legal counsel here in the United States, Patricia Apy, and in Brazil, Ricardo Zamariola, Jr., have made their case with expertise, precision, compassion and particular adherence to the rule of law. The staff at our consulates in Brazil—Consul General Marie C. Damour, Joanna Weinz and Karen Gufstafson—have all tirelessly and professionally worked this case for several years as if Sean and David were their own family. Special thanks to Ambassador Cliff Sobel. A number of journalists, including Bill Handleman of the Asbury Park Press, have written powerful columns about David's loss and his entire terrible ordeal. Meredith Vieira, Benita Noel and Lauren Sugrue of NBC's Dateline have probed, investigated and demanded answers, thus ensuring that the truth about this unlawful abduction is known to the public, including and especially to government officials both here and Brazil. In fact, it was a Dateline special on the Goldman case that caused me to call David and to get involved.

And finally, a special thanks to the countless volunteers, including Mark DeAngelis, who has done yeoman's work, including managing a Web site—Bring Sean Home—and have proved to be an invaluable support system during this most difficult and trying time for father and son.

I urge Members to support this resolution. Again I want to thank Chairman BERMAN for his leadership in bringing this resolution to the floor and to ILEANA ROS-LEHTINEN, our distinguished ranking member. This resolution I believe will make a difference not just for David and Sean but for so many others who are similarly situated.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. HOLT) in whose district Mr. Goldman resides.

Mr. HOLT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished Chair of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, Mr. BERMAN, for bringing this resolution to the floor. The resolution calls on the Government of Brazil to live up to its obligations under the Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction by releasing Sean Goldman to the custody of his father, David Goldman of Tinton Falls, New Jersey, my constituent. This bill shines a bright light on the problem of international parental kidnapping, and it is an issue that deserves congressional attention.

Let me recount some of the recent background on this issue and why this resolution is before the House today. It is heartrending, as you have heard from my colleague from New Jersey.

Nearly 5 years ago in June, 2004, Mr. David Goldman began a long and painful odyssey to rescue his son from an international parental kidnapping. He had driven his wife, Bruna, and their 4-year-old son, Sean, to the Newark airport for a scheduled trip to visit her parents in Brazil. Mr. Goldman was to join them a few days later. Shortly after arriving in Brazil, Mrs. Goldman called her husband to say two things: their marriage was over, and if he ever wanted to see Sean again, he would have to sign over custody of the boy to her. To his credit, Mr. Goldman refused to be blackmailed. Instead, he began a campaign, a relentless campaign, to secure his son's release.

There is no question that Mr. Goldman has the law both here in the United States and internationally on his side. It is sad and unfortunate that this father and this little boy must have their personal lives dragged through the public forum.

For any of us who have children or grandchildren, we can imagine but not fully comprehend the pain that Mr. Goldman and similar parents have gone through when a spouse kidnaps a child and whisks them away somewhere around the world. Tragically, Sean Goldman's case is just one of over 50 reported cases involving Brazil. Many countries, including key U.S. allies such as Japan, are not even signatories to this Hague Convention. For parents of children kidnapped by a spouse and taken to one of these non-Hague signatory nations, their battle to recover kidnapped children is even more difficult. The resolution before us highlights also the plight of these parents and their children. And it should be viewed as one step toward increasing the tools available to parents to help them recover children.

In October, 1980, the Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction entered into force. The United States and Brazil are both signatories. Under article 3 of the Convention, the removal of a child shall be considered wrongful if "it is in breach of rights of custody attributed to a person, an institution or any other body, either jointly or alone, under the law of the State in which the child was habitually resident immediately before the removal or retention; and at the time of removal or retention those rights were actually exercised, either jointly or alone, or would have been exercised." Well, Sean Goldman had been habitually resident in New Jersey until his mother kidnapped him and took him to Brazil.

Shortly after that, Mr. Goldman filed a Hague Convention application in Brazil's federal courts seeking the return of his son under the Convention.

Despite the clear legitimacy of Mr. Goldman's claim, the case has crawled along in Brazil's courts, bouncing back and forth and back and forth. Mr. Goldman's wife secured a divorce in Brazil and began a new relationship with a prominent lawyer. In August of last year, his former wife died during childbirth, a fact that Mr. Goldman learned only some time later and a fact that was concealed from the Brazilian courts by Mr. Lins e Silva, her then husband, and Mr. Goldman's late wife's parents.

After our individual intercession and with the help of the State Department and my colleague from New Jersey, and I particularly want to note his actions, Brazilian authorities moved to have the case once again sent to Brazil's federal courts to secure visitation rights for Mr. Goldman. Finally just last month, Mr. Goldman was able to see his son for the first time in more than 4 years. It is clear that Sean still loves his father and wants to be with him. It appears that the only thing standing in the way of that is the illegal conduct of Mr. Lins e Silva.

I applaud Secretary of State Clinton for raising this issue with Brazil's foreign minister and through other channels. If Sean is not released by the end of this week, I hope that President Obama will continue to bring the issue to the attention of Brazilian President Lula Da Silva and that Sean and his father will be united as they should be.

I thank the gentleman.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Texas (Mr. POE), a member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Mr. POE of Texas. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I appreciate the support of Chairman BERMAN and Mr. SMITH from New Jersey. Mr. SMITH has a reputation for going and helping out his district. During the Russian incursion into the Republic of Georgia, while that was still going on, Mr. SMITH went and rescued two young people and got them back to his district while the Russians were still invading. That tells all of us a lot about your willingness to advocate on behalf of human rights.

It is reported that there are nearly 50 cases in which children who are residents of the United States have been wrongfully abducted to Brazil and have not been returned to the United States as required under the Hague Convention. Mr. Goldman and other United States citizens, specifically Marty Pate of Crosby, Texas, in my district, are allowed under international law to obtain quick return of their children from Brazil and other countries that have entered into obligations with the United States under the Hague Convention.

It seems to me that Brazil approves of government-sanctioned kidnapping of American children and ignoring agreements with the United States. Mr. Pate's story is very similar to the one already presented here on the House floor, although this is a story about a father and a daughter. Thanks to Fox 26 News in Houston, Texas, they have brought this story to light. And it is the Marty Pate story.

It seems that in May, 2006, Marty Pate's ex-wife, Monica, told him that she wanted to temporarily go back to her home country of Brazil and take their 7-year-old daughter, Nicole, with her. Marty Pate objected, but he allowed her to take the daughter for a short visit. Both agreed under a Harris County, Texas, court order as to what travel stipulations there would be, and both signed a notarized document on what those travel restrictions would be. One of those was there would be a maximum of 21 days that the child would be allowed to leave the United States. On August 5, 2006, Monica and her daughter, Nicole, left the United States and never returned. That was the last time that Marty Pate saw his daughter. There is an outstanding arrest warrant for Monica on failure to follow a court order in the State of Texas.

Mr. Speaker, this ought not to be. It seems as though Brazil is ignoring agreements that they have made under international law with the United States and continues to do so. As a side note, the United States gives foreign assistance to Brazil. Maybe the Foreign Affairs Committee needs to re-evaluate whether we should give them assistance when they continue to kidnap or sanction kidnappings of American citizens. The United States should insist that countries like Brazil live up to their legal obligations to return to America, America's children.

And that's just the way it is.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. I thank Mr. POE for his leadership on behalf of the child who has been abducted and congratulate him on his work.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, at this point I will reserve. We have one speaker remaining.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. JONES).

□ 1345

Mr. JONES. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank Chairman BERMAN, CHRIS SMITH, Mr. HOLT and everyone else. I saw this story about this family probably a year ago, and it broke my heart, quite frankly.

I do not understand how a country such as Brazil, which I have respect for, could allow this to happen. This is not what the world should be about. The world should be about trying to bring families together, and Brazil has a responsibility that they are not making and they are not keeping.

I would say to the country of Brazil that if this was reversed, I believe that this House, the leadership of Mr. BERMAN and Mr. SMITH, would be on this floor saying to the family here that was keeping the son of a father in Brazil, Let's send him back to his father.

So I hope that the country of Brazil and those who are here in Washington, D.C. representing their country or listening to this debate, I hope that they will fully understand that this is a debate of compassion. Mr. Goldman and his son Sean, they have every right to be together. So I came down here to the floor today from North Carolina with not a great deal to add to this debate but my heart. And my heart says let's get this family together. I thank very much Mr. BERMAN and Mr. SMITH, and say to the Brazilian government, please listen to the American people. Let's work together for the good of this family.

Mr. BERMAN. Would the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES. I would be delighted to yield.

Mr. BERMAN. I thank the gentleman for yielding. Your interesting point that if the situation was reversed, we saw that situation. It was a very famous case: Elian Gonzalez. Even though he was being sent back to a country with which we have no diplomatic relations, and even though the nature of that government was one that we did not support, the rights of the father to be reunited with his son prevailed over all of the political considerations. So we saw the tables reversed, and we saw what the U.S. Government did in that situation. I concur with the gentleman's point on this issue.

Mr. JONES. I thank Chairman BERMAN, and before I yield back, I ask God to please intervene on behalf of this wonderful family and bring the father and the son back together.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California (Mr. BECERRA).

Mr. BECERRA. Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman for yielding me this time, and I rise in support of this resolution.

My mother once said to me shortly after I had seen the birth of my first child, "Son, there is no tragedy for any parent that is greater than the experience of witnessing your own child's death." Nothing is more precious than life, and nothing is more profound than the love of a parent for the life of that child brought to this Earth.

Mr. Speaker, according to the State Department's Office of Children's Issues, there are 306 pending cases of parental abductions involving 455 American children taken to countries that are not a party to the Hague Convention on Child Abduction. And 101 of these abducted American children currently reside in Japan. In 2006 in the midst of a custody dispute, Melissa Braden, the daughter of one of my constituents, Patrick Braden, was taken to Japan by her mother and has been there ever since. Despite a court restraining order for Melissa to remain in the United States and an arrest warrant issued by the FBI for her mother, Japanese authorities have refused to act on this case. Japanese courts give no recognition to the parental rights of the non-Japanese parent, and the Japanese government refuses to enforce U.S. court orders related to child custody or visitation.

After his daughter's abduction when Mr. Braden approached me for help and I tried to see what I could do, you can imagine my disbelief and dismay that we were unable to help secure Melissa for Mr. Braden or to even have them reunited in Japan. I approached the State Department, and I wrote to President Bush in 2007 and asked for their intervention on behalf of Mr. Braden.

The State Department has committed to raising this issue at the highest levels of dialogue with Japan, and I wish to say here publicly, thank you to Chairman BERMAN for his support of this issue and for supporting America's parents and their families.

I would like to thank two champions of human rights, the gentlemen from New Jersey, Mr. SMITH and Mr. HOLT. And I must say, Mr. Speaker, my mother was right: there is nothing worse than losing your own child, especially when your child is still alive.

I urge all of my colleagues to support this resolution to get action on behalf of all of our American families with countries that are some of our greatest partners and allies.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time to say very simply that our message to the Brazilian government is to bring Sean home, and to do so today.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I just want to point out that in calendar year 2007, along the lines of the point made by the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. JONES), the United States returned over 200 children to Hague Convention partners where a biological parent resided and sought the return of that child. So this resolution is consistent with our own practices, and I think with internationally recognized fundamental human rights. I urge its adoption.

Mr. GARRETT of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H. Res. 125. This resolution calls on the central authority of Brazil to uphold the Hague Convention by facilitating the immediate release of Sean Goldman to his father, David Goldman.

June 16, 2004 was the day Sean Goldman was abducted by his mother, Bruna Goldman, and taken to Brazil. That day marked the beginning of a 4½ year struggle to reunite David Goldman with his son Sean. During those subsequent years, David Goldman tirelessly lobbied the Brazilian judicial system, sought international legal advice, and mourned the death of Sean's mother in August 2008. Recently, the situation was further complicated when Sean's step-father petitioned the Brazilian courts for custody of Sean and illegally replaced David's name with his own on a Brazilian birth certificate.

H. Res. 125 was introduced by my New Jersey colleague, Representative CHRISTOPHER SMITH, and I am proud to be one of the 57 cosponsors of this bill. This resolution urges the Brazilian government to uphold its commitment to the Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction. This multilateral treaty, developed by the Hague Conference on Private International Law in 1980, provides an expeditious method for returning a child taken from one member nation to another. H. Res. 125 is of the utmost importance, as it not only calls on Brazil to display their intention to follow international law, but also brings a father and son one step closer to reunification.

It is imperative for us to support David Goldman's quest to be reunited with his son. H. Res. 125 will help us accomplish this goal and I thank my colleagues for joining me in voting unanimously for its passage.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. BERMAN) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the resolution, H. Res. 125, as amended.

The question was taken.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds being in the affirmative, the ayes have it.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

SUPPORTING THE GOALS OF INTERNATIONAL WOMEN'S DAY

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the resolution (H. Res. 194) supporting the goals of International Women's Day, as amended.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from California (Mr. BERMAN) and the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on the resolution under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this resolution, and I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I first want to thank Representative JAN SCHAKOWSKY and the other cosponsors of this resolution for honoring the contributions and achievements of women around the world, and the importance of promoting and protecting their rights.

Today, women all over the world are becoming leaders in science, medicine, arts, politics, and even the military. Despite this progress, it is a sad fact that women and girls continue to constitute the vast majority of the world's poor, chronically hungry, refugees, HIV-infected, uneducated, unemployed and disenfranchised. All too often, women are subject to physical violence and discrimination as a result of their gender. Women are also the targets of cruel cultural practices, including genital mutilation, forced and early marriages, humiliating and harmful widow practices, bride burnings and honor killings.

On average, women continue to receive less pay for work of equal value, and many continue to face discrimination in hiring and admission to educational institutions. It is not enough to simply declare the equality of women and condemn their mistreatment. We must, in all sectors of society, address the structural factors that prevent women and girls from enjoying the same rights and opportunities as boys and men.

We must also eliminate the criminal and cultural practices that destroy the lives and freedom and health of women. Statistics demonstrate that when women's quality of life improves, their children are happier, healthier and better educated. Entire communities and countries benefit from these improvements. Successful, educated and respected women also become powerful role models for future generations.

In honor of our family members, our female colleagues and our Speaker, not to mention women across the country and around the world, I am proud to support this resolution and urge all my colleagues to do the same.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

H. Res. 194, supporting the goals of International Women's Day, provides us with an opportunity to celebrate the important contributions to all levels of society and social advancement of women around the globe.

I would like to focus my comments on three areas referenced in the resolution on which so much more needs to be done to ensure women and girls worldwide achieve their full potential. One is with respect to the horrible phenomenon, the criminality, of human trafficking. The resolution cites reported estimates that between one and two million women are trafficked for sexual exploitation, forced labor, and domestic servitude each year. Some NGO estimates are far higher than that number. Women are robbed of their dignity, fundamental human rights, and forced into bondage and sexual servitude. They are modern-day slaves.

In 2000, I was the prime sponsor of the Trafficking Victims Protection Act of 2000 which, together with its reauthorizations, including Chairman BERMAN's legislation reauthorizing the law last year named after the great British parliamentarian William Wilberforce, who stopped the slave trade in London, has made the United States a leader in addressing the egregious human rights violations of trafficking and motivated other countries and governments to do the same. Yet much work remains to be done if we are to eliminate this scourge. Too much demand, enabled by crass indifference, unbridled hedonism and misogynistic attitudes, has turned women and girls into objects, valued only for their utility in the brothel or in the sweatshop. Society has helped perpetuate this heinous crime by failing to utilize all the means at our disposal to combat it.

Legislation that I will soon introduce, along with DON PAYNE from my own home State of New Jersey, entitled the "International Megan's Law," would address this omission with respect to sex tourism to exploit children. It would seek to protect girls and boys around the world from sexual exploitation by establishing a notification system between governments when a known high-risk sex offender is traveling or intends to travel internationally.

Government representatives from other countries, including Thailand, Brazil, the United Kingdom and Australia, have expressed a desire to cooperate with the United States to address the degrading exploitation that occurs as a result of sex tourism. Girls are the primary victims in this often overlooked form of trafficking.

Another key area in critical need of improvement is that of maternal health. Most of us are familiar with the appalling statistic that in sub-Saharan Africa, the lifetime risk of maternal death is 1 in 16, compared with 1 in 2,800 in developed countries. It is unacceptable and awful in the extreme that most of these maternal deaths are preventable.

During the Africa Subcommittee's hearing about safe blood that I chaired in the 109th Congress, we heard from Dr. Neelam Dhingra of the World Health Organization. Dr. Dhingra informed us that the most common cause of maternal death in sub-Saharan Africa is severe bleeding, which can take the life of even a healthy woman within 2 hours if not properly and immediately treated. She gave us the astonishing statistic that in Africa severe bleeding during delivery or after childbirth contributes to up to 44 percent of maternal deaths, many of which could be prevented simply by having access to safe blood. A sufficient quantity and quality of immediately available and usable blood must become the norm and not the exception. I congratulate CHAKA FATTAH from Philadelphia, a Member of Congress, for his work in promoting safe blood.

Another unacceptable risk for many women giving birth in the developing world, especially Africa, is obstetric fistula. Fistula, Mr. Speaker, can be treated and repaired through a relatively minor surgical procedure that costs, on average, $150 per surgery. Still, large numbers of women, an estimated 2 million, endure tremendous pain and numbing isolation that comes from being the walking wounded, incontinent and ostracized, and not able to get to a hospital—like the famous hospital in Addis, which performs these wonderful interventions. I visited that hospital and saw dozens of women who got fistula repair, and the smiles on their faces were amazing. With just a small investment of health care dollars, the lives of women throughout Africa could be dramatically changed.

Helping mothers and helping babies goes hand in hand, Mr. Speaker. There is no dichotomy. When women receive proper prenatal and maternal health care, they are less likely to die in childbirth, and when unborn babies are healthy in the womb, they emerge as healthier, stronger newborns.

Birth is not the beginning of life, it is merely an event in the baby's life that began at fertilization. Life is a continuum with many stages. I believe, Mr. Speaker, human rights should be respected from womb to tomb, and that no violence is acceptable against anyone, regardless of age, race, religion, gender, disability, or condition of dependency. We need to recognize this biological fact in policy, funding and programs, and treat both mother and baby, including the unborn child, as two patients in need of respect, love and tangible assistance. We need to affirm them both.

I would like to conclude by raising the plight of women, and especially the girl child, who suffer from the coercive population control agenda of the Chinese Government.

As you know, Mr. Speaker, I was blocked from offering two pro-life, pro-child, pro-women amendments to the huge $410 billion omnibus. One of those amendments would have restored the Kemp-Kasten policy for all organizations, including the U.N. Population Fund, if they had been found to be involved with coercive population control.

I held 26 hearings, Mr. Speaker, on human rights in China when I was the chairman of the Human Rights Subcommittee and met with numerous women during frequent human rights missions to China. There is no doubt that the U.N. Population Fund has supported, co-managed, and whitewashed the most pervasive crimes against women in all of human history.

China's one-child-per-couple policy relies on pervasive coerced abortion, involuntary sterilization, ruinous fines in the amounts of up to ten times the salary of both parents, imprisonment, and job loss or a demotion to achieve its quotas. In China today, brothers and sisters are illegal. Women are told when and if they can have the one child permitted by law. And rather than showing compassion and tangible assistance to unwed mothers, unwed moms, even if it's their first baby, are forcibly aborted. Let me say that again. There are no unwed moms in China, they are all forcibly aborted.

Women are severely harmed emotionally, psychologically and physically. Chinese women are violated by the state. The suicide rate for Chinese women is about 500 per day, according to the most recent Human Rights Report from the Department of State—it just came out 2 weeks ago—and that number far exceeds any other number.

Then there are the missing girls, upwards of 100 million girls missing in China as a direct result of sex selection abortions. This genocide is a direct result of the one-child-per-couple policy combined with a preference for boys. That human rights abuse has to be made much more visible. The Chinese Government has to take corrective action. And all of us have to do our part to stop this genocide of young girls, of little girls.

I urge unanimous support for H. Res. 194. It is an excellent resolution.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H. Res. 194, "Supporting the goals of International Women's Day". As a member of the Congressional Caucus for Women's Issues this resolution is very important to me and I thank my colleague Congresswoman JAN SCHAKOWSKY for introducing this resolution.

H. Res. 194 recognizes and honors the women who have fought and continue to struggle for equality. There are over 3,000,000,000 women in the world, representing 51 percent of the world's population and yet, women remain vastly underrepresented in national and local assemblies, face political and economic obstacles, struggle for basic rights, face the threat of discrimination, and are targets of violence all over the world.

Despite tremendous gains over the past 20 years women still have great strides to make. How is it that women work $\frac{2}{3}$ of the world's working hours, produce half of the world's food, yet earn only 1 percent of the world's income and own less than 1 percent of the world's property? Today, although women have reached great heights, women are still earning less than their male counterparts in the workforce. Two-thirds of illiterate individuals worldwide are women which is quite distressing.

Throughout the world, women are victims of violence and disease. Women have become victims of illegal human trafficking for the purpose of forced labor, domestic servitude, and/or sexual exploitation. We must pledge to stop this violence against women.

Domestic violence causes more deaths and disability among women between the ages of 15 and 44 than cancer, malaria, traffic accidents, and war. Worldwide, at least 1 out of every 3 women and girls have been beaten in her lifetime and at least 1 out of every 6 women and girls in the United States has been sexually abused in her lifetime. Furthermore, 70 percent of the people living in poverty around the world are women and children. In addition, women account for half of all cases of HIV/AIDS worldwide. These statistics are staggering and show why this resolution must be passed.

The United States House of Representatives must show a commitment to ending discrimination and violence against women and girls, to ensure their safety and welfare, and to pursue policies that guarantee their basic rights.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this extremely important resolution, H.

Res. 194, "Supporting the goals of International Women's Day". Women's rights affect everyone, as we all have a mother.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, we have no more speakers.

I might point out the irony that, in a resolution that is commemorating International Women's Day, the sponsor of that resolution is not available to speak on the floor because she is at the White House commemorating International Women's Day. But Ms. SCHAKOWSKY's comments can be added into the RECORD.

Mrs. MALONEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H. Res. 194, a resolution to support the goals of International Women's Day. I'd like to take this opportunity to commend the work of my colleague, Rep. JAN SCHAKOWSKY, for introducing this resolution again in the 111th Congress, and for her invaluable work in support of women's rights as co-chair of the Congressional Caucus on Women's Issues.

In the United States and in countries around the world, women are agents of change, development, and prosperity, contributing in so many ways to the well-being of their families and communities. There is clear and abundant evidence that when women thrive, the entire world thrives as well.

However, the benefits of women's full participation in economic, political, and social life are not being realized in many parts of the world. In all regions, women are less likely than men to receive pay commensurate to the value of their work, be given a voice in their national governments, or have access to basic human rights such as the right to an education. In many countries, the United States included, domestic violence is further reducing the opportunities available to women and girls to lead happy, healthy lives. H. Res. 194 is an important step towards guaranteeing the basic rights of women and girls worldwide by calling for an end to this discrimination.

Throughout my time in Congress, promoting women's rights has been one of my top legislative priorities. For years I have worked tirelessly with likeminded colleagues to restore funding to UNFPA, an organization whose mission is to promote the right of every woman to enjoy a life of health and equal opportunity. I commend the new Administration for recognizing the value of this goal by committing to funding UNFPA, including $50 million in the FY09 Omnibus Appropriations Bill.

However, more needs to be done in the 111th Congress to further women's rights. That is why I will be introducing a resolution condemning the actions of the Taliban to restrict girls' access to education in Swat, Pakistan, as well as H.R. 606, the International Women's Freedom Act. This bill reflects the goals of International Women's Day in many ways, as it calls for concerted action on the part of the State Department and Executive Branch to advance the rights of women, including creating an Office of International Women's Rights within the State Department, establishing a women's rights Internet site, and requiring that Foreign Service Officers receive women's rights related training.

This resolution in support of International Women's Day recognizes the strength, leadership, and capability demonstrated by women in every village, city, and country. I ask my colleagues to join me in reaffirming their commitments to protecting the rights of women and girls around the world, by observing International Women's Day, and by honoring women's contributions every day.

Mr. SIRE. Mr. Speaker. I rise today in support of House Resolution 194, supporting the goals of International Women's Day. Women have come a long way in our nation; leading graduation rates at universities, running major corporations and being elected to the highest levels of government. I am proud to live in a country where more women than ever before are being elected to office and I am proud to serve with the first woman Speaker of the House of Representatives. However, many women around the world continue to be less fortunate; living in poverty, without access to health care, education or basic human rights. We must continue to be their voice, so that women all across the world will one day have the ability to make their own decisions about their lives. I hope that by providing women with the tools to educate themselves, they are better equipped to provide for their families, protect themselves against HIV/AIDS, end cycles of domestic violence, and fight for their rights. Mr. Speaker, we must continue to support the goals of International Women's Day to ensure the further advancement of women in our country and around the globe.

Ms. WATSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in enthusiastic support for H. Res. 194 a resolution supporting the goals of International Women's Day. For the last century March 8th has been a day for people to unite in their commitment to honor the women who courageously fight for gender equality and women's rights across the globe.

The course of women's history through the 20th and 21st centuries has been on an upward trajectory, and while we celebrate how far we have come, it is important to pause and reflect on the reality that women continue to face political and economic obstacles, discrimination, and violence all over the world.

While there are many who deserve our appreciation, I would like to recognize the women of Afghanistan who have begun to steadily chip at the steel grasp of patriarchy, and begun to fight for safety and justice.

Before 2003 the idea of a women's shelter in Afghanistan was unheard of, and domestic abuse victims who did seek protection from law enforcement were often thrown in jail or returned to their husbands, perpetuating a culture of silence around the practices of beating, torture, and forced marriage.

Now, shelters like the Women for Afghan Women in Kabul and the Afghan Women Skills Development Center provide protection, treatment, and legal services to women who might otherwise have resigned themselves to a life of quiet misery, or resorted to suicide.

These shelters, like others around the world, provide solace and safety for women with nowhere else to turn. They provide the basic hope of possibilities for those seeking a safe haven from abuse. Before these shelters existed many Afghan women could only dream of a life in their own control, and now they have hope.

I would like to thank my colleague Congresswoman SCHAKOWSKY for sponsoring this important resolution which allows us to stand and celebrate our common ideals with the 3 billion women across the globe in dignity and certitude that one day women will live free of discrimination and violence no matter where they were born.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. BERMAN) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the resolution, H. Res. 194, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds being in the affirmative) the rules were suspended and the resolution, as amended, was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RECOGNIZING PLIGHT OF TIBETAN PEOPLE ON 50TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE DALAI LAMA'S EXILE

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the resolution (H. Res. 226) recognizing the plight of the Tibetan people on the 50th anniversary of His Holiness the Dalai Lama being forced into exile and calling for a sustained multilateral effort to bring about a durable and peaceful solution to the Tibet issue.

The Clerk read the title of the resolution.

The text of the resolution is as follows:

H. RES. 226

Whereas for more than 2,000 years the people of Tibet have maintained a distinct cultural identity, language, and religion;

Whereas in 1949, the armed forces of the People's Republic of China took over the eastern areas of the traditional Tibetan homeland, and by March 1951 occupied the Tibetan capital of Lhasa and laid siege to Tibetan government buildings;

Whereas in April 1951, under duress of military occupation, Tibetan government officials signed the Seventeen Point agreement which provided for the preservation of the institution of the Dalai Lama, local self government and continuation of the Tibetan political system, and the autonomy for Tibetans within the People's Republic of China;

Whereas on March 10, 1959, the Tibetan people rose up in Lhasa against Chinese rule in response to Chinese actions to undermine self-government and to rumors that Chinese authorities planned to detain Tenzin Gyatso, His Holiness the 14th Dalai Lama, the spiritual and temporal leader of the Tibetan people;

Whereas on March 17, 1959, with the People's Liberation Army commencing an assault on his residence, the Dalai Lama, in fear of his safety and his ability to lead the Tibetan people, fled Lhasa;

Whereas upon his arrival in India, the Dalai Lama declared that he could do more in exile to champion the rights and self-determination of Tibetans than he could inside territory controlled by the armed forces of the People's Republic of China;

Whereas the Dalai Lama was welcomed by the Government and people of India, a testament to the close cultural and religious links between India and Tibet and a mutual admiration for the philosophies of non-violence espoused by Mahatma Gandhi and the 14th Dalai Lama;

Whereas under the leadership of the Dalai Lama, Tibetans overcame adversity and hardship to establish vibrant exile communities in India, the United States, Europe, and elsewhere in order to preserve Tibetan cultural identity, language, and religion;

Whereas the Dalai Lama set out to instill democracy in the exile community, which has led to the Central Tibetan Administration with its democratically elected Executive and Legislative Branches, as well as a Judicial Branch;

Whereas on March 10 every year Tibetans commemorate the circumstances that led to the separation of the Dalai Lama from Tibet and the struggle of Tibetans to preserve their identity in the face of the assimilationist policies of the People's Republic of China;

Resolved, That the House of Representatives—

(1) recognizes the Tibetan people for their perseverance in face of hardship and adversity in Tibet and for creating a vibrant and democratic community in exile that sustains the Tibetan identity;

(2) recognizes the Government and people of India for their generosity toward the Tibetan refugee population for the last 50 years;

(3) calls upon the Government of the People's Republic of China to respond to the Dalai Lama's initiatives to find a lasting solution to the Tibetan issue, cease its repression of the Tibetan people, and to lift immediately the harsh policies imposed on Tibetans, including patriotic education campaigns, detention and abuses of those freely expressing political views or relaying news about local conditions, and limitations on travel and communications; and

(4) calls upon the Administration to recommit to a sustained effort consistent with the Tibetan Policy Act of 2002, that employs diplomatic, programmatic, and multilateral resources to press the People's Republic of China to respect the Tibetans' identity and the human rights of the Tibetan people.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from California (Mr. BERMAN) and the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on the resolution under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this resolution and yield myself as much time as I may consume.

This resolution recognizes the plight of the Tibetan people on the 50th anniversary of His Holiness the Dalai Lama's exile and calls for a sustained multilateral effort toward a peaceful resolution to the Tibet issue.

The resolution is introduced by my good friends, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. HOLT) and our ranking member, ILEANA ROS-LEHTINEN of Florida. I thank them for their leadership in ensuring that the House commemorates this important date.

In 1949, the People's Liberation Army of China entered the eastern areas of the traditional Tibetan territory. In 1951, they occupied the Tibetan capital of Lhasa. Fifty years ago this month, the Tibetan people rose up in Lhasa against Chinese rule.

On March 17, 1959, His Holiness the Dalai Lama fled Tibet after the People's Liberation Army commenced an assault on his residence. He was followed into exile by some 80,000 Tibetans. Tens of thousands of Tibetans who remained were killed or imprisoned.

Under the leadership of the Dalai Lama, Tibetans have sought to overcome adversity and hardship. Exiled communities have been established in India, the United States, Europe, and elsewhere, to preserve Tibetan cultural identity, language and religion. They have succeeded abroad, but at home, the uniqueness of the Tibetan people remains threatened by Chinese policies.

Over the years, the Congress has repeatedly championed the rights of Tibetans, applauded efforts by the Dalai Lama to seek a peaceful resolution to the dispute between China and Tibet, and funded programs to assist Tibetan refugees.

In 2002, Congress passed the Tibetan Policy Act, the cornerstone of U.S. policy toward Tibet. This legislation codified the position of Special Coordinator for Tibetan Issues and emphasized that it should be U.S. policy to promote a dialogue between the Chinese Government and representatives of the Dalai Lama in order to achieve a settlement based on meaningful and genuine autonomy for the Tibetan people.

In 2007, Congress awarded the Congressional Gold Medal to His Holiness the Dalai Lama in recognition of his life-long dedication to the causes of peace and non-violent resolution to the Tibet issue.

I know that many of our friends in China are distressed by the continued congressional focus on Tibet. To them I say this resolution is not anti-Chinese. We have deep respect for both peoples. But after eight rounds of fruitless meetings between the Chinese Government and representatives of the Dalai Lama, it appears to many of us that China is not serious about achieving resolution of this difficult issue.

It's time for China to negotiate in good faith. I urge the Chinese Government to re-examine their policies in Tibet and to provide the Tibetan people genuine autonomy in their traditional homeland.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I thank our esteemed chairman of the committee, Mr. BERMAN from California.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in enthusiastic support of this House resolution because it conveys a continued deep concern of both the Congress and the American people for the plight of the people of Tibet, a concern first demonstrated by our late committee chairman, Tom Lantos. Our chairman, Mr. BERMAN, continues this human rights legacy. I'm honored to join with my colleague, Congressman HOLT, in co-sponsoring this important resolution commemorating the 50th anniversary of the uprising in Tibet against Chinese Communist rule.

The history of the people of Tibet for the past half century has been one of grace under fire and of courage in the face of extreme adversity. Beijing's Communist overseers displayed once again their calloused hostility to the cultural, religious and linguistic rights of the Tibetan people by their harsh and bloody crackdown in Tibet exactly 1 year ago. The iron grip of Beijing, however, cannot silence, cannot repress, cannot extinguish the resilient Buddhist spirit of the people who occupy the land known as the "Rooftop of the World."

The forced exile of His Holiness the Dalai Lama and his flight into India 50 years ago is a continuing source of profound sorrow for the people of Tibet. This resolution, therefore, Mr. Speaker, also takes note of the warmth and the support with which the government and the people of India have greeted the Dalai Lama and other exiles from Tibet.

Tibet's tragic loss of its spiritual leader, however, has proven to be the world's gain. No steadier voice on the issues of religious freedom and human rights has been heard in the corridors of power than that of the quiet, but determined, voice of the Dalai Lama. He has risen from being a humble refugee to becoming both a Nobel Peace Prize recipient and the conscience of the civilized world.

The Chinese Foreign Minister is in Washington this very week for an official visit, the very week that we commemorate the uprising in Tibet. Just prior to his departure from Beijing to Washington, the Chinese Foreign Minister stated, "The Dalai side still insists on establishing a so-called greater Tibet on a quarter of China's territory; you call this person a religious figure?"

Mr. Speaker, this resolution can serve as a response to the foreign minister. The U.S. Congress has a message for the Foreign Minister of China's Communist regime, and that is that the Dalai Lama is not only a religious figure, but a person of such renown that he was granted the Congressional Gold Medal. I was honored to serve as one of the sponsors for this legislation awarding the Dalai Lama the Congressional Gold Medal during the last Congress.

Our message to the Chinese regime is contained in the forceful language of this resolution calling for the preservation of the religious and human rights of the people of Tibet. The U.S. Government must keep faith with the people of Tibet. We must press the Chinese regime on issues of human rights and religious freedom in Tibet. The U.S. Congress will not fail in our commitment to Tibet and to its people.

Now is the time for all of us to reflect on the enormous resilience of a captive Tibet and its suffering people over the past five decades. Now is the time to call on the Communist leaders in Beijing—sitting behind the walls of their enclosed compound—to hear the cries from the international community for justice in Tibet. Now is the time for our colleagues to reconfirm their support for the Dalai Lama and for his oppressed people.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, at this point I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. HOLT), the sponsor of the resolution.

Mr. HOLT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished chairman for yielding.

Yesterday marked the passage of 50 years since the Tibetan people in Lhasa first rose in protest against the harsh actions of the People's Republic of China to undermine the Tibetan self-government. I am honored to introduce this resolution recognizing the long hardship borne by the Tibetan people, a great people, who continue to labor peacefully for freedom in Tibet and maintain a Tibetan cultural identity and democratic community, even in exile. Importantly, this resolution also recognizes the government and the people of India, who generously have hosted the exiled government and people of Tibet in the city of Dharamsala since 1960. The perseverance and charity exhibited by these peoples should be a model for all.

For 50 years the situation in Tibet has deteriorated with too little attention from the outside world. Tibetan culture has been eradicated systematically and relentlessly. Basic freedoms, like freedoms of speech and religion and association and movement, have been repressed. Human rights abuses have been all too common and continue to occur. At this time last year, the Chinese Government was engaged in a fierce crackdown on nonviolent Tibetan protesters that resulted in serious injuries to civilians and an undetermined but significant number of deaths. Even today reports indicate that the Chinese Government has imposed a virtual state of martial law in the Tibetan plateau.

Over the same 50 years and in the face of such adversity, the Dalai Lama has sought to bring wisdom to human affairs and has used his position and leadership to promote compassion and nonviolence in the search for a lasting solution to this issue.

Last year I had the opportunity to travel to India with a congressional delegation led by Speaker PELOSI. We witnessed firsthand the dedicated Tibetans who crossed the rugged Himalayas to escape oppression, including young children. We also had lengthy meetings with the Dalai Lama, whose commitment to peaceful, steady progress is a powerful beacon of hope to all people seeking freedom and equality. It is long past time for this commitment to be reciprocated by the Chinese Government.

The so-called "Seventeen Point Agreement" that was signed by Chinese authorities in 1951 provided that "the central authorities will not alter the existing political system in Tibet. The central authorities also will not alter the established status, functions, and powers of the Dalai Lama. Officials of various ranks shall hold office as usual." A few years later, in March of 1959, just days after the Dalai Lama's flight from Lhasa, the Chinese Government abolished the local Tibetan governing structure. The agreement also explicitly stated that "when the people raise demands for reform, they must be settled through consultation with the leading personnel of Tibet." Clearly the terms of this agreement have not been upheld. Tibetans and the international community are asking that the Chinese Government implement autonomy as promised but never granted genuinely.

In this spirit the resolution before us calls for an immediate cessation of the repression and abuses being imposed upon the people of Tibet. We urge the Chinese Government to engage in a constructive dialogue with the Dalai Lama in a sustained effort to craft a permanent and just solution that protects the rights and dignity of all Tibetans. The distinctive culture of Tibet must be preserved, and we throughout the world should want it preserved, and a vibrant future must be guaranteed. I'm hopeful that the new administration will answer the call of this resolution to use all of the diplomatic, programmatic, and multilateral tools at its disposal to encourage China to adopt such a course.

Last year this body agreed to a resolution introduced by Speaker PELOSI that addressed the rights of the Tibetan people. Today we reiterate that message and recommit ourselves to a sustained effort. Today is a day when this body once again brings a national spotlight to the plight of the Tibetan people, honors those who struggle nonviolently against brutal suppression, and reaffirms our commitment to freedom around the world. It is a day when we recognize, in the words of the Dalai Lama, "the importance of universal responsibility, nonviolence, and inter-religious understanding."

I would like to thank Chairman BERMAN and the House Foreign Affairs Committee for their leadership and action on this issue. I appreciate the support of Ranking Member ROS-LEHTINEN and the hard work of Mr. Halpin of the minority staff as well as Mr. Hans Hogrefe of the Tom Lantos Human Rights Commission. The immense contributions of Todd Stein and the International Campaign for Tibet should also be acknowledged. And I would like to pay special tribute to Speaker PELOSI, who has long been a strong champion of human rights in Tibet and around the world, and to thank her for her help with this resolution.

We call on the leaders of China for justice and freedom.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, at this time I would like to yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. ROHRBACHER), who is the ranking member of the Subcommittee on International Organizations, Human Rights and Oversight.

Mr. ROHRBACHER. I thank the chairman of the Tibet Caucus.

I rise in strong support of this resolution, and I would like to thank both leaders of both parties here, HOWARD BERMAN and, of course, Ranking Member ROS-LEHTINEN for all of the hard work they've done over the years to support the cause of the people of Tibet. But also I would like to point out that NANCY PELOSI, our esteemed Speaker, has over her career put out enormous efforts on this issue, and it's an issue of the heart and the soul. And that's why you see people in both parties who have committed themselves to this noble endeavor of supporting a people in a distant land somewhere on the top of the world on the other side of the Earth, supporting them in their call for recognition of their human rights and for us to recognize that, instead of dealing with tyrants and bullies and gangsters in Beijing, a regime in Beijing that oppresses their own people. They are also the world's worst human rights abuser, and the regime in Beijing is the oppressor of this actually peace-loving people on the other side of the world, the Tibetan people.

One-sixth of the population of Tibet have lost their lives in this five decades of suppression. Thousands of their monasteries have been looted and destroyed. Their national treasure, the gold from their religious artifacts, robbed from them. And, yes, we would tell the Foreign Minister of that dictatorship in Beijing, yes, one-fourth of the territory now claimed by that dictatorship is actually the ancestral home of the Tibetan people. And we know that over these five decades of suppression that the regime in Beijing has tried their best to send other people into Tibet to steal their country. Not only to steal their artifacts and close their monasteries, but to actually rob from them their very country. And, yes, we, as honest people, should recognize this is Tibet when we talk about that area on the map. The Tibetan people, as the other people in China, have suffered because the United States and other free countries have treated Beijing as if it is a moral equivalent to the other countries that we deal with in the world. We must differentiate between the vicious dictators who obliterate their opposition and repress their own people. We must differentiate between them and the democratic forces of the world. Our job as Americans, as set forth by George Washington, whose picture we see now overseeing these proceedings, we were given the task to ensure that the light of democracy will shine bright. It does not shine bright on governments that turn their back on the oppression that we have seen by Beijing, the suppression of the people of Tibet, which we recognize today in these five decades of suppression.

So today let us recognize that the Dalai Lama has been a force for peace and freedom and justice in this world. We wish him all the best. We wish the people of Tibet the best. And we are on their side. This resolution says the American people, of whatever political party is not important, that we are on the side of the people of Tibet, and they should have no doubts about this and the government in Beijing that suppresses them should have no doubts about that as well.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, it's my privilege to now recognize really the leader in this institution on human rights generally and most particularly on the issue of what has happened to the Tibetan people and to His Holiness the Dalai Lama, the Speaker of the House (Ms. PELOSI).

Ms. PELOSI. I thank the gentleman for yielding. I thank him and Congresswoman ILEANA ROS-LEHTINEN for bringing this important legislation to the floor, not only in Congresswoman ROS-LEHTINEN's situation as the ranking member but as a cosponsor of the legislation.

Thank you, Mr. BERMAN, for carrying on a proud tradition of Mr. Lantos as ranking member on Foreign Affairs and then as chairman. He also served, as you know, as Chair of the Human Rights Task Caucus in the Congress of the United States.

It is with great sadness, Mr. Speaker, that I rise in support of this resolution. I so had wished decades ago that we wouldn't be standing here now still pleading the case for the people of Tibet. I thank RUSH HOLT for giving us this opportunity again, with Congresswoman ROS-LEHTINEN, sponsoring this legislation; HOWARD BERMAN, as I mentioned, the chairman; FRANK WOLF, and Mr. MCGOVERN, the co-Chairs of the Human Rights Caucus in the Congress carrying on a strong tradition, JIM MCGOVERN's carrying on that tradition.

But as Mr. ROHRABACHER mentioned, and I see Mr. SMITH there, we have been fighting this fight for a very long time.

My colleagues, going back a generation when the Dalai Lama first came to the Congress with his proposal for autonomy, back in 1987, would we have ever thought then that over 20 years later we would still be making this case? Remember after Tiananmen Square, which will be 20 years in June, and we've talked about human rights in China and Tibet. They said peaceful coexistence, peaceful engagement, this is going to lead to the improvement of human rights in China and Tibet. A generation has gone by, 20 years later, and what do we have? A more repressive situation in Tibet. A situation so bad it moved His Holiness in the statement he released on the occasion of the 50th anniversary to say that life for the Tibetans under the repression of the Chinese regime is "hell on Earth." His Holiness used those terms. A man of nonviolence and gentle nature would be moved to use those words.

So I thank all who are responsible for bringing this resolution to the floor because, as we know, this week marks the 50th, five decades, of waiting for this peaceful evolution to take place, this peaceful evolution that was going to lead to more democratic freedoms. This was against a peaceful uprising against the Chinese Government and then led to the exiling of His Holiness out of Tibet.

With this resolution we remember that day and honor the many brave Tibetans who sacrificed their lives for freedom. Thousands of them did. With this resolution we recognize the hospitality of India for receiving the Tibetans into that great nation. His Holiness and the nation of India share a tradition of nonviolence and compassion, and we salute India for extending that to the people of Tibet as they escaped.

For the last year, Tibet has been under martial law, and the human rights situation has severely worsened, according to the State Department report. There has been no progress in the discussions with the Chinese government. It is long past time, 50 years, for Beijing to respect the human rights of every Tibetan, indeed, of every Chinese. The United States Congress continues to be a bedrock of support for the Tibetan people, and we do so in a strong, bipartisan way.

As I mentioned, in 1987, His Holiness the Dalai Lama, spoke in the Capitol at the Congressional Human Rights Caucus. I was a brand-new Member and invited there by Congressman Lantos. It was there that he outlined his "Middle Way Approach" that calls for autonomy for Tibet.

On Capitol Hill, over 20 years ago, His Holiness declared a statement of autonomy for Tibet. Twenty years later, we were all proud to stand with President Bush as he presented the Congressional Gold Medal to His Holiness the Dalai Lama, in the words of the President, for his "many enduring and outstanding contributions to peace, nonviolence, human rights and religious understanding."

Last year, as Mr. HOLT mentioned, we had a congressional delegation that visited India, where we were able to meet with His Holiness. This visit, either by coincidence or karma, took place only a matter of weeks after a protest that swept across the Tibetan plateau and the crackdown by the Chinese authorities.

So when we were in India, and seeing all of these people who were escaping from Tibet and prisoners who had been tortured in prisons in Tibet telling us their stories, they were stories that were fresh and current and tragic, and we were hopeless and helpless in how we could help them in a very real way.

What we can do is put the moral authority of the Congress of the United States in the form of this resolution, with a broad bipartisan vote, down as a marker to say that we understand the situation there, that we encourage it to be different and, as Mr. ROHRABACHER said, that we are on the side of the Tibetan people. But it shouldn't be a question of taking sides, it should be a question of resolution, resolving a difference, and that's what we hope the Chinese government will do.

Just on a lighter note, when we were there, in addition to visiting the prisoners, and those who had escaped over the mountains only a matter of days before, we visited the children in their schools. They were adorable. They had made flags that were Tibetan flags on one side and American flags on the other. They had flags of the country of India.

The children were so appreciative of the hospitality of India, so grateful to the American people for speaking out on behalf of them, and so proud of their Tibetan heritage. They are beautiful.

The preservation of the culture of Tibet is, of course, a very important part of our enthusiasm for change. But, as I say, on the lighter side, as we were traveling through the streets, our delegation, our bipartisan delegation with Mr. SENSENBRENNER, who is the most senior Republican who came on the trip and was very powerful in his statements there, but as we were traveling through the roads, the roads were lined with people and they were waving flags, American, as I said, American, Tibetan, Indian flags along the way.

One sign caught my eye. It said "Thank you for everything that you have done for us—so far." So far. So, in any event, more is expected. More will come.

I told you about His Holiness' speech and about his statement that he put out, and he called the situation there, the Tibetans who are in the depths of suffering and hardship, that they are literally experiencing hell on Earth.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to submit His Holiness' statement for the RECORD.

THE STATEMENT OF HIS HOLINESS THE DALAI LAMA ON THE FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF THE TIBETAN NATIONAL UPRISING DAY

(Embargoed until 10th March, 9 a.m.)

Today is the fiftieth anniversary of the Tibetan people's peaceful uprising against Communist China's repression in Tibet. Since last March, widespread peaceful protests have erupted across the whole of Tibet. Most of the participants were youths born and brought up after 1959, who have not seen or experienced a free Tibet. However, the fact that they were driven by a firm conviction to serve the cause of Tibet that has continued from generation to generation is indeed a matter of pride. It will serve as a source of inspiration for those in the international community who take keen interest in the issue of Tibet. We pay tribute and offer our prayers for all those who died, were tortured and suffered tremendous hardships during the crisis last year, as well as those who have suffered and died for the cause of Tibet since our struggle began.

Around 1949, Communist forces began to enter north-eastern and eastern Tibet (Kham and Amdo) and by 1950, more than 5000 Tibetan soldiers had been killed. Taking the prevailing situation into account, the Chinese government chose a policy of peaceful liberation, which in 1951, led to the signing of the 17-Point Agreement and its annexure. Since then, Tibet has come under the control of the People's Republic of China. However, the Agreement clearly mentions that Tibet's distinct religion, culture and traditional values would be protected.

Between 1954 and 1955, I met with most of the senior Chinese leaders in the Communist Party, government and military, led by Chairman Mao Zedong, in Beijing. When we discussed ways of achieving the social and economic development of Tibet, as well as maintaining Tibet's religious and cultural heritage, Mao Zedong and all the other leaders agreed to establish a preparatory committee to pave the way for the implementation of the autonomous region, as stipulated in the Agreement, rather than establishing a military administrative commission. From about 1956 onwards, however, the situation took a turn for the worse with the imposition of ultra-leftist policies in Tibet. Consequently, the assurances given by higher authorities were not implemented on the ground. The forceful implementation of the so-called "democratic reforms" in the Kham and Amdo regions of Tibet, which did not accord with prevailing conditions, resulted in immense chaos and destruction. In Central Tibet, Chinese officials forcibly and deliberately violated the terms of the 17-Point Agreement, and their heavy-handed tactics increased day by day. These desperate developments left the Tibetan people no alternative but to launch a peaceful uprising on 10 March 1959. The Chinese authorities responded with unprecedented force that led to the killing of tens of thousands of Tibetans in the following months. Thousands were arrested and imprisoned. Consequently, nearly a hundred thousand Tibetans fled into exile in India, Nepal and Bhutan. During the escape and the months that followed they faced unimaginable hardship, which is still fresh in Tibetan memory. At that time, I too, accompanied by a small party of Tibetan government officials including some Kalons (Cabinet Ministers), escaped into exile in India.

Having occupied Tibet, the Chinese Communist government carried out a series of repressive and violent campaigns that have included "democratic reforms", class struggle, collectivisation, the Cultural Revolution, the imposition of martial law, and more recently the patriotic re-education and the strike hard campaigns. These thrust Tibetans into such depths of suffering and hardship that they literally experienced hell on earth. The immediate result of these campaigns was the deaths of hundreds and thousands of Tibetans. The lineage of the Buddha Dharma was severed. Thousands of religious and cultural centres such as monasteries, nunneries and temples were razed to the ground. Historical buildings and monuments were demolished. Natural resources have been indiscriminately exploited. Today, Tibet's fragile environment has been polluted, massive deforestation has been carried out and wildlife, such as wild yaks and Tibetan antelopes, are being driven to extinction.

These 50 years have brought untold suffering and destruction to the land and people of Tibet. Even today, Tibetans in Tibet live in constant fear and the Chinese authorities remain constantly suspicious of them. Today, the religion, culture, language and identity, which successive generations of Tibetans have considered more precious than their lives, are nearing extinction; in short, the Tibetan people are regarded like criminals deserving to be put to death. The Tibetan people's tragedy was set out in the late Panchen Rinpoche's 70,000-character petition to the Chinese government in 1962. He raised it again in his speech in Shigatse in 1989 shortly before he died, when he said that what we have lost under Chinese communist rule far outweighs what we have gained. Many concerned and unbiased Tibetans have also spoken out about the hardships of the Tibetan people. Even Hu Yaobang, the Communist Party Secretary, when he arrived in Lhasa in 1980, clearly acknowledged these mistakes and asked the Tibetans for their forgiveness. Many infrastructural developments such as roads, airports, railways, and so forth, which seem to have brought progress to Tibetan areas, were really done with the political objective of sinicising Tibet at the huge cost of devastating the Tibetan environment and way of life.

As for the Tibetan refugees, although we initially faced many problems such as great differences of climate and language and difficulties earning our livelihood, we have been successful in re-establishing ourselves in exile. Due to the great generosity of our host countries, especially India, Tibetans have been able to live in freedom without fear. We have been able to earn a livelihood and uphold our religion and culture. We have been able to provide our children with both traditional and modern education, as well as engaging in efforts to resolve the Tibet issue. There have been other positive results too. Greater understanding of Tibetan Buddhism with its emphasis on compassion has made a positive contribution in many parts of the world.

Immediately after our arrival in exile I began to work on the promotion of democracy in the Tibetan community with the election of the Tibetan Parliament-in-Exile in 1960. Since then, we have taken gradual steps on the path to democracy and today our exile administration has evolved into a fully functioning democracy with a written charter of its own and a legislative body. This is indeed something we can all be proud of.

Since 2001, we have instituted a system by which the political leadership of Tibetan exiles is directly elected through procedures similar to those in other democratic systems. Currently, the directly-elected Kalon Tripa's (Cabinet Chairperson) second term is underway. Consequently, my daily administrative responsibilities have reduced and today I am in a state of semi-retirement. However, to work for the just cause of Tibet is the responsibility of every Tibetan, and as long as I live I will uphold this responsibility.

As a human being, my main commitment is in the promotion of human values; this is what I consider the key factor for a happy life at the individual, family and community level. As a religious practitioner, my second commitment is the promotion of inter-religious harmony. My third commitment is of course due to my being a Tibetan with the name of "Dalai Lama", but more importantly it is due to the trust that Tibetans both inside and outside Tibet have placed in me. These are the three important commitments, which I always keep in mind.

In addition to looking after the well being of the exiled Tibetan community, which they have done quite well, the principal task of the Central Tibetan Administration has been to work towards the resolution of the issue of Tibet. Having laid out the mutually beneficial Middle-Way policy in 1974, we were ready to respond to Deng Xiaoping when he proposed talks in 1979. Many talks were conducted and fact-finding delegations dispatched. These however, did not bear any concrete results and formal contacts eventually broke off in 1993.

Subsequently, in 1996-97, we conducted an opinion poll of the Tibetans in exile, and collected suggestions from Tibet wherever possible, on a proposed referendum, by which the Tibetan people were to determine the future course of our freedom struggle to their full satisfaction. Based on the outcome of the poll and the suggestions from Tibet, we decided to continue the policy of the Middle-Way.

Since the re-establishment of contacts in 2002, we have followed a policy of one official channel and one agenda and have held eight rounds of talks with the Chinese authorities. As a consequence, we presented a Memorandum on Genuine Autonomy for the Tibetan People, explaining how the conditions for national regional autonomy as set forth in the Chinese constitution would be met by the full implementation of its laws on autonomy. The Chinese insistence that we accept Tibet as having been a part of China since ancient times is not only inaccurate, but also unreasonable. We cannot change the past no matter whether it was good or bad. Distorting history for political purposes is incorrect.

We need to look to the future and work for our mutual benefit. We Tibetans are looking for a legitimate and meaningful autonomy, an arrangement that would enable Tibetans to live within the framework of the People's Republic of China. Fulfilling the aspirations of the Tibetan people will enable China to achieve stability and unity. From our side, we are not making any demands based on history. Looking back at history, there is no country in the world today, including China, whose territorial status has remained forever unchanged, nor can it remain unchanged.

Our aspiration that all Tibetans be brought under a single autonomous administration is in keeping with the very objective of the principle of national regional autonomy. It also fulfills the fundamental requirements of the Tibetan and Chinese peoples. The Chinese constitution and other related laws and regulations do not pose any obstacle to this and many leaders of the Chinese Central Government have accepted this genuine aspiration. When signing the 17-Point Agreement, Premier Zhou Enlai acknowledged that this was a reasonable demand, but not the right time to implement it. In 1956, when establishing the Preparatory Committee for the "Tibet Autonomous Region", Vice-Premier Chen Yi pointing at a map said, if Lhasa could be made the capital of the Tibet Autonomous Region, which included the Tibetan areas within the other provinces, it would contribute to the development of Tibet and friendship between the Tibetan and Chinese nationalities, a view shared by the Panchen Rinpoche and many Tibetan cadres and scholars. If Chinese leaders had any objections to our proposals, they could have provided reasons for them and suggested alternatives for our consideration, but they did not. I am disappointed that the Chinese authorities have not responded appropriately to our sincere efforts to implement the principle of meaningful national regional autonomy for all Tibetans, as set forth in the constitution of the People's Republic of China.

Quite apart from the current process of Sino-Tibetan dialogue having achieved no concrete results, there has been a brutal crackdown on the Tibetan protests that have shaken the whole of Tibet since March last year. Therefore, in order to solicit public opinion as to what future course of action we should take, the Special Meeting of Tibetan exiles was convened in November 2008. Efforts were made to collect suggestions, as far as possible, from the Tibetans in Tibet as well. The outcome of this whole process was that a majority of Tibetans strongly supported the continuation of the Middle-Way policy. Therefore, we are now pursuing this policy with greater confidence and will continue our efforts towards achieving a meaningful national regional autonomy for all Tibetans.

From time immemorial, the Tibetan and Chinese peoples have been neighbours. In future too, we will have to live together. Therefore, it is most important for us to co-exist in friendship with each other.

During the Kuomintang period, and particularly since the occupation of Tibet, the Communist Chinese have been publishing distorted propaganda about Tibet and its people. Consequently, there are, among the Chinese populace, very few people who have a true understanding about Tibet. It is, in fact, very difficult for them to find the truth. There are also ultra-leftist Chinese leaders who have, since last March, been undertaking a huge propaganda effort with the intention of setting the Tibetan and Chinese peoples apart and creating animosity between them. Sadly, as a result, a negative impression of Tibetans has arisen in the minds of some of our Chinese brothers and sisters. Therefore, as I have repeatedly appealed before, I would like once again to urge out Chinese brothers and sisters not to be swayed by such propaganda, but, instead, to try to discover the facts about Tibet impartially, so as to prevent divisions among us. Tibetans should also continue to work for friendship with the Chinese people.

Looking back on 50 years in exile, we have witnessed many ups and downs. However, the fact that the Tibet issue is alive and the international community is taking growing interest in it is indeed an achievement. Seen from this perspective, I have no doubt that the justice of Tibet's cause will prevail, if we continue to tread the path of truth and non-violence.

As we commemorate 50 years in exile, it is most important that we express our deep gratitude to the governments and peoples of the various host countries in which we live. Not only do we abide by the laws of these host countries, but we also conduct ourselves in a way that we become an asset to these countries. Similarly, in our efforts to realise the cause of Tibet and uphold its religion and culture, we should craft our future vision and strategy by learning from our past experience.

I always say that we should hope for the best, and prepare for the worst. Whether we look at it from the global perspective or in the context of events in China, there are reasons for us to hope for a quick resolution of the issue of Tibet. However, we must also prepare ourselves well in case the Tibetan struggle goes on for a long time. For this, we must focus primarily on the education of our children and the nurturing of professionals in various fields. We should also raise awareness about the environment and health, and improve understanding and practice of non-violent methods among the general Tibetan population.

I would like to take this opportunity to express my heartfelt gratitude to the leaders and people of India, as well as its Central and State Governments, who despite whatever problems and obstacles they face, have provided invaluable support and assistance over the past 50 years to Tibetans in exile. Their kindness and generosity are immeasurable. I would also like to express my gratitude to the leaders, governments and people of the international community, as well as the various Tibet Support Groups, for their unstinting support.

May all sentient beings live in peace and happiness.

THE DALAI LAMA,
10 March 2009.

I would also like to quote from the statement put out by the State Department last night. In part it says "We urge China to reconsider its policies in Tibet that have created tensions due to their harmful impact on Tibetan religion, culture, and livelihoods. We believe that substantive dialogue with the Dalai Lama's representatives, consistent with the Dalai Lama's commitment to disclaiming any intention to seek sovereignty or independence for Tibet, can lead to progress in bringing about solutions and can help achieve true and lasting stability in Tibet."

I am very pleased with the statement from the State Department.

Mr. Speaker, the situation in Tibet challenges the conscience of the world. If freedom-loving people around the world do not speak out for human rights in China and Tibet, then we lose moral authority to talk about it in any other place in the world.

On the 15th anniversary of the Dalai Lama being forced into exile, we must heed his guidance and his transcendent message of peace, and we must never forget the people of Tibet in their ongoing struggle.

That is why I urge my colleagues to support this resolution and thank my colleagues for giving us this opportunity to do so today.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, I am proud to yield 4 minutes to my good friend from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH), the ranking member on the Subcommittee on Africa and Global Health.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. I thank the distinguished gentlelady for yielding and thank her for her leadership.

I would especially like to thank Tom Lantos, our revered and great and honorable former chairman of the committee who did pioneering work on Tibet and really helped bring the Dalai Lama here in the first place and made that very important connection many, many years ago.

Mr. Speaker, 50 years ago today the Tibetan people rose up against the tyranny that the Chinese communist party was imposing on it. The outnumbered Tibetans fought stubbornly but did not succeed in overthrowing the tyranny. Sadly, the Chinese forces killed over 86,000 Tibetans, and the Dalai Lama had to leave Tibet to lead a government in exile.

But I think the Tibetans succeeded in doing something else 50 years ago. They put down a spiritual marker. They decided that, materially free or not, persecuted or not, the Tibetan people were going to remain Tibetan and were not going to forsake their religious heritage for the mess of ideological and atheistic nonsense the communists offered them.

They would preserve their spiritual freedom, even in the Laogai. And since 1959 every generation of Tibetans have taken up that decision and reaffirmed it. We cannot speak about 1959 without remembering 2008, when the Chinese government brutally crushed Tibetans' largely peaceful marking of the 1959 uprising.

Last year Lodi Gyari, His Holiness' Special Envoy, told me and others on the Congressional Human Rights Caucus that Tibet had "become, particularly, in the last few weeks, in every sense an occupied nation, brutally occupied by Armed Forces." This week, as our distinguished Speaker of the House just mentioned, the Dalai Lama has described the situation in Tibet as hell on Earth.

Shockingly and almost laughingly, the Chinese government shot back today and said Tibet is paradise on Earth. Well, it was, Mr. Speaker. Now it's paradise lost.

Just as it did in 1959, last year the Chinese government ordered its soldiers and police to shoot. The death toll is well over 100. We don't even have any idea how many were wounded, how many were left wounded or dying in attics and cellars because they knew if they went to a hospital they would simply disappear into the Chinese Laogai.

As in 1959, last year the Chinese government subjected Tibetans to mass arrests. They searched whole sections of cities house by house. Chinese officials admit to over 4,000 arrests. Even today, thousands of monks are still held under house arrest or lockdown.

Mr. Speaker, in 1995 I chaired a congressional hearing in which we heard from six survivors of the Laogai. One of them was Palden Gyatso, a Tibetan monk who spent 24 years in prison. When we invited him to come and speak, he brought with him some of the instruments of torture that are routinely employed and used in a horrific manner against men and women in Chinese concentration camps.

He told us that many people die of starvation. But when he brought those instruments, he couldn't even bring them past our Capitol Police, they stopped him. I had to go down to the entrance and escort him through.

At the hearing, he held up those electric batons that are used in the mouth and elsewhere in order to provide electric shocks. And while he was giving his testimony, he broke down.

He held it up and said this is what went into my mouth, as a Buddhist monk, and into the mouths of other people, to shock and to deface. He has trouble swallowing to this day.

He told us about self-tightening handcuffs and held up his wrists and showed us the scars on his body. Not just on his wrists, but elsewhere as well. He told us how the guards pierce people with bayonets, and he also told us that every bit of this was routine and almost mundane.

Yet in the face of this, he and so many others like him persevered, and the Tibetan people at large continue on, keeping faith, including their admirable principle of nonviolence.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. ROSS). The time of the gentleman has expired.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. I would like to yield an additional minute to the gentleman.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. I appreciate that.

They are determined to endure, Mr. Speaker, and to overcome hate with kindness and benevolence and charity.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 3 minutes to the gentlelady from Illinois (Ms. SCHAKOWSKY).

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. I thank you, Mr. Chairman, for yielding to me.

Mr. Speaker, as a member of the Human Rights Commission, I am proud to rise today in support of this resolution on behalf of the people of Tibet.

I also want to take this opportunity, because I just returned from the White House, where the President of the United States created a White House Council on Women and Girls and acknowledged the recent March 8 passage of International Women's Day.

And while I was there, I am very grateful to you, Mr. Chairman and to the House of Representatives, for passing the resolution in support of International Women's Day and would like to take this opportunity to speak to it for just a couple of minutes.

I want to thank Representative MARY FALLIN, the lead Republican cosponsor and the Republican co-chair of the Women's Caucus, for her tireless support and work to bring this resolution to the floor. It's been my pleasure to work with her on this bill, and I am sure it's the first of many that we will work together through the caucus, where I am the Democratic co-chair, to advance the goals of women.

Also, I would like to acknowledge the caucus vice-Chairs, Representative GWEN MOORE, Representative KAY GRANGER, and I am honored to have this resolution be the first of the must-pass legislative agenda items to make it to the House floor with such remarkable bipartisan support.

Each year countries around the world mark March 8 as International Women's Day, as a day to recognize the contributions and impact that women have made to our world's history, to recognize those women who have worked together for gender equality and to acknowledge the work that is yet to be done. Over the years, women have made significant strides.

All over the world and throughout history we have, they have consistently contributed to their economies, participated in their governments and improved the quality of life of their families and of their nations.

In 2007 Congresswoman NANCY PELOSI was elected the first woman Speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives. In 2006 I attended the inauguration of Michelle Bachelet, the first woman President of Chile, and visited the Liberian President, Ellen Johnson-Sirleaf, the first woman president in Africa's history.

In the 111th Congress, we have an all-time high of 74 women in Congress, a 35 percent increase from just 8 years ago. But women still only make up about 16 percent of the House of Representatives.

In the U.S., we have made significant strides in education. Women now graduate from high school at higher rates and earn bachelor's or higher degrees at greater rates than men.

While American women earn more high school and bachelor's degrees than men, two-thirds of the 876 million illiterate individuals in the world are women. Two-thirds of the 125 million school-age children not attending school worldwide are girls. Girls are less likely to complete school than boys elsewhere around the globe.

Women are making progress in business and make up 12 percent of the current CEOs of the Fortune 500 companies, but, still, a long way to go.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentlewoman has expired.

Mr. BERMAN. I would be pleased to yield an additional minute to the gentlelady.

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. Globally, women work two-thirds of the world's working hours and produce half of the world's food, and still we earn only 1 percent of the world's income and own less than 1 percent of the world's property.

Of the 300 million people living in poverty, 70 percent are girls and women. Millions of women and girls are trafficked, physically abused, sexually abused, or face the threat of violence every day.

□ 1445

Although Congress passed the PROTECT Act to prevent trafficking in Iraq, Darfur, Afghanistan and many other places around the world, we still see that women and girls tend to be the targets of extreme violence, brutality, and intimidation.

So, Mr. Speaker, it's important that Congress recognize the importance of March 8. I am so glad that we passed this resolution. I am grateful to the Congress for recognizing International Women's Day, which we just celebrated on March 8.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, I'd like to yield 3 minutes to a member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs—and they are all gentle people in South Carolina—the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. INGLIS.)

Mr. INGLIS. I thank the distinguished ranking member for that glowing recommendation of my great State. We are here today to recognize the plight of the Tibetan people. Several speakers have already mentioned incredible stories of the indomitable human spirit.

One story was told to me earlier today by a staff member who was visiting in China, and tells a story of going to a Tibetan temple where, during the Cultural Revolution, the people of that town took their food rations and the grain that would have been food for them and put it in a temple in order to hide a statue of a Buddha so as to protect it from desecration by the Chinese Communists. Many of those townspeople starved to death as a result of giving up those food rations.

That is a story of the indomitable power of the human conscience and the tragedy that comes when nations try to defy that basic human right. So we are here today to celebrate the spirit of the Tibetan people and to call on the Communist Chinese to give greater political rights and economic opportunities and respect the dignity of the Tibetan people.

As we consider this resolution right now, the Chinese government has forbidden foreign journalists and tourists from entering Tibetan areas under their control. A massive crackdown is underway that involves beefed-up paramilitary forces deployed throughout the area and a deliberate disruption of normal cell phone service to prevent reports from leaking out.

For all practical purposes, as we have heard here earlier today, Tibet is under an unofficial state of martial law, 50 years after the Dalai Lama fled into exile. From March 2008 to June 2008, Chinese officials disclosed that authorities detained more than 4,400 Tibetans for allegedly rioting, the vast majority of whom are known to have engaged in peaceful protests.

A Tibetan NGO reported that a total of more than 65,000 Tibetans have been detained in 2008, and over a thousand of whose whereabouts and well-being remains unknown, many of whom are monks and nuns.

According to an August 21 report from the Tibetan government-in-exile, at least 218 Tibetans died between March and June of 2008 as a result of the Chinese police using lethal force against protesters or from severe abuse, including torture while in detention.

Mr. Speaker, we in this Congress should rise in unanimous support of the people of Tibet and present a unified force of the Congress and the Obama administration to unambiguously condemn the Chinese government's ongoing crackdown in Tibet. We must also convey a clear and consistent message to Beijing that says this: Progress in talks with the Dalai Lama and bringing meaningful autonomy and religious freedom to Tibet is an essential benchmark that China must meet in order to advance relations with the United States.

I thank the gentlelady for yielding.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 3 minutes to the chairman of the Human Rights Commission, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MCGOVERN).

Mr. MCGOVERN. Thank you. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of this important resolution, and I want to thank my friend, Congressman RUSH HOLT, Speaker NANCY PELOSI, and the chairman and ranking member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee for their leadership in the long struggle for freedom, dignity, and human rights in Tibet.

Mr. Speaker, for six decades the history of Tibet has been marked by violence. Even before 1949, the People's Liberation Army of China entered the eastern areas of Tibet during the Long March. In 1959, they finally occupied the capital of Lhasa.

Fifty years ago, on March 10, the Tibetan people rose up in Lhasa against Chinese rule. The backlash was furious and brutal. On March 17, the Dalai Lama fled Lhasa for his own safety, joined by some 80,000 Tibetans, for life in exile. Tens of thousands who remained were killed or imprisoned.

Thanks to the thriving exile communities in India, Europe, and the United States, Tibetan cultural identity, language, and religion have survived. They have focused world attention on the Tibetan struggle. But each and every year, the situation inside Tibet grows worse, with more repression, more arrests, more displacement, more deliberate destruction of the Tibetan language, culture, and religion.

One year ago, new protests rose up in Tibet. They were the result of greater controls over religious and cultural activity, development that mainly benefited Chinese migrants, and forced resettlement of farmers and nomads. Thousands and thousands were arrested. To date, there has been no full accounting by Chinese authorities of those arrested, detained, tried, sentenced, or released, and no access to those detained by the International Committee of the Red Cross or other international observers, and all the time the Tibetan people daily become more of a minority in their own land.

Mr. Speaker, as the new cochair of the Tom Lantos Human Rights Commission, it is humbling to follow in the footsteps of Thomas Lantos. The Congressional Human Rights Caucus, which he founded, was the very first to give the Dalai Lama a voice on Capitol Hill in 1987.

On this 50th anniversary, let's be very, very clear that the American people in this House stand with His Holiness. We will not rest until meaningful and full autonomy for the Tibetan people is achieved—and the Dalai Lama and his people can fulfill their dream of returning home to Tibet.

I thank the chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee for generously giving me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of this important resolution, which recognizes the plight of the Tibetan people on the 50th Anniversary of His Holiness the Dalai Lama's exile and calls for a sustained multilateral effort toward a peaceful solution to the Tibet issue. I thank my friend RUSH HOLT, and the distinguished Ranking Member of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, as well as the Chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, for their leadership on human rights and for bringing this resolution expeditiously to the floor.

Mr. Speaker, last Friday my friend and distinguished colleague, FRANK WOLF and I were formally reappointed Co-Chairs of the Tom Lantos Human Rights Commission, the successor body of the Congressional Human Rights Caucus, which I had the honor to co-chair with FRANK WOLF after our former colleague Tom Lantos passed away.

I mention this because of the historic significance of the Congressional Human Rights Caucus in getting the voice of the Tibetan people heard in the United States.

In 1987, it was Congressman Tom Lantos who had invited His Holiness the Dalai Lama to attend a meeting of the Congressional Human Rights Caucus as the first official government entity in the United States, despite stiff opposition from many quarters including the U.S. Administration to do so. Many were fearful what such an invitation would do to our bilateral relations with the People's Republic of China, and the PRC used every conceivable tool to prevent this historic meeting from happening.

Those voices of those critics in the United States soon fell quiet after the meeting took place, as the moral authority of his Holiness and his persistently peaceful way to fight for meaningful autonomy of the Tibetan people attracted more and more support and with the American people and in Congress.

Twenty years later, it was this body that awarded His Holiness the Congressional Gold Medal in recognition of his life-long dedication to the causes of peace and non-violent resolution to the Tibet issue.

Mr. Speaker, the history of Tibet has long been marked by violence. Even before 1949, the People's Liberation Army of China entered the eastern areas of the traditional Tibetan territory on The Long March. In 1951, they finally occupied the Tibetan capital of Lhasa.

On this day fifty years ago, the Tibetan people rose up in Lhasa against Chinese rule, and the backlash was furious and brutal. As a consequence, His Holiness the Dalai Lama fled Lhasa on March 17, 1959, for his own safety. He was joined by some 80,000 Tibetans in exile. Tens of thousands of Tibetans who remained were either killed or imprisoned.

The human rights situation became so dire that in 1959, 1961 and 1965 (before China became a member of the United Nations), the UN General Assembly passed resolutions condemning the human rights violations in Tibet and affirming Tibetans' right to self-determination.

Supported by thriving exile communities in India, the United States, Europe, Tibetan cultural identity, language and religion has survived and the world is paying attention to the Tibetan struggle.

In 2002 Congress passed the Tibetan Policy Act, the cornerstone of U.S. policy toward Tibet. The legislation codified the position of Special Coordinator for Tibetan Issues in our State Department, to ensure that U.S. policy promotes a dialogue between the Chinese government and the representatives of the Dalai Lama, and this Act and its policies must remain the cornerstone of our policy regarding Tibet also under this Administration.

The policy of the United States Government has to be to continue promoting substantive dialogue between the Government of the People's Republic of China and the Dalai Lama or his representatives to resolve peacefully the dispute and to allow for the return of the Dalai Lama.

However, the United States cannot stand as a mere neutral facilitator in this dialogue, when the Chinese government time and time again uses these proceedings to hold out hope, only to drag out negotiations with His Holiness without ever making any progress or without ever achieving any concrete results. All this, while the Tibetan people become a minority in their own territory because of government-controlled migration, and the Tibetan culture is further eroded.

We cannot stand by neutrally, when the Chinese government kidnaps a six-year-old child, Gedhun Choekyi Nyima, whom His Holiness has recognized as Panchen Lama, and allow the Chinese government to replace him with a more convenient Panchen Lama of their own choice.

On this 50th anniversary, let's be very clear that the American people and this Congress will always stand unwaveringly with His Holiness in this peaceful endeavors, and will not rest until meaningful and full autonomy for the Tibetan people is achieved, and His Holiness can fulfill his dream of returning to Tibet.

Mr. Speaker, Tom Lantos' voice has fallen silent, but we cannot let our voices to fall silent too. We always need to speak out for the Tibetan people.

[From the Boston Globe, Mar. 10, 2009]

SAD ANNIVERSARIES IN TIBET

The authorities in Beijing are nervous today, fearful that remembrance of things past will incite new disorder. They have good reason: On this date two tragic anniversaries are commemorated. First, of the massacres

Chinese troops perpetrated 50 years ago, killing 86,000 Tibetans, to crush a Tibetan revolt against harsh Chinese rule. And March 10 is also the one-year anniversary of China's violent crackdown on Tibetans protesting for cultural and religious freedom.

China's attempts to expunge Tibet's separate identity cast doubt on Beijing's claim to be a rising power with benign intentions. There is a whiff of colonialism in China's treatment of Tibet and Tibetans.

Chinese policymakers are not content to deny Tibet's distinct identity. They demean the ethical and spiritual values of Tibetan Buddhism, and they refuse to grant Tibetans even the limited autonomy proposed by their leader-in-exile, the Dalai Lama. The core objective of Beijing's Tibet policy is to submerge the Tibetan population under waves of Han Chinese migrants who receive special incentives to settle in Tibetan areas.

Given China's efforts toward a demographic smothering of Tibetans in their homeland, it is no wonder that Chinese officials feel compelled to lie, brazenly, about the temperate program for reconciliation proposed by the Dalai Lama. In talks last fall with Chinese representatives, the Dalai Lama's envoys presented 11 proposals for limited Tibetan autonomy. The Chinese refused to discuss a single one of the 11 ideas, pretending that all 11 were thinly disguised demands for independence.

Beijing takes this rigid position—repeating the transparent falsehood that the Dalai Lama really wants political independence for Tibet—because Chinese policy is to make no concessions to the Tibetan government-in-exile and instead to wait for the spiritual leader of Tibetan Buddhists to die. The flawed premise of this policy is that Tibetan resistance to Chinese dominance will evaporate after the Dalai Lama is gone. But as the clashes last March in Tibetan regions demonstrated, younger Tibetans are likely to be less patient, and less devoted to nonviolence, than the Dalai Lama and his government-in-exile in Dharamsala, India.

China's rulers are fortunate to have the chance to come to terms with the Dalai Lama on Tibetan autonomy within China. Few other governments confronting oppressed ethnic or religious groups have been so lucky.

President Obama should appoint a special envoy for Tibet, someone who can help China's leaders see that it is in their own interest to give Tibetans the cultural and religious autonomy the Dalai Lama has proposed.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. To wrap up our side of the aisle on this important resolution, I yield such time as he may consume to the co-Chair of the Tom Lantos Congressional Human Rights Commission, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. WOLF).

Mr. WOLF. I want to thank the ranking member and also the chairman for their leadership on this issue, and also thank Speaker PELOSI for her comments here today and also for the comments that she made yesterday.

In August of 1997, I traveled to Tibet, making it known to no one that I was a Member of Congress. I spoke to Buddhist monks and nuns on the street and in monasteries who have been brutally tortured in the infamous Drapchi prison. We drove by the Drapchi prison and they told us of the torture of pulling out fingernails and everything else, just simply for professing allegiance to the Dalai Lama.

The Chinese government sends Tibetan children to China for education to learn Chinese ways. The Chinese government forbids faithful Buddhists from displaying pictures of the Dalai Lama. There was one person in a Buddhist monastery who showed me the picture and then put it away quickly.

What the Chinese government is doing to Tibet is cultural genocide—and I hope the foreign minister, who's in town today, hears it. It is cultural genocide—systematically destroying the fabric of the Tibetan society.

Last March, the Tibetan people took to the streets to protest the iron-fisted rule of the Chinese government over Tibet; a harsh crackdown, violent repression, and a year later, 1,200 Tibetans remain unaccounted for. Where are they? Let's ask the foreign minister when he goes to the State Department, Where are they?

For over a decade, the United States has asked China for a consulate in Lhasa, the capital of Tibet, and China has refused. Yet we continue to allow the Chinese government to build new consulates across the United States. We should not allow China to build any new consulates in the United States until China allows the U.S. to build a consulate in Lhasa, period, end of story.

It is with a heavy heart that we commemorate the Dalai Lama's flight to Dharmasala. I believe one day we will stand here—and, if this debate had taken place before, Tom Lantos would be here, whereby people would give Tom Lantos the credit for leading the effort whereby Tibet will be, basically—not basically, but Tibet will be free.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H. Res. 226, recognizing the Tibetan People on the anniversary of the Dalai Lama's exile. As a member of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs I am pleased to join my colleague RUSH HOLT in his sponsorship of this important resolution. As we move to engage the government in Beijing I would only hope that the United States' foreign policy once again becomes a policy of peace and goodwill and not a harbinger to international hostilities.

It is no accident that the first foreign trip of our new Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, was to Asia. China is integral to the re-establishment of American foreign policy in Asia. As we engage the Chinese it is important that we address human rights issues as well.

The Dalai Lama has emerged on the international scene as a force for human rights around the world. He has exhibited a grace and sense of compassion throughout the strife that has visited his homeland.

For more than 2,000 years Tibet maintained a sovereign national identity distinct from the national identity of China. In 1949, however, Chinese troops invaded and occupied Tibet and have remained ever since.

According to the State Department and numerous international human rights organizations, the Chinese government continues to commit widespread and well-documented human rights abuses in both China and Tibet. China also has yet to demonstrate its willingness to abide by internationally accepted norms of freedom of belief, expression, and association by repealing or amending laws and decrees that restrict those freedoms. We urge the Chinese government to seek conciliation with its many different groups, as opposed to employing further government restrictions.

In addition, while China is a signatory to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the United Nations Convention Relating to Refugees, and the United Nations Convention Against Torture and Other Forms of Cruel, Inhuman, or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, in practice, the Chinese government has often not followed the treaties.

March 10th marks the 50th anniversary of an uprising against Chinese rule by the Tibetan people—an uprising that forced the 14th Dalai Lama into exile in India. On the anniversary last year, Tibetan Buddhist monks and nuns in and around Lhasa were blocked by Chinese authorities from staging demonstrations and were met with force by the Chinese authorities. Protests then spread inside the Tibet Autonomous Region and other Tibetan areas of China.

Over the years, talks between envoys of the Dalai Lama and representatives of the Chinese government have failed to achieve any concrete and substantive results.

This resolution recognizes the Tibetan people for their perseverance and endurance in face of hardship and adversity in Tibet and for creating a vibrant and democratic community in exile that sustains the Tibetan identity.

The measure recognizes the government and people of India for their generosity toward the Tibetan refugee population for the last 50 years. It calls upon the Chinese government to respond to the Dalai Lama's initiatives to find a lasting solution to the Tibetan issue, cease its repression of the Tibetan people, and to lift immediately the policies imposed on Tibetans, including patriotic education campaigns, detention and abuses of those freely expressing political views or relaying news about local conditions, and limitations on travel and communications.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, the resolution calls upon the administration to recommit to a sustained effort consistent with the Tibetan Policy Act of 2002, that employs diplomatic, programmatic, and multilateral resources to press the Chinese government to respect the Tibetans' identity and the human rights of the Tibetan people. Mr. Speaker, we must continue to engage the government in Beijing at all levels and Tibet must be at the top of the list. Again, I wish to thank my colleagues for their work on this matter.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. Speaker, one year ago, a wave of protests began in Lhasa and swept across the Tibetan Plateau. In the time since, the Chinese government has pursued policies that demonstrate a failure to live up to its commitments to its ethnic minority citizens—commitments that are well-documented and unmistakable. Chinese law includes protections for the distinctive culture, language and identity of ethnic minority citizens. China's Regional Ethnic Autonomy Law, for example, guarantees ethnic minorities the "right to administer their internal affairs." Specifically, the term "regional ethnic autonomy," as the law itself defines it, "reflects the state's full respect for ethnic minorities' right to administer their internal affairs." Over the past year, the actions of the Chinese government have reflected neither "the state's full respect" of ethnic minority rights, nor of human rights standards recognized in both Chinese and international law.

On January 19, 2009, the People's Congress of the Tibet Autonomous Region established a new holiday called "Serfs' Emancipation Day." As the Congressional-Executive Commission on China has reported, this new holiday commemorates the March 28, 1959, Chinese government decree that dissolved the Dalai Lama's Lhasa-based Tibetan government. The Chairman of the Standing Committee of the Tibet Autonomous Region People's Congress said the new holiday would "strengthen Tibetans' patriotism." He also said that officials had met to "ensure that all people mark the occasion with festivities." Chinese officials have required Tibetans to celebrate the end of the Dalai Lama's government, and, by implication, his departure from Tibet fifty years ago. This is how the Chinese government demonstrates its commitment to "the state's full respect for ethnic minorities' right to administer their internal affairs."
